St. Catherine St. and Green Ave., Westmount, brought out the same point even more strongly, saying: "I have found recently that among our customers quality is of more importance than price even among the most thrifty buyers. They seem to feel that it is better to pay more for quality than to buy the cheaper line and be dissatisfied and after all, that is real economy. No grocer is doing justice to himself or his business who does not put real salesmanship into his business. There are two things that make salesmanship easy and they are first quality, and second general appearance.

Containers Mean Much

"In selling a new line the appearance of the container, in the case of package goods and canned goods, counts for more perhaps than anything. The wrapper on a can of corn or peas either helps its sale or hinders it. It is far easier to sell a can of corn with an artistic label than one with some cheap design, poor printing and sloppily stuck on. It is really surprising how much a little thing like that counts, especially when introducing a new line. A rusty dirty tin may spoil a sale. Of course the repeat order depends upon the quality of goods inside the container. There is a brand of macaroni in our store which has won much favor with our customers. It is packed in a very attractive white box. It bespeaks cleanliness. When we first stocked it we recommended it to our customers. In nearly every case, the purchaser scrutinized the package, then bought it. It had the quality all right but the appearance of the package made the sale and although it is the most expensive brand in the store it is by far the biggest seller. There may be a danger, however, that people are apt to judge quality by price. If they do they are only making things more expensive for themselves. If a grocer is convinced that a certain line has the real quality then it will not take long to introduce the line to the people but the grocer must be sure first and then he must have the energy to put the effort behind the lines. People today take very quickly to quality and price is a secondary consideration except in certain much talked of lines."

Many Contraries In The Trade

Although this theory has been brought out by a number of grocers in this city and examples cited to prove it there are some very peculiar characteristics of the grocery business that nearly every grocer must notice. It is almost amusing how far some people will go out of their way to save a few cents. Even the very customers who are willing to pay from 10 to 50 per cent. more to be sure of quality will go a long way to save a cent a pound on sugar or even less than that. One of the local grocers pointed out to Canadian Grocer representative that some people will even go to great inconvenience to deal with a grocer in whose judgment they have confidence.

To Hold Confidence of Customers

This grocer referred to is the manager of one of the down-town cash and carry stores. It means that the people who buy there must carry home all their parcels. Yet he states that people from the other end of the city have come there regularly to get their groceries, not because the goods are particularly cheaper there than at the grocery store in their own section of the city but because, as they say, the line of goods at the down-town store is of better quality. This grocer claims that this is not altogether accounted for in the goods stocked but in the way they are displayed and the freshness and system of the store itself. The appearance of the store, he claims, lends quality to the goods in the store. "At the same time," this grocer said, "it would be easy to lose the trade of these people if we ever betrayed their confidence in us by recommending or selling to them anything of the quality of which we were not absolutely sure."

New Branch of Manufacturers' Association at Three Rivers, Que.

A Plan of Activities is Mapped Out at Organization Meeting, Including Income Tax Law, Workmen's Compensation Act, and a "Made in Canada" Campaign

THREE RIVERS, March 1.—Three Rivers took another step forward in importance as a manufacturing centre recently, when a branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association was organized in this city.

R. W. Gould, secretary of the Quebec division, and L. D. Loranger, assistant secretary, were present at the meeting which was held at the Chateau de Blois. After luncheon the members of the new organization, which included representatives of a number of Three Rivers manufacturing concerns, discussed the activities of the new association led by the chairman, Vivian Burrill. It was decided that following the plan of the Canadian Manufacturers Association of Sherbrooke, Que., a meeting should be held every other month.

A Plan of Action

The first business of the society was to outline a plan of activities for their association. This included equalization of freight rates, the income tax law, the workmen's compensation act, tax recommendations and a "Made-in-Canada" campaign.

With regard to the equalization of freight rates, it was pointed out that it is believed to be the intention of the Federal Government to appoint a commission to make an investigation throughout the Dominion after the plan followed by the Tariff Commission. It was felt that if a meeting of the association was held previous to the visit of the above commission in Three Rivers a considerable amount of useful data could be compiled by the different industries represented in the district.

A "Made-in-Canada" Campaign

The question of a "Made-in-Canada" campaign was thoroughly gone into and at a later date will be taken up along with lines now being considered by the association as a whole. Other studies were discussed relating to business problems peculiar to the city of Three Rivers, and the income tax and business profits tax were thoroughly discussed by those present. It was recommended that a five years' period for the enforcement of the sales tax should be sufficient and that this tax should be paid yearly. If such was the case, it was pointed out that by averaging the tax for five years and paying it yearly, then the term would cover both good and bad years and the depression would not be so keenly felt.

Trade Conditions In England Are Abnormal

Montreal (Special). — Harold Seddon has recently returned from Worcester, England, where he has been visiting his principals, Lea & Perrins, in the interests of their Canadian business.

Mr. Seddon reports trade conditions in England abnormal. The export trade was to a great degree stagnant, especially with South Africa and Australia, where questions of finance and exchange were involved. As regards food products, it was noticed that the retail trade was doing well, being anything but panicky and adverse to cutting prices, even though in some instances wholesale prices were easier. In this respect it must be remembered that they have been supported by Government control of several staples. Business men generally were optimistic in their opinion that business would pick up in the spring and strengthen throughout the coming summer.

A Unique Display of Flour in a Quebec Store That Meant An Unusually Large Turnover

A recent window display of the Paquet Company, Ltd., Quebec City. This is a splendid single unit display and was the means of greatly stimulating sales on the brand of flour shown. The loaves of bread were baked by a customer living in the country, thirty-five miles from the city. The bread was baked in bowls and iron kettles, the one seen on the left measured twelve inches in diameter and six inches in height.

Domestic Trade In Box Shooks Heavy This Year

Vancouver (Special).—The box shook manufacturers have reduced their prices at the mill by approximately 20 per cent. To those using these near the coast, a saving of this amount will be shown, but to those who must pay freight charges on their shooks this decline will be more or less offset by the increased freight rate of 40 per cent.

The fact that ocean freights are unsettled, may be lower any time, and will probably decline for some time, is keeping export buying from developing to any great extent. The foreign buyers feel that at any time a drop in freight rates, by water, might make their early purchases show a loss, and they simply wait for lowest rates.

The domestic business this year is expected to be large. Authorities all over predict large British Columbia fruit crops for next season, both based on the light crops of fruit last year and the condition of the trees last fall.

Those associations and large operators who will require large numbers of boxes next fall are inquiring as to the supply available to meet their need. The increasing use of the box in the Eastern markets is making various authorities in the East study the maximum capacity of the coast box factories. From Australia and New Zealand inquiries are coming both from Government and private buyers for Canadian box shooks.

Present Price for Sugar Beets Six Dollars Per Ton

London, Ont., March 1.—The sugar beet situation in the district west of London is attracting considerable attention just now. Last year the growers received $9 and the price this season is only $6. Several of the growers in Wanstead district stated to Canadian Grocer that they will put in other crops this year rather than grow beets at the figure offered. They claim that all the work has to be done by Belgians and that it is impossible to procure the right kind of help and make even fair returns at $6.

Personal Contact With Customers Often Means Increased Sales

Quebec Grocer Prefers Selling Customers at Counter Rather Than Over the Telephone—More Opportunity to Make Extra Sales.

Two Essentials For Success

Must Have a List of Customers Upon Whom the Grocer May Count for Steady Patronage—Appearance of Store Counts.

O. CARIGNAN, the proprietor of O. Carignan and Sons grocery, 22 Des Forges Street, Three Rivers, Que., claims that two things are absolutely essential for a successful grocery business operating on a permanent foundation. "The first," says Mr. Carignan, "is a list of customers upon whom the grocer may count for steady patronage. He then can study their wants and estimate their requirements. In this way he avoids overloading his stock with unsaleable goods, and at the same time he is able to meet the demands of his customers at a moment's notice. The second is that these customers may be so well satisfied with the goods they receive and the service rendered that they are not only good customers but are good advertisers of that grocer's business.

Appearance of Store Counts

"Every grocer must admit that there is a classification of customers and that some of them the grocer would rather serve than others. To get the best class of customers, in my opinion, the general appearance of the store is an important factor. As a rule the customer first comes personally to the store to buy. Later they do most of the ordering over the telephone. If the appearance of the store is pleasing, it gives the customer confidence both in the grocer and in the goods he handles. Naturally the quality of the goods handled by the grocer is important but that can only be demonstrated after the purchaser has been influenced to deal at the particular store in question. Personally, I believe that price is only a minor consideration when the other two factors are present.

Personal Contact with Customers

"There is a drawback to developing the grocery business when the customers get to the point in their buying when they do all their ordering over the telephone. It is a great advantage to the grocer to deal personally with his customers. He gets to know their tastes. He has a chance to, perhaps, influence their buying, as he cannot over the telephone, and so many extra sales are lost. It is almost impossible to push a new line with customers whom the grocer rarely sees and there is a certain amount of satisfaction in talking face to face with those whom you serve. However it is not possible to serve all your customers directly and if the grocer wishes to develop the trade of those who do their ordering over the telephone, it is quite as important that he is extremely careful of the appearance of his store as if these people called on him daily."

One Price Only

There is one other thing that Mr. Carignan emphasized in this connection, and that is sticking to one price. He stated that since the price is not the most important factor, the small margins in prices that are created by those who cut prices may be well neglected by the merchant who does all in his power to make his store attractive and keeps the quality of his goods the best. "In fact," said Mr. Carignan, "the reputation for being a one-price store is something worth while having for after all the public feel a certain amount of confidence in the man who has assurance enough to stick to his price no matter what the other man is quoting. For instance, the man who fills his window with a line of canned goods all jumbled up and advertises a low figure for it, may sell it all right but he cannot help but give at least to some the impression that there is something the matter with the goods since his neighbor calmly goes on selling the same line at a little higher figure. The two different styles of display are responsible in part at least for this impression."

An Orderly Store

As will be seen by the accompanying picture of O. Carignan and Son's store, it is attractively laid out and everything in the store bespeaks system. The wall cases behind the counters are all dustproof with sliding glass doors. The bins below are the patented pivoted bins with the glass compartments in the front for display. The rear wall is almost covered with two heavy mirrors, which besides brightening and beautifying the store make it look a great deal larger than it really is. It gives depth to the store. The stairway of two or three steps at the rear of the store leads through an artistically carved oak arch to the store house behind where all the orders are put up. Apart from the few small sales that are made on the cash and carry plan in the front store nothing is changed on the shelves to fill orders. These are all put up at the rear, direct from the cases. This insures an orderly display in the front store, avoids a mess and at the same time gives the customers the freshest stock on hand.

Sells Toilet Articles

The third showcase from the front in this store is devoted to toilet articles. This perhaps is an odd line for a grocer to carry but Mr. Carignan says that it was handed down to him by his father and he keeps it up. Years ago, when Three Rivers was much smaller than it is to-day, Mr. Carignan's father stocked this line to accommodate his customers. Space has continued to be devoted to this line ever since, and to-day, by carrying only the very best lines, the proprietor of this grocery store is able to hold the custom, in this line, of many of those who have dealt with this same store for years. It has become a habit with them, to buy these lines at their grocery store.

Seven Turnovers Yearly

Mr. Carignan stated to a Canadian Grocer representative that the stock in his store turns over from six to seven times a year, thus insuring a fresh stock continually, the full advantage of a declining market and does not require any bigger layout than is absolutely necessary. The store does over two hundred thousand dollars' worth of business yearly.

INCREASED ACREAGE IS ALLOTTED TO PEANUTS

More than 2,000,000 acres in the United States were planted with peanuts last year. The demand for them is increasing by leaps and bounds. They are one of the most nutritious foods known to man, one pound of them (shelled) containing nearly half a pound of fat and a quarter of a pound of protein, both high grade and readily digestible. For running the body machine they are three times as efficient as an equal weight of beef and five times as efficient as an equal weight of eggs.—Indianapolis News.

WHAT DAYLIGHT SAVINGS COST MASSACHUSETTS FARMERS

Boston, Mass.—The farmers of Massachusetts suffered a cash loss of more than $8,000,000 in 1920 as the result of daylight saving, according to a statement issued from the state department of agriculture recently, based upon figures compiled from 6,000 questionnaires, which were sent to farmers throughout the state.

Dividing the Buying into Groups

Goodwins, Ltd., Montreal, Adopt a New Idea in Connection With the Various Departments Included in the Grocery Section—Grocer Should Not Buy From Behind the Counter

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, March 1.—Goodwins, Limited, of Montreal, have adopted a new idea in connection with the buying for the different departments which affects the grocery department perhaps more than any other branch of their store, since the buyers for the other departments have always had at least part of the present arrangement. By the new system adopted the buyer for the grocery department is away from the grocery store itself. J. Bailie, the manager of the grocery department, has, up to the first of January, had his office down in the grocery store, but after the first of the year he was moved up to the fifth floor, altogether away from the department which he manages. The buying for the grocery department is divided up into groups and one clerk put in charge of each group. In this way more interest is taken by the clerks than if one man was responsible for the whole business.

Sample Room Convenient

Beside Mr. Bailie's office upstairs is a sample room where the salesman representing the manufacturer brings his samples for display. The man in charge of the department downstairs interested in this line is brought up and he makes his choice and states his requirements. The salesman then comes with his tentative order to Mr. Bailie, who, if he sees fit, O.K.'s the order. It is then passed on to the business office and becomes a contract.

In speaking to a Canadian Grocer representative about the advantages of this new system Mr. Bailie said: "We find that it is to the advantage of both the salesmen and the buyer to meet away from the scenes of the store's activities. In the first place the grocer cannot give his whole attention to his buying if before him he sees customers coming and going and sales either being made or lost.

Diverting the Clerks

"Then, too, travellers are in many cases very fond of conversing with the clerks, in an effort to urge them to push their particular line. While this is to the advantage of the traveller and the house he represents, it not only attracts the attention of the clerk from his work but is apt to prejudice him for or against certain lines, which is not a good thing for the grocery business. The goods should be sold on their merits alone."

Giving the People What They Want

Charles Chapman Opens New Type of Provision Store in Montreal, Adopting the Slogan "What the Public Want," Specializing in High Grade Domestic and Imported Provisions

By Staff Correspondent, Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, March 1.—For two weeks in January last a big white banner bearing the words "WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS" hung across an empty store on Dorchester Street near Beaver Hall Hill. It caused much curiosity at first among those who daily passed the place, since it is located exactly between the uptown retail section of the city and the downtown business section.

Old English Provision Store

Finally the big banner was taken down and the secret was revealed. It was an old-fashioned English store specializing in high-grade domestic and imported cheese, bacon and hams. The name of the proprietor stands out above the store in large gilt letters on a black sign — Charles Chapman. Below this sign, and above each window, is a brown sign bearing the slogan of the store, "WHAT THE PUBLIC WANTS."

Upon analyzing the business it is quite evident that both the site of the store and the slogan are well chosen. Mr. Chapman, having had ten years' experience with the produce firm of Cadbury and Pratt, New Bond Street, London, England, besides operating for some years his own store in the same line in Tunbridge Wells, England, has carefully chosen the special lines that he is carrying for the public of Montreal and judging by the patronage his store has already received it is evident that he has not miscalculated the wants of the public.

Imported Cheese

It might be interesting to the grocery trade to know just what some of these special lines are: English—Stilton, Cheddars and Cheshire cheese; French—Camembert and Roquefort; Italian—Parmesan and Gorgonzola; and Swiss—Gruyemere and Emmenthal.

Beside these different lines of cheese, Mr. Chapman carries fine bacon, hams and French comestibles. He also carries choice Canadian cheese, and a cheese that is made in the province of Quebec and which is rather scarce, since, as far as can be ascertained, there is only one man in this province who makes it, namely, sage cheese.

New Type of Store

Although the store is not large in floor space, the proprietor has so arranged the display and the decorations of the store that it gives the attractive appearance of an old English dairy house. The interior of the store is painted a creamy yellow and white, while the fixtures, a tall, glass-fronted cupboard showcase, the counters and racks, are finished in mission oak. On the walls are hung old English pictures which add to the quaintness of the store. Directly behind one of the front windows hangs a large coat-of-arms of the late King Edward the Seventh, who gave Mr. Chapman the right to use the same on his premises. The refrigerator, which is built into one of the walls of the store, is finished in keeping with the other decorations, and has a glass-fronted door so that the display of cheese and bacon in the refrigerator can be seen by the customers in the store.

Analyzing the Business

In discussing this rather unique business with a Canadian Grocer representative, Mr. Chapman said: "I have noticed a rather peculiar condition that exists in connection with this business and which helped me to decide upon this site for my first retail store in Montreal. Good cheese interests men while good bacon and hams attract the women. By far the greater portion of the customers who come in here to buy cheese are men. For that reason I chose a store on a street by which the men come uptown from their offices on their way home in the evening. It is not even one of the main streets of the city but my reasoning was proved correct the first night I opened the store by the number of men attracted by the display in the windows. Another factor in making this site advantageous for the sale of such lines as I carry, is that just opposite my store is the Engineers' Club and the St. James Club of this city. For some years I have been supplying these and other clubs with dairy products and now that I have opened up a retail store in this line, the members of the clubs come and buy for their own homes what they have enjoyed previously at their own club.

The Window a Big Factor in Sales

"I fully realize," continued Mr. Chapman, "that the sales in my store depend almost entirely upon the effectiveness of my window display. For that reason I am not going to spare either money or time in order to get the best possible results from my windows."

At the present time Mr. Chapman has the windows dressed with whole, sliced and quartered cheese of the different kinds. This continually attracts the attention of the passers-by. In the other window the dark red color of a pyramid of English ham and bacon makes a very attractive background for the sliced and quartered hams and bacon that stand out in the front of the window. The stuffed moose head above each of the windows adds to the quaintness of the appearance of the store.

Besides these lines of cheese and bacon Mr. Chapman carries special lines of canned goods and delicacies including pate de foie gras, olive oil and Russian caviar. One line of French comestibles that is carried in this store is packed in a small glass jar, and among the vegetables and fish included in the mixture can be seen sardines, anchovies, tunafish, carrots, celery, gherkins, red peppers, cauliflower, capers, green peas, ripe and stuffed olives. These hors d'oeuvres are packed ready to be used for sandwiches and in Montreal there is a big sale for these lines.

Collections in February Show a Marked Improvement

Hamilton, March 2 (Special).—"Business is picking up splendidly," stated a retail merchant here to a Canadian Grocer representative. "In fact at no time has it been as bad as it was in 1913, the year before the war. Collections, during the latter part of last year and during January were pretty slow, but during February there has been a steady improvement and many accounts that had accumulated during those months are gradually being reduced. Things are coming down in price, foodstuffs as well as everything else, and workers will have to take a lower wage. This may seem a little hard on some of those people who have been getting big money, especially the unskilled labor, but they will have to get used to it. Just as soon as all things are reduced to a lower level, I have no doubt whatever that business will be on a sounder basis than it has been for several years past."

Other merchants interviewed all report the same as the above merchant. Stocks too, have been reduced to a minimum and merchants are buying more freely. The buying is not in a large volume, but buying is more frequent as the consuming demand requires.

Features A New Line Every Week

Grocer in Three Rivers, Que., Greatly Increases His Sales in This Way—He States That It Is Surprising What Systematic Effort Will Do—How He Sold One Woman Three New Articles.

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

THREE RIVERS, Que., March 1.—The ability of a grocer to sell specialty lines when a systematic effort is put forward in that direction was strikingly demonstrated by Albert Weaner, 88 Des Forges Street, Three Rivers, Que., when a Canadian Grocer representative was in his store a few weeks ago.

A woman was sitting by the counter giving Mr. Weaner her order. When she had finished stating her requirements Mr. Weaner said, "I have a new pudding powder here that I would like to have you try."

Increasing Sales

He then led his customer across the store to a glass showcase on the top of which was a pyramid of cartons containing the line mentioned. After a little conversation with regard to the preparation, the sale was made. The grocer then took from the same counter another package which was also a specialty line and in less than a minute another sale was made. Twice more this was repeated and in less than five minutes Mr. Weaner had added four new items to this order and each one of them was a line the customer had never tried before.

When the customer had left the store Canadian Grocer representative remarked to Mr. Weaner on the success of his efforts in pushing these new lines. Mr. Weaner replied:

"I have made it a practice to push specialty lines and particularly new lines which my customers have not tried, providing that the lines first meet with my own approval when I have tried them. It does not pay to push or recommend any line in which there is any doubt. I believe that a grocer should be very conscientious in this regard and not attempt to push the sale of any line which he would not care to purchase himself."

A New Line Every Week

Mr. Weaner makes it a practice to put a new line out on his counter every week and to push that line for that length of time. At the end of the week enough sales have been made to give the line at least a fair trial and to put it on a basis where sales can depend upon its merits. Mr. Weaner states that in such lines that he pushes in this way, the repeat orders are surprising and mean a much increased business.

"Even the best known brands of foodstuffs which are now regarded as staple lines were once new on the market and had to be pushed or recommended to the people. Evidently their quality gave satisfaction and repeat orders resulted. To-day they no longer need to be featured. On that principle I make an effort to sell new goods. I must first feel that the customer is getting real value and then I make a real effort to sell the goods and generally meet with success. This has resulted in a much wider range of goods in my store, but I find that all the lines are moving. If after recommending the line to my customers for a week, I find that it does not result in repeat orders, then I simply do not stock any more of the goods and I have learned my lesson. However, I have found that it pays so well to push new lines that when once in a while I strike a dead one I do not feel that I am the loser, because in the first place it is not necessary to buy a large quantity, and in the second place the sales that have resulted from this plan warrant taking at least the small chance that must go with any venture. The grocer is always repaid for the extra effort he takes to sell a new line. I myself have been surprised how easy it is to increase sales when a systematic effort is put forward."

THE NEW "SQUIRTLESS" GRAPEFRUIT IS A TANGELO

Washington.—The "squirtless" grapefruit may appear shortly on the American breakfast table. The new product, designed to spare the eye from a citrus shower, is known as the tangelo. It is a hybrid, the offspring of the tangerine and the grapefruit, but is more tender than its parents.

This discovery was disclosed when Senator Ashhurst, Arizona, read into the congressional record a bulletin from the department of agriculture. The birth of the tangelo is complete, but no attempt has been made yet to market it.

"Public Will Solve Your Problems"

"If You Do Not Solve Your Problems, the Public Will Do It for You," Dr. Hindley, Director Bureau of Education, State Retailers' Association, Washington, Tells Vancouver Retail Grocers, in Timely Address Last Week

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 28.—A great gathering of retail grocers assembled in Dominion Hall on Wednesday evening of last week to hear an address by Dr. W. J. Hindley, director Bureau of Education, State Retailers' Association, Washington, on the subject of "The Buyers' Strike." President J. T. Crowder, of the Vancouver branch of the British Columbia Retail Merchants' Association, also made a few remarks.

Starting with trade conditions during the war, when the public accepted ever-rising prices with patriotic resignation, then the armistice, with the public expecting an immediate drop, and their consequent bewilderment when, through abnormal foreign demand and a triple issue of paper money, the prices rose more than during all the years of the war, right through to six months ago, when the accumulated public indignation, fanned by the press, expressed itself in the refusal to buy, Dr. Hindley took his audience. "When all the thrift campaigns were insisting on 'Do not buy luxuries' and 'Do not buy extravagantly'," said the speaker, "the public became impressed with the first two words only, 'Do not BUY' and they commenced to accept that suggestion.

Attitude of Newspapers

"The newspapers are the greatest constructive factor in this country," he continued. "They must keep up reader interest, else they will have nothing to sell to the advertiser. They therefore always reserve their front page for the unusual—the striking and sensational. I, personally, do not blame them for taking up the question of distribution, it is vitally interesting to the public. That the headings they used and the slant of their news items was damaging to the retailer especially, apparently is a mere detail. A newspaper man is essentially an idealist, a theorist, a publicist, and he is not a business man, as you and I understand the term. Now then, I do blame the retail trade, that individually and collectively they did not go to the publishers, though uninvited, and lay before them the effect of their actions. It will be a sorry day for Canadian institutions when the retailers or any organization can wield the big club over the Canadian press and force their editorial and news columns. That would be disastrous. But it is not unreasonable to point out to a publisher of any kind that a certain course of action is bringing too speedy a reversal of merchandising, and will lead, as it has, to a business paralysis.

Reacts on Farmers

"The farmer felt six months ago that all manufacturers could immediately drop their prices—that the retailer could immediately mark down his goods to near pre-war levels, without the farmer being affected when he sold his products. The fallacy of that is becoming evident to the farmers to-day, and their unlimited demands for low tariffs are becoming modified within the last few weeks as the effect of the slump in the price of goods, that they as well as others have hastened, has not left them untouched.

"The farmers for the last fifty years have made efforts to organize. They made many mistakes. They corrected those mistakes, and to-day, as a result of their organization and strength, what have we? Text books on agriculture in the schools, courses on agriculture in the colleges, hundreds of thousands of dollars expended all over the country, by the governments, on agricultural colleges, experimental stations and farms and research bureaus, Ministers of Agriculture in every Government looking after the interests of the farmer.

"Did you ever hear of a special portfolio in any Government to look after your interests?

What Labor Has Accomplished

"The labor unions in the last fifty years have been organizing. They made lots of mistakes. They were only human. But look what they have accomplished. Union men are in charge of technical and vocational schools. Departments of labor have been founded in the various governments. A Minister of Labor in Ottawa and Washington with all kinds of organizations for adjusting disputes, settling strikes, setting wages has been appointed. They have put through wonderful legislation for the worker, workmen's compensation, women and child labor laws, minimum wage laws, eight-hour days, etc.

"All because they are organized strongly enough to demand attention. The general public," said Dr. Hindley, "has decided that the distribution system of this country has to be improved. Waste has to be eliminated and efficient service will be the price of a legitimate profit. The mortality among retail merchants is colossal. Every year hundreds of merchants fail. Their stocks may be sold for 40 cents on the dollar. Who," demanded the speaker, "pays the other 60 cents? The wholesalers? Yes, probably, for the time being, but you know and I know that that other 60 cents on the dollar ultimately must come out of the public.

More Economical Distribution

"It is not sufficient that we as merchants go serenely along, ignoring the demands of the public. The railroads did that fifty years ago, and, as a result, the public used the only tool they had, clumsy though it be—legislation. To-day the railroads have been so hampered by legislative enactment (and the end is not yet) that no person would consider United States railroad securities a sterling investment. The liquor interests on this continent refused to put their house in order. The public rose in its might and wiped the entire industry off the map. It is not a fair parallel to compare the liquor business with the retail distribution of this country, but, gentlemen, the public is to-day of the opinion that the retail system of distribution could be more economically handled.

"Shall We Do It?"

"Shall we attend to it, or shall we permit the public to use the only instrument that they possess—legislation? There are five bills before the United States Senate at this moment. They deal with vital matters, such as printing the cost on every article, setting a uniform profit on all articles, putting all distributors under the control of Government bureaus. Don't ever imagine that the problems of the retailers in the United States to-day will not be yours to-morrow. Our problems are common and our solutions will be applicable on both sides of the line. Are you aware of what the trend is here in Canada? Have you read the last issue of MacLean's Magazine? You should all read it. Under the title, 'My Confession of Faith,' Crerar states,"—and Dr. Hindley quoted from MacLean's Magazine Crerar's remarks re the attention that will be given to the distribution system.

"Public Will Do It for You"

"If you do not solve your problems, and have not the courage to effect the necessary changes, the public will do it for you. If there are found practices not in the interest of the public good, among any member of the bar, the Bar Association, with consent of the Government, takes action. If charlatans are found among the medical profession, the Medical Association, with consent of the Government, takes the necessary action to clean house. The same with the wiring of your house, the digging of a sewer or the installation of a water pipe, the same is covered by your city by-laws, acting on the advice of the respective trade association concerned.

Organization Essential

"But in retailing any one can engage, without training, without examination as to fitness, or any supervision whatever, and the public knows this and knows who pays for the failures, and will take action unless you do. You must organize—you must agitate till you have a training system for retailers—you must cut out the inefficiency, the loss, the waste motion. You must be united to fight the demands of radical experimenters who would scrap the present retail distribution system and destroy your investments. You must unite to fight the suspicion that has been cast on your trade by malicious agencies, and unsympathetic newspapers. You must join your association and let it speak for 100 per cent. of the retailers in this country."

In addition to the address of the evening, a musical programme was given, community singing being conducted by Roy A. Hunter, representative in Vancouver of Canadian Grocer. Mr. Hunter also contributed a cornet solo, and vocal numbers were given by Ben Crann and Douglas Whitelaw.

Farmers Tire of Being Retailers

The Farmers' Co-operative Movement in Certain States is Reviewed—Farmers Seem To Be Realizing That They Are Beyond Their Depth, So Far As Conducting Retail Stores Is Concerned

From Printers' Ink

MANUFACTURERS who have been watching with some little apprehension the growth of the co-operative buying idea among farmers have asked Printers' Ink how the movement is being affected by present business conditions.

A survey of the situation in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, where the agitation has been the strongest, reveals two interesting conditions of a contradictory nature.

The farmers seem to be realizing that they are beyond their depth, so far as conducting retail stores is concerned.

On the other hand, the sentiment is growing in favor of buying binder twine, harvester machinery, coal and similar commodities in carload lots.

The latter proposition is really one that the leading promoters of co-operative buying have urged from the beginning. It is the thing that Printers' Ink mentioned a few months ago as being of real concern to the manufacturer. The manufacturer has to look out for it now more than ever.

Sentiment Changes

The retail store—the selling of dry goods, groceries and general merchandise—was hooked onto, or rather wished onto, co-operative buying without general consent.

For years farmers have held the bag for about every kind of co-operative store deal you ever heard of. All sorts of schemes have been cooked up for the purpose of doing away with the independent retailer. During the recent reign of sky-high prices, these stores got to be more in favor than they probably ever will be again. But now that readjustment is in progress the sentiment seems to be going the other way—showing that Mr. Farmer is a hard-headed individual after all, who is not going to buy goods from anybody very long from a standpoint of sentiment.

In Iowa, nine retail stores are owned and operated by the State Farmers' Union. Now comes the announcement that the Farmers' Union Exchange, which is the wholesale house supplying the nine retail stores, is in the hands of a receiver. The effect on the co-operative store proposition in Iowa remains to be seen.

In Kansas and Nebraska the retail stores are owned by the local unions and buy their goods wherever they like. Life is not at all pleasant for these stores right now. At this writing one big store of the kind in central Kansas is being closed out because its stockholders, all farmers, were "dissatisfied with the way things were going."

The officers of the Nebraska Farmers' Union are taking the situation in hand and are definitely discouraging the formation of co-operative retail stores.

Quantity Buying

In the matter of buying certain things in carload lots, however, and distributing them according to the method already described in Printers' Ink, the favorable sentiment gets stronger all the time. This has the backing of State Boards of Agriculture and is even supported by the United States Department of Agriculture.

It must be remembered in this connection that the farmer gets what he wants, no matter what the politics of the "in" administration may be. The farmer wants co-operative buying. And it must be admitted that he is going about it in a businesslike manner. Anyway, with the State and Federal Government back of him, he is a force that cannot be ridiculed away or argued out of existence.

Obviously the thing for the manufacturer to do in States where the co-operative buying idea is strong is to redouble his efforts for the upbuilding of the retail store. After all, here is the real weakness of almost any buying scheme. When it comes to distributing the goods to the consumer the retail store is the only real satisfactory way.

Build Up the Retailer

There is no use for the manufacturers to try to solve this problem through governmental agencies. The farmers are in the saddle there. Doubtless manufacturers would scorn to use such tactics in any event. But they can devote more attention to building up the retailer.

The experience that has been worked out in the case of retail mail-order ought to be enough encouragement. Ten years ago retailers were badly scared and all sorts of ridiculous ideas were proposed to help them defeat retail mail-order. Among other things, a move was started to have Congress impose a prohibitive tax on the catalogue houses. But certain manufacturers and jobbers who succeeded in keeping their feet on the ground realized that the way to curb mail-order was to have strong retail stores. This policy was put into effect. Retail dealers were shown how they could compete with the catalogue houses. To-day mail-order is great and strong but it no longer is regarded as a menace to the retail store.

Where there are aggressive, capable retailers willing to put up a real fight for business the farmer is not going to be influenced so much by any talk about the fancy advantages of going in with his neighbors and buying things in carload lots. The retail store is or can be a stronger force than the agricultural departments and other agencies backing the co-operative plan.

Prime Essentials of a Modern Window Display Are Judgment, Good Taste and Knowledge of Color Harmony, Also Attractiveness in Trims

I MUST admit frankly in the beginning that I am not a window display expert, but simply one who tries to help in getting other people to make the most of their wares, by giving the public an opportunity through window displays to see and to appreciate not only the best in the fine arts, but the more modern achievements in the applied arts for which America is gaining recognition the world over. Beautifully designed products will at once secure an increased sale over the inartistic product, for the discriminating individual, as well as he who cares only for utility, will buy.

One of my objects in life is to cooperate in the stimulation of love for art in people's minds and souls, that the public may have a greater appreciation of things artistic and thus encourage the development of the best in the applied as well as the fine arts.

In this connection I was much impressed with a remark made by Edwin Howland Blashfield in one of our Fifth Avenue week conferences when he said: "We have too many so-called works of art and too few works of craftsmanship."

In Days of Old Bagdad

There is no record of just when the show window was first used as an adjunct to advertising. In old Bagdad arose the custom of exhibiting and selling goods in open booths. Even now Bagdad's famous bazaars, despite her evolution in other ways, are conducted as they were a thousand years ago. A writer in the National Geographic Magazine of December, 1914, describing the bazaars of Bagdad, says:

"Here is such a mob as Christ drove from the temple. If Herodotus came back he could see no change since his day. The shopping streets seem like tunnels; they are arched overhead with brick to keep out the heat, thus they run like subways up and down the bazaar quarter. On each side are stalls no larger than telephone booths. Cross-legged in each booth, his wares piled high about him, sits the Arab or Jew trader. Brown women, their faces hid by yashmaks, upset the ordered piles of goods and haggle shrilly."

This picture presents a vivid contrast to the modern business thoroughfares of American cities with their wonderfully attractive show windows, but it is from these primitive methods of merchandising that the profession of the expert decorator or display manager has been developed.

Nor need we go outside of New York to find these ancient methods still in practice in all their picturesque simplicity. Here we find the peddler, who, like the packman in days of old, carries his goods on his back, going from house to house, and who has first to show his goods before he can interest prospective buyers. The dingy store in the crowded foreign settlements of the city is a reminder of the bazaars of Bagdad or the old shops in Cheapside, London, where goods are displayed on a hanger outside the shop for want of a better method.

The history of the development of the show window, which is really the history of merchandising, has yet to be written in its interesting detail, but in any big city the student may study it in all its stages and even find it embodied in the progress of some successful merchant who started as a peddler with his pack on his back.

This article is presented as a special contribution to the readers of Canadian Grocer by Robt. Grier Cooke, President of the Fifth Avenue Association of New York City. The points brought out are based on a paper read by Mr. Cooke before the American Federation of Arts. While in Toronto recently he stated to the editor that the power of the well-thought-out window display is appreciated today more, perhaps, than ever before.

Creating a Favorable Impression

Such a book would not be complete without a chapter on the old Bowery, which is still full of interesting memories for many New Yorkers, who will find something of its atmosphere on Broadway in the Great White Light district, where the freak museum and other characteristics of the Bowery are beginning to make their appearance.

Advertising and selling goods would appear to be but very distantly related to art, but actual demonstration proves the contrary. The secret is in the artistic character of the goods and their display. To attract you must please; a favorable impression must precede a sale.

Window display to-day is an art that requires judgment, good taste, a knowledge of color harmony and of what constitutes an attractive display. For the member of this profession there is no groove or rut that he may follow to success. His success depends chiefly on his power of observation, his individuality, personality and convincing methods.

A writer in System three years ago, discussing the importance of color as a silent salesman, says:

"In fifteen blocks of the fashionable Fifth Avenue shopping district in New York, as viewed in one afternoon, less than six window displays were found in which the exhibition of merchandise did not suffer because of unwise color combinations and contrasts.

"The color qualities of goods are affected by juxtaposition, by day light, by artificial light and by colored light. Yet these very qualities, and their appeal or lack of appeal to human interest, are but little understood."

The Best Window Display

The best window display is that which most attractively exhibits the merchandise on which a store's reputation is based, for it is this window which will sell the most goods. All people may not be critics, but the natural harmony between the artistic and practical is sure to appeal to the general public.

A window display should be planned with the same common sense and artistic arrangement as would be used in designing a gown or painting a picture or in the decoration of a mantelpiece or the arrangement of a room. It must be above all well balanced. For this reason the window display that exhibits a single idea is the most effective. The spectator gets a single impression that is a lasting one and that is the result that you seek to achieve.

Buying enthusiasm can be created through the medium of good windows, which fully justifies every effort toward making the display most presentable.

It is only in comparatively recent years that window displays have received the attention that their importance in relation to merchandising should command. It is generally conceded that in this respect the West has made greater progress than the East, but in no city in the world is the incentive for artistic window displays so great as in New York.

Art Through Window Trims

I received from Dr. John H. Finley, president of New York State University, just prior to Fifth Avenue week, a very interesting contribution from an associate, on the subject of Fifth Avenue's potentiality as a factor in popularizing art through window displays. There is so much of interest and value in what he says that I take this occasion to make it public. He says:

"Fifth Avenue, through the concerted efforts of her merchants, can well be made to emphasize the fact that art value is in no way affected by rarity, period, age or source. Art value is determined aesthetically and in the eyes of aesthetics the art of ancient Greece, mediaeval France and modern America are as one. Fifth Avenue is the rendezvous of merchants who distribute both foreign and domestic wares. Democracy in art provides a place for both. Imported goods have heretofore been given the preference. Products are now judged on their merits alone. We are at last to be free from the shackles of tradition in art. Let Fifth Avenue proclaim this to the people, to their designers, to their manufacturers and their merchants, and a democratic industrial art will be born in America.

"Fifth Avenue is not the rich man's street exclusively. Expensive art beyond the means of the majority is easily produced and easily sold because there is money for its manufacture and for its purchase. Such art needs little advertising. It is diligently sought by the millionaire. The standard of democratic art must be raised that the man of moderate income may find pleasure and satisfaction in form and color as employed in the product of reasonable price."

The educational value of a concerted effort can be accurately estimated only when one knows in advance the manner in which ideas are to be presented to the public. A maximum of educational value might be realized no doubt when a thoroughly comprehensive scheme, both logical and psychological is worked out. Such a scheme, if it is to be of real force, should indicate rather specifically the basis for discrimination and choice in the various industrial or commercial lines.

Educational demonstrations of this kind should present possibilities heretofore undreamed of by Americans of moderate means. They will, therefore, affect commerce directly. Industry will be affected indirectly as it is gradually reconstructed to meet the artistic requirements which sooner or later will come to be accepted as equally desirable commercial ideals.

Art quality will never sell a product if the consumer is ignorant of what constitutes the art quality. The salesman ignorant of the art quality will have difficulty in recommending the artistically superior article, while the manufacturer to be successful must cater to the public taste. Are we then to let public taste be a mere matter of whim?

Whatever the nature of the display, one fact seems to be apparent—the public must be informed in advance and kept informed. The educational purposes underlying such a demonstration should be clearly defined and published. Thorough co-operation should be established. One window display should reinforce the display next door and the one across the street. Principles of constructive design should be exemplified and emphasized everywhere, and the reiteration of these principles should echo and re-echo as one passes down the street. Repetition of fundamental art truths should be the rule.

Profession of Great Promise

In conclusion, I want to call attention to the field of opportunity that shop window display offers for men and women as a remunerative occupation. This is a recognized profession of great promise and one that the artistically inclined public should encourage.

Here the merchant has a world-wide audience attracted from every point of the compass and this is particularly true of Fifth Avenue. In no other thoroughfare is there so great a variety of shops covering the whole range of merchandise and art and exercising so great an influence on the public taste. Here, indeed, the show windows are the people's picture galleries, and have a distinct educational influence.

A few lines of inscription should accompany and reinforce each display. Numerous problems should be created, the solution of which will demand of each observer the exercise of his best judgment. Attention must be arrested and held. Art must be featured as something which is to unite rather than divide mankind.

Big Co-operative Store Project in U. S. A. a Failure

Shattered almost in its inception, the United States Government employees' stores scheme, which was expected to make the retail merchant superfluous to the army of Government clerks in Washington, D.C., already has begun to disintegrate.

Its affairs, which have been going from bad to worse, have now reached the verge of a smash, in which the "cooppers" face the necessity of putting up out of their own pockets a deficit of more than $8,000.

The last blow was delivered by the flop of the sugar market, which has left the organization with a large stock of high-price sugar and 100,000 nominal customers who can go to the retail grocery "around the corner" and buy sugar much cheaper.

The co-operators, the 100,000 Government employees, are falling rapidly away after a brief period of patronage. For a while, it is explained, when prices in the regular markets were at their very peak, and the Government surplus army and navy stocks were available as comparatively low-cost sources of supply, the difference between the retail prices of the clerks' stores and the regular trade was sufficient to attract trade despite the lack of facilities for service.

But gradually, even before the drop in the outside markets, there was noted a steady tendency of the Government employees to turn away from the co-operative scheme and deal with the retail grocery which carried just the brands they wanted and just the size containers their household requirements dictated, and not "something just as good" in cans and packages large enough to spoil before they could eat them all up.

SCALE MEN MEET AT WINDSOR

Sales Convention Lasts All Week and Includes a Banquet

Windsor, Ont. — (Special). — Among those who attended the Canadian sales convention of the new Canadian Toledo Scale Co., Ltd., at Windsor, Ont., last week were the following: C. H. Collins, Toronto; H. A. Scott, Montreal, H. R. Scott, Calgary; Wm. McAllister, Ottawa; S. L. Moore, Toronto; E. J. Marsh, Calgary; K. S. Charters, London; R. Schurman, Edmonton; J. N. Bourque, Quebec; N. Heipel, Kitchener; J. A. Cote, Montreal; F. Brunelle, Sherbrooke; A. Houston, New Zealand; J. A. C. Kemp, Toronto; W. G. Lynch, Windsor; A. E. Tayler, Toronto; W. F. Morgan-Dean, Hamilton; B. I. Leonard, Halifax; E. S. Chambers, Vancouver; W. E. Davies, Toronto; J. A. Scott, Winnipeg; P. A. Wilson, St. John; E. E. Precourt, Sherbrooke; J. Uprichard, Regina; E. Francouer, Montreal; E. Evana Smith; Saskatoon; T. G. Waller, Hamilton; J. A. Love, Windsor; A. A. Currie, Toronto; W. S. Duck, Toronto; D. Legault, Montreal.

Henry Theobald, the president from Toledo, and other officials were also in attendance.

W. F. Morgan-Dean, of Hamilton, is the managing director of the new Canadian company. He will devote all his time to his new duties .

On Wednesday evening the Canadian sales staff were the guests of the company at an enjoyable banquet. Harry A. Scott was the toastmaster. Talks were given by many of the salesmen, all of whom were optimistic in regard to 1921 business. There were lantern slides showing Toledo Scale men moose hunting, and during the evening Mr. Theobald, the president of the parent company, was presented with a mounted bull-moose head.

THE FORDNEY BILL IN U.S.A.

THAT the Fordney Bill, which embodies the recently proposed tariff changes in the United States, is likely to meet with the disapproval of President Wilson, when it is sent on to him, will be viewed with more or less satisfaction on the part of Canadian manufacturers and exporters, who are doing business with the United States. Agreement was reached this week by the conferees considering changes in this Emergency Tariff Bill, but opinion seems to be one that it will not pass the president. Republican leaders are strong in opposition to the measure, and characterize it as special legislation.

Wheat and produce lines are chiefly affected as far as Canada is concerned by these new proposals. The suggested new rate on wheat is announced as 35 cents per bushel, on wheat flour and semolina, as 20 per cent. ad valorem. Potatoes are assessed 25 cents per bushel, and onions 40 cents per bushel in the new schedule. Butter and substitutes are fixed at 6 cents per pound, and cheese and substitutes 23 per cent. ad valorem. These are some of the chief lines that will affect Canadian exporters, who do not look with favor on any such tariff enactment. In the past year Canada exported largely of potatoes, wheat, and other foodstuffs to the United States, and increasing the duty on these articles will discourage this trade. Values of Canadian goods in the United States would thus be enhanced without any advantage to the Canadian producer.

The fact that the proposals are likely to meet with the veto of President Wilson is reason for satisfaction.

THE SUGAR COMMISSION

THE appointment of a commission to control the marketing of the balance of the Cuban crop, and of a sub-committee to handle the offerings and allocations, is meeting with some opposition from some planters who prefer to be independent in the matter of selling their own sugar, and also from some brokers in New York who claim that the control of the crop will have a tendency to artificially raise prices and cause "a monopoly in the restraint of trade."

The object of the commission is to take charge of the sale and shipments of sugar produced during the 1920-21 crop. It will also establish prices for sales that will compare favorably with the prices ruling in the world markets. These prices will be based at a fraction less than what other countries are selling at.

The Cuban committee is already functioning, and has allocated 100,000 tons of sugar for February and March shipments, of which amount some 65,000 tons have been disposed of to American and Canadian interests at 4¾ cents c. and f., or 5.77 cents duty paid.

What the outcome will be will be watched with much interest. Some authorities on the sugar situation claim that controlling of the crop and setting of prices will attract outside sugars, and the same result will occur as that of last fall which practically demoralized not only the sugar trade but other interests as well.

HOW ABOUT YOUR "DEAD STOCK?"

A RETAIL merchant upon taking stock found that he had seventeen different brands of shoe polish, out of which number just two were enjoying a ready sale. The other brands eventually found their way to the bargain table. Another merchant was forced to vacate his present location on account of the lease expiring and the building being sold for another purpose. Upon looking over the stock, he found upwards of one hundred lines that were not selling, and, in fact, many of them had been in stock for several years. As this merchant did not want to remove all this "dead stock" to the new store, he put it on sale at prices that did not nearly represent the cost.

These instances bring home the lesson that the merchant should exercise great caution in deciding just what brands he should stock, judging the goods by the quality, attractive appearance of the package, and price that would especially appeal to his customers. Perhaps the advice that a wholesaler gave to a young man just entering business would not be amiss at this time. "Watch your buying carefully, and pay special attention to the travellers. They are the smartest people in the world, and before you are aware of it they will have you loaded up with a lot of goods you cannot sell."

THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC is making rapid strides in the way of expansion, and its position financially is a very gratifying one. Quebec's finances at a glance for the year ending June 30, 1920, show ordinary revenue of $14,472,650.87, and ordinary expenditure of $13,520,740.37, the surplus amounting to $951,910.50.

Computing Margins on Sales and Why

The Old, Old Problem is Again Discussed, With Some New Slants Given on an Ever-recurring Question: "We Don't Figure Profits—We Figure Our Margins"

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

THIS is the old question, recurring every so often that the crying need for some groundwork in our schools is made plain thereby. I have this letter before me:

Dear Sir:—We have been looking for an article on the difference in figuring profits on cost and on sales. Merchants are advised to figure profits on sales and not on cost, but we cannot see the difference. Will you give us your opinion.

Yours truly, J. W. F.

We should get our minds clear on one thing, that we don't figure "profits." We figure margins. It is loose to talk of figuring profits when what you are discussing is the total spread between cost and selling prices. That is a gross difference, or margin, and it is very different from the only thing we should call profits. Profits are net earnings. It is correct to speak of gross profit, but confusing and misleading, because we are so apt to omit the word gross. If we use margin for that total spread between cost and sale price, we shall speak more accurately, speak the same language always, not be misunderstood, and play safe.

Why should margins be figured on sales, not on costs? For many important reasons. First, custom has decreed that expenses shall be figured on sales. Seeing we are all used to this method, it is not only hard but practically impossible to change, as I expect to show below. In fact, custom has become fixed in this regard largely, or I suspect wholly, because it is impracticable for any but expert mathematicians, who are highly trained in the use of most abstract and abstruse computations, to compete expenses correctly on cost on the basis of averages.

Factories and Stores Necessarily Differ

One reason for confusion lies in the fact that factory executives usually figure things on costs—and it is simple for them to do it. If you are running out a long line of tables, you can charge up every item of time and material that goes into the manufacture thereof. Then you can add the ascertained overhead and stick on ten or twelve or more per cent. for profit. This is so comparatively simple that even if your overhead is understated by four or five per cent. you are still working safely. Yet even here, with all this apparent ease, simplicity and accuracy, factories are continually waking up to the fact that no real money is being made. More and more are such executives coming to realize and have respect for the method of figuring on sales values instead of cost.

Retail merchandising, or, in fact, any kind of merchandising, must be guided by the bitter experience of those who have failed unless you want to run the risk of failure yourself; and it has been found that it is safer to figure on sales because then all figures are conservative, margins are computed from the same end as expenses, all computations are confined within the narrow compass of one hundred units of value, so that anybody who has a moderate arithmetical capacity can arrive at conclusions that are absolutely accurate every time he makes a computation.

Do I make my meaning clear? Probably not. This is something that only practice and consecutive thought, carried over some months of use, will make perfectly clear. The beauty of it is that once you have it clear in your mind, the logic of it will become irresistible, and it will be so simple and transparent to you that you will wonder how you ever thought there was any other way. So let me try a few illustrations.

Confusion of Tongues in Figures

The mix-up that occurred on the Tower of Babel had nothing on the confusion of ideas that can result from figuring without knowing just what you are doing. Let us take, for example, an item like lemons. Here the correct margin is 25 per cent. on sales. This is made up of the average expense burden of 16 2-3 per cent., plus a loading and shrinkage charge of 3 1-3 per cent. and the profit of 5 per cent.

We know what the average expense burden means. The loading charge is put in to offset the proportion of the burden of merchandise that is sold for less than a gross margin sufficient to cover expenses—sugar, flour, lard, butter, eggs, etc.—which should be borne by lemons. And these calculations are based on lemons bought and sold out weekly or oftener. They are not based on speculative purchases.

Now, starting from the sale value of 100 per cent., how simple it is to arrive at the various items of burden, expense and profit indicated above. Every factor is within our immediate comprehension. All of them are on the same basis. To arrive at the correct sale price by this method, all you have to do is divide your cost by 75, decimally, and you have your sale price. You will know, moreover, that the sale price contains a gross margin of 25 per cent., based on the sale value of the product. Then if you have paid $5.25 for the box of lemons, you divide it thus:

   ------
75) 525

and you will have at a glance $7.00 as the price at which those lemons must be sold. That means that, in the case of 360s, the price will be 24 cents the dozen. In the case of 300s it will give you 28 cents as the right figure.

Of course, we know that 33 1-3 per cent. added to cost will give the same result. But if you do that and seek to analyze the various constituents of expense, loading and profit, you will have these figures:

Expense, 22.22 per cent. plus; loading, 4.45 per cent. minus or plus; profit, 6.66 per cent. plus—six two-thirds per cent.; total load on cost, 33.33 1-3 per cent.

So to arrive at anything like similar exactitude you have much more complicated computations with all the danger thereon attendant of making fatal errors.

Confusion Aggravated as You Go Higher

Take some semi-luxury, or call it plain luxury if you like, which is very slow of sale, part of which may readily be on hand a year or more. Such an article should be burdened about like this:

	Per Cent.
Basic expense	16 2-3
Load for interest, handling, cleaning for months	4 1-3
Load to offset the staples above indicated	7
Total	36

Plainly, if we load a staple like lemons with 3 1-3 per cent., mostly to offset low-margin merchandise, we can load this luxury with 7 per cent; and if five per cent. is correct profit on lemons, 8 per cent. is not excessive on such a luxury. In fact, you have to get such margins or you are not going to make money on the average.

Now turn those figures around on to a cost-plus basis and see how it works. It will look this way:

Expense	26.04
Handling, etc.	6.76
Loading	10.93
Total	56.23 plus

This shows that 36 per cent. on sales is equivalent to over 56 per cent. on cost. But what may not be so apparent until Daylight saving is likely to go into effect in Toronto on May 1 and conclude on September 30. Canadian railroads, it is stated, will likely operate on daylight saving from May 1 until October 2.

According to a decision of the Railway Board, the William Davies Company are to be assessed as retailers in Toronto rather than as manufacturers. By such a decision the city of Toronto loses nearly $18,000 in taxes.

The death occurred at London, Ont., very unexpectedly after an illness of only two days with pneumonia of Ald. Charles G. Moorehead, for many years connected with the D. S. Perrin Biscuit Company.

The sudden death occurred recently of H. Gilbert, of H. Gilbert and Son, Mansfield, Ont. He had been in business for the past forty-two years. His son Garfield, who has been associated with his father in business for the past eighteen years, is carrying on.

A. W. Paskins, for fifteen years in the grocery business in Peterborough, Ont., has become associated with Geo. Holden and H. M. Vincent in the brokerage business of Geo. Holden, Limited, Vancouver. Mr. Paskins brings a practical retail merchandising experience to his new work.

Covered Market Is Proposed for City of Ottawa

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 28.—The Retail Merchants' Association, Grocers' Section, received a deputation from the Russell County Agricultural Society at their meeting on February 24, the latter organization being anxious to get the grocers to approve of a covered market for the city.

Little Enthusiasm

The cost of providing a covering over the space specified is figured at $300,000 and the idea was not taken up with any degree of enthusiasm especially as the farmers are willing and indeed eager for the city and county to pay all the costs and then to collect a small fee from them as at present. It was pointed out to the farmers that it was a mere handful of them that used the market for the winter months and it was not considered good business to incur the heavy expense to protect them from the elements.

The members of the association passed a resolution of sincere sympathy with the family of F. W. Hill, who died recently.

A tax of one per cent. on turnovers is not favored, the majority being opposed to such a tax.

Farmers Are Now Taking Low Figure For Tobacco

London, Ont., March 1.—A situation of unusual interest in the cigar trade has developed here. The cigarmakers' union used to be the strongest organization in the city. To-day it is one of the weakest if not the weakest. Local factories have declared war on the closed shop and with the exception of John McNee & Sons are practically at a standstill. McNee & Sons some time ago gave all employees notice that they were laid off. The firm has since installed cigar-making machines which are operating most satisfactorily. About 75 former union employees have been taken back but not as union members. The cigar trade generally is reported as very quiet. In the district buyers are out for the first time in months and are offering for tobacco from 5 to 13½ cents a pound. The farmers in many instances are taking this rather than carry their crop indefinitely, although it means a heavy loss to them as many figure that at 35 to 40 cents a pound they would barely break even with high costs of labor last year. General indications point to a greatly reduced acreage in this district this year.

Action Against Dom. Sugar Co. Is Dismissed

The action of W. F. Morley & Co. to recover $30,172 from the Dominion Sugar Co., Ltd., representing the loss of profit on an unfilled sugar contract, was dismissed by Mr. Justice Rose in the Supreme Court this week. The plaintiff will appeal.

Plaintiff's Claim

The plaintiff stated that the defendant contracted November 21, 1919, to deliver 200 tons of granulated sugar at $12.10 per 100 pounds through Lamborn & Co., brokers, to H. O. Wilbur & Sons, Philadelphia, f.o.b. Chatham or Wallaceburg. Wilbur & Sons furnished defendants with a letter of credit on the Philadelphia National Bank for $54,208, which was accepted and still retained. The contract called for delivery in February, March, April and May of 1920, but defendants failed to deliver, despite frequent requests for delivery.

Further, the Philadelphia firm assigned the contract to plaintiffs, who notified the defendants and resold for $19.11 per 100 pounds. Plaintiff claimed that he paid $54,208 for the sugar, sold for $85,612 f.o.b. Toronto and Hamilton, and that after deducting freight the net price would be $84,380, making a loss of profit of $30,172.

Was Obeying Orders

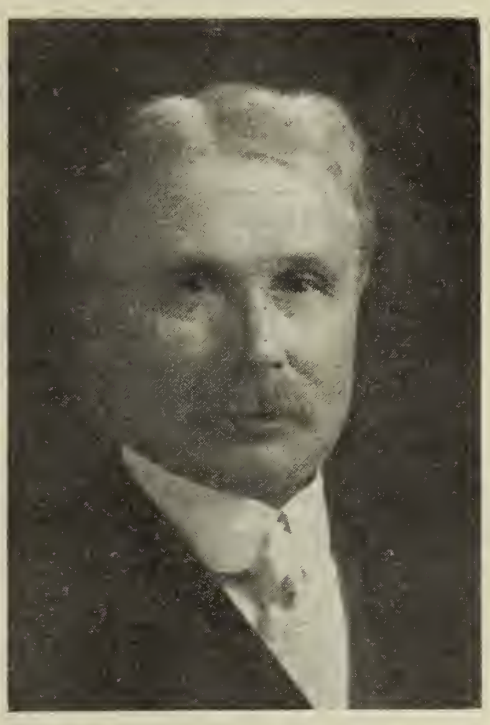
Charles A. Howson, vice-president of the Dominion Sugar Co., Ltd., said that the defendant firm objected to the distribution in Canada because it would not recover its drawback of $1.50 a ton on sugar refined for export. He also claimed that 200 tons was a large amount to deliver to one firm. His firm, he said, was working with the Government in delivery of sugar and was obeying orders.

DR. CREELMAN IS SELECTED TO MANAGE NIAGARA GROWERS' LIMITED

Dr. G. C. Creelman, formerly president of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and former Commissioner of Agriculture for Ontario, and now Agent-General for Ontario in Great Britain, with headquarters at London, has been selected by the proposed Niagara Peninsula Growers', Limited, as their general manager. Dr. Creelman has accepted the position. The selected sales manager of the committee concerned is Drysdale Carpenter, Winona, who has been sales manager of C. P. Carpenter and Sons, Winona, for many years. The proposed salary for each manager approximates $1,000 a month.

Grocery Business Of A. Dionne Is Fifty Years Old

Montreal, March 2.—Fifty years ago, Auguste Dionne opened his first grocery store on Laval Street, Montreal. As announced in Canadian Grocer two weeks ago this event was fittingly celebrated by the clerks of Mr. Dionne's present store. At the age of 16 Mr. Dionne began clerking in the store of his brother, T. Dionne, who at that time had a store on St. Catherine Street.



AUGUSTE DIONNE

who recently celebrated fifty years in the retail grocery business in the City of Montreal.

After working in the grocery store for his brother for six years Mr. Dionne opened his first store in 1871. In 1885 Mr. Dionne foresaw the growth of Montreal towards the west and opened a store on St. Catherine Street. He also had a store at the corner of Sherbrooke and Park Avenue but later seeing the developments in the west end of the city, he concentrated his efforts on what is now the present store at the corner of St. Catherine and Drummond Streets. At that time there was only one other grocery store, owned by Mr. Wilson, in that end of the city. The west boundary of Montreal at that time was practically considered to be Guy Street.

Grocery Trade Kept Pace

As Mr. Dionne calculated Montreal grew speedily westwards until Westmount was surrounded by the city of Montreal and still spreads westward to Notre Dame de Grace. With the growth of Montreal the grocery business of A. Dionne, Son & Company kept pace, until this year they expect to open the two new stories to their building, which will make their grocery store one of the largest in the Dominion of Canada. This will give the building four stories to be devoted entirely to the grocery business.

Long Service Employees

John Daly, the manager of this store, informs Canadian Grocer that at the present time there are fifty-five clerks employed with twelve rigs and three trucks continually in service delivering the orders. There are four clerks still in the employ of this store whose years of service with Mr. Dionne aggregate over one hundred years. John Daly, who manages the store, has been with the firm for fourteen years and V. Payette has been thirty-two years. T. Chaput, manager of the butcher department, has also been there thirty-two years and the two Legault brothers have both served eighteen years with this firm. This speaks well for the management of this store and shows that they have taken a hearty interest in the business.

Imports of Chicken Soup Unlikely In the Future

Montreal, Feb. 28.—As pointed out in one of the fall issues of Canadian Grocer last year, the pure food laws of Canada are so rigid and so exacting that at the present time it is almost impossible for dealers to import any canned goods containing chicken or other lines of poultry. As a result of this many of the American-made chicken soups are not to be found on the Canadian market any more, since the supplies which were on hand at the time of the enactment of this legislation have now been depleted. As chicken soup is a food which takes a prominent place in the diet of the sick and invalids, this would have been a hardship had it not been for the efforts on the part of Canadian manufacturers to fill the breach by a bigger output and of a high quality.

This has meant a real effort on the part of some manufacturers as the canning of chicken entails a lot of work, when it is done properly, and those shouldering the responsibility in Canada are not many. A few manufacturers are supplying the needs of the whole of Canada for canned chicken.

CELEBRATES HIS EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY

The eightieth birthday of Charles Gurd, president of Charles Gurd & Company, Ltd., Montreal, was celebrated on Saturday by a gathering of directors and staff for a dinner, at which Mr. Gurd was the recipient of an illuminated address and the object of a number of laudatory speeches.

Urges Better Marketing of B. C. Potatoes

Lardner, B.C.—At a meeting of Delta potato growers, presided over by Alex. Davie, the chief Dominion fruit inspector, R. G. L. Clarke addressed the growers on "Co-operative Marketing." He recommended the potato growers to emulate the example of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association, who have practically monopolized the milk trade from farmer to consumer in British Columbia.

He emphasized that the entire crop of potatoes should be placed in the hands of those closely in touch with selling conditions. Mr. Clarke advised the growers that Yakima (Washington) potatoes were graded, whereas no grading was done on Canadian potatoes. He stated that a new grading law would probably be put into effect by Ottawa within a short time.

A RED SQUIRREL THE FEATURE OF THIS SALE

N. A. Marra, grocer at Amherstburg, had a novelty attraction in his window recently in the shape of a red squirrel which was kept busy doing stunts in a peculiarly constructed cage. In connection with this he was featuring a 95-cent Sale and had on display such goods as three tins of cocoa, ten bars of laundry soap, six tins of pork and beans, nine packages of cornstarch, three pounds of lard, six tins of corn, any of which may be obtained for 95 cents. Housewives have shown keen interest in the display and Mr. Marra had quite a satisfactory turnover. He backed up the window display by a double column ad. in the local paper, quoting prices on all offerings in large figures.

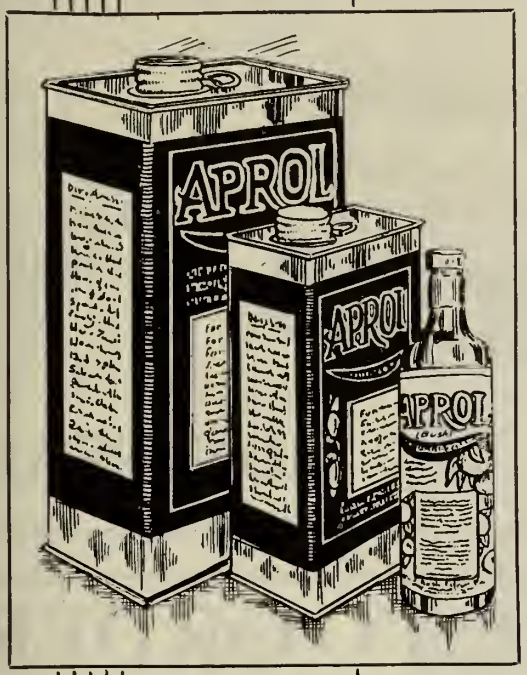
APROL

THE SWEET OIL OF PERSICA



A delightful, economical cooking and salad oil that is proving a highly profitable repeat seller.

AprOl is a nutritious oil of delightful flavor, pressed from the ripe kernels of apricots and peaches. It is a distinct improvement on olive oil when used as a salad component, being entirely free of that greasy, nauseating after-taste. It fries beautifully, requiring about half as much of it as would be used of lard or butter, and can be used over and over again—is an excellent shortening and is decidedly economical and highly digestible.

Canadian grocers handling AprOl have found it an active seller. The profit margin is good and it is being widely advertised.

DOUBLE YOUR SALES OF MACARONI IN 1921

BECAUSE Canadians don't eat enough macaroni—you don't sell enough—we don't make enough. It's a loss all around. How do we know we can double the sale in 1921? Simply because other countries eat from two to thirty times as much macaroni and alimentary pastes as Canada.. Why, in the United States last year, over fifty million dollars' worth was eaten—or seven pounds per head! Canada consumes less than 2½ lbs. per head.

Wherever introduced, Catelli's Macaroni Sauce has doubled sales of Macaroni, Spaghetti, etc.

So we are going to take advantage of conditions this year of enforced economy, when every food dollar counts, to make the women understand the superior value of Catelli's products as a food—a full meal—for the family—for a few cents—in a few minutes. We'll tell them of the countless tempting ways to serve macaroni, spaghetti and other alimentary pastes. We'll emphasize the low cost. And we'll keep at it till we DO double the consumption! And that means doubling the sale. It means doubling your profits—if you will only do your part by featuring Catelli's Macaroni Products. Urge your employees to stimulate your customers to eat more macaroni, spaghetti, vermicelli and noodles, packed so carefully by Catelli. And then we'll launch Catelli's famous Macaroni Sauce at the same time, to make it easier still to serve macaroni.

Let's get together for more macaroni sales, more profits in 1921. Very little effort on your part will pay big dividends. We'll keep the quality and advertising going—your part is merely to keep selling!

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

A GREAT deal of interest is being centered in the sugar market since the Cuban crop has been placed into the hands of the commission for marketing. The commission is fully functioning, and some heavy transactions have taken place both to American and Canadian refineries. Another interesting point is that Australia has purchased some 165,000 tons at 4.60 cents f.o.b. Cuba. It is also reported that Japan has secured 6,000 tons on the same terms. The price paid by the Canadian refineries was 4¾ cents c. and f., or 5.77 duty paid.

The harvesting of the Cuban crop is progressing favorably and there is now ready for immediate shipment in Cuban ports 416,211 tons plus 101,347 tons of old crop, making a total of 517,558 tons. The visible production in Cuba to February 19 is 656,326 tons against 1,077,219 tons to corresponding date last year.

Refined sugar is in fair consumptive demand and all refineries are fairly maintaining prices and price cutting appears to have ceased.

Generally speaking, the markets for general grocery commodities show few price changes of any amount, and a firmer feeling prevails in many lines. Teas, coffees and shelled nuts are decidedly strong with prices in primary markets higher and stocks in Canada are smaller than they have been for several years.

Canned vegetables are moving in fair value and the situation can be viewed as a firm one, with tendencies for advances. Canned fruits show little movement and are in a weak position, but jams are moving more freely than they have at any time this season.

Cereals and flour are steady but there is a firmer tone on rolled oats in some localities.

The hog market continues with a weak tone which is reflected on all hog products. Lard and shortening are easier and lower. Eggs have strengthened under the increased consumption.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 2.—The same steady tone that characterizes the sugar market seems to prevail this week throughout the entire grocery market. Nearly all changes are upward, and in all lines there is a steady, firm feeling. Coffee, cereals, molasses, sugar and dried fruits are steady in price with an improvement in the movement of supplies. The tea market also shows a change for the better. Canned goods prices that were reduced by some of the local wholesalers are advanced again to the former prices and in some cases to even higher levels. Oranges and apples are dearer this week. The run on oranges that has passed during the last two weeks is responsible for the higher prices and apples are getting short in supply. Laundry soaps are advanced in price. The only change in package goods is the decline in the price of self-raising flour. There is a good demand for nuts with a firm market and some higher prices on walnuts. Celery is getting scarce and the quality is not as good as it has been. Potatoes still sell at the low prices that have ruled. The spice and the rice markets are quiet and prices are unchanged.

Canned Goods Prices Higher

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—Some time ago reductions were made by a number of Montreal wholesale grocers in the price of canned vegetables. This lasted for three or four weeks and this week the prices have been revised and advanced. The advance in the price is a sharp one. Two and one half pound tins of tomatoes are advanced 15 cents a dozen and the 2 pound tins are advanced 10 cents per dozen. Corn is advanced 10 cents per dozen; also standard peas. Early June peas are advanced 5 cents per dozen. Golden wax beans and Refugee green beans are advanced 15 cents per dozen, now quoted $2.10 and $2.15 per dozen. Clover leaf salmon is also advanced in price by the wholesalers to the extent of 15 cents on the ½ pound tins and 20 cents on the tall and flat pound tins. Other sockeye salmon is advanced 50 cents, and Red Spring salmon is also up 50 cents. These changes in price are made by some of the Montreal wholesalers, but are not changes in the quotations by the canners. It shows that the market for canned goods is very firm at the present time and that the reductions in price made some time ago could not hold.

Coffee Market Firm

Montreal.

COFFEE.—It is apparent that coffee prices have struck rock bottom and that in all grades the present is the advantageous buying time. The market is running quite firm at present prices and no change is looked for immediately, although the tendency of the primary markets is upward.

Dried Fruit in Demand

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—The only change in price that is recorded this week in the dried fruit market is the slight decline in the quotations on loose dates, which are quoted at from 11 to 14 cents per pound. Cluster raisins in packages are quoted at $6.75 per box of twenty packages. A better movement of prunes is reported since lower prices have been quoted. There is an excellent demand for evaporated fruit and prices on evaporated apples stand firm.

A CORRECTION

Montreal.—In last week's issue of Canadian Grocer there was an announcement that Kellogg's Corn Flakes had been reduced in price. This is not correct. The manufacturers have not made any change, the price stands firm at $4.20 per case. The error occurred though a reduction of twenty cents a case being reported by a local wholesaler who was so endeavoring to reduce his stock.

Higher Prices on Apples

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Higher prices are quoted this week on apples, oranges and lemons. There is an advance of 50 cents per barrel on nearly all apples listed. The big demand for oranges has resulted in higher prices and California navel oranges are quoted at from $5.25 to $6.25. California lemons, 300s, are quoted at $5.00.

Improvement in Tea Market

Montreal.

TEAS.—There is no notable change in the tea market this week except the improved condition of the primary markets and the better movement of the better grade teas on this market. Prices remain unchanged, but it seems that the tea market is gaining more strength and throwing off the effects of the lower grade teas that once flooded the market. The improvement appears to be mainly among the teas that rank better than the medium grades.

Celery is Getting Scarce

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—There is practically no change in the vegetable market this week. Celery is more scarce and some higher quotations are made which vary with the quality of the shipments. The season is very nearly over. Yellow onions are a little cheaper, but there is not a big demand for them, despite the low prices. Potatoes are still quoted at the low prices, with a good supply arriving.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 2.—There are few price changes recorded during the week. The markets generally are steady and some lines continue to show firmness. Coffee and teas are in a strong position with an upward tendency. Shelled walnuts, almonds and pecans are firm under an active demand. Rolled oats are slightly higher but other cereals are ruling fairly steady. Currants are weak. Raisins hold firm under a limited demand. Rice quotations are lower. Sugar prices are firmly held at refiners' list. Some dealers are quoting this season's make of maple syrup and sugar which are lower than last year's prices. Domestic vegetables are moving slowly at lower prices.

Coffee Market Strong

Toronto.

COFFEE.—The strong tone that has been manifest in the coffee market since the first of the year is still in evidence. This is especially noted on the mild and finer grades. Spot stocks are at low ebb and there are indications for a strong market with a tendency for an upward movement for some time to come.

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The cereal market generally is holding fairly steady. Rolled oats have a slightly firmer tone and the price cutting that has been manifest on this line appears to have ceased. Some wholesalers have advanced their quotations, but millers' prices are still on the same basis of $3.50 in five-bag lots. The average price on rolled oats in single bag lots is $3.60 but some are quoting as high as $3.80.

Canned Goods Unchanged

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a good movement in canned vegetables and prices are ruling firm. There is a slight scarcity noted of early June and extra fine sifted peas in some quarters and there is a tendency for a shortage on these lines before the end of the season. Jams continue to show improvement in the demand, but mostly in small lots according to the demand for consumption.

Prunes Moving Freely

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUIT.—Prunes are the only particular line of dried fruit that is showing any real activity. At the present time they are down to pre-war prices. These low prices, which are being offered by the wholesalers, have accounted greatly for the increased activity. The demand for other lines of dried fruit is only moderate.

Oranges Are Lower

Winnipeg.

FRUITS.—A good demand for oranges continues as a result of the low prices. California navel oranges are quoted at $4.50 to $6.00 per case. Bananas are quoted at 12 cents per pound. Lemons range from $6.00 to $6.50.

Flour Unchanged

Winnipeg.

FLOUR.—There has been no change in quotations on flour this week and business is reported very quiet. Flour in cotton is quoted at $10.85 per barrel; jute bags, $10.65 per barrel.

Better Demand for Jams

Winnipeg.

JAMS.—The situation in the West has been in a bad condition during the past two weeks. It is reported that two or three cars arrived in a condition not up to standard, which was partly responsible for the low prices being quoted. The situation at this date has somewhat leveled itself and a feeling of confidence in present prices is now noticeable.

Shelled Walnuts Firm

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—Shelled walnuts maintain a firm upward tendency. Spot stocks are very low and shipments arriving are going into consumption very rapidly. There has been an advance of two cents per pound on shelled almonds during the week. This has been caused mainly by the recovery of exchange. Shelled brazils are reduced in price and lower prices are expected. Shelled pecans remain very firm. No. 1 shelled Spanish peanuts are somewhat easier and are now offered at a price lower than for several years.

Spices Are Firmer

Winnipeg.

SPICES.—Spices are firmer in tone on account of the increased buying in the United States and the improved condition in foreign exchange. Olives are quoted for spring delivery, which will be about May 1, at considerable lower prices than at present ruling. Olives are considerably cheaper this year, but glassware is costing the packer 30 per cent. more than last year's prices, which will have a tendency to hold present prices in glass.

COMPUTE MARGINS ON SALES

you have looked it over and studied it for a considerable time is that every constituent of the burden is difficult to arrive at; it can only be arrived at accurately by taking its proportion of sale-value; and thus to take the proportion of the sale-value is the simplest and safest method.

Probably you know that newspapers overstate the profits of merchants, and maybe you are one of those who resent the injustice thereof. Newspapers do so overstate primarily because: They call the total spread between cost and sale profit—not margin. They figure everything on cost. And you will acknowledge that 56 per cent. plus looks rather liberal as profit. Maybe it will look more conservative and fairer on the basis of 36 per cent. margin!

Perhaps the greatest secondary reason for figuring on sales is that thus you are more likely to sense the vast importance of getting enough on the finer and higher-grade goods and luxuries, to offset safely the necessarily meagre margin there can be earned on low-end merchandise. Then if you figure them all on the basis of the proportion of expense, loading and profit to the total that you get for your goods, not on your cost, you will have all figures based on the same premises.

The Greatest Single Cause of Failure

As you practise this thing, study it, reflect on it, gradually it will come home to you in forceful ways how and why this dual method of looking at figures and our loose way of expressing ourselves is the greatest single cause of our failure to make money in the grocery business.

Try to get the idea that in figuring on sales all calculations are based on portions of 100—what you get being always 100 per cent., and the only 100 per cent. in business. Thus figures are limited and simplified. Finally take this to heart as a clincher: All the big, successful merchants in the country in all lines, including the jobbers and manufacturers who sell your goods to you, figure their margins on sales. Two Factors that Help Fish Sales

"Many a Woman Buys Fish Because She Is Impressed With the Tempting Way in Which It Is Displayed," Says Harry Naylor, Manager of the Fish Department of Stanford's Meat Market, Montreal

By Staff Correspondent, Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Feb. 2.—Two special features are strikingly noticeable in the fish department of Stanford's Meat Market, 128 Mansfield Street, this city. These are two factors which the manager, Harry Naylor, believes to be of paramount importance in the sale of fish. First an attractive display, and secondly every evidence of quality. Both of these things Mr. Naylor claims to be absolutely essential in promoting the sale of fish.

The fish department, which is at the rear of the store, has the same rich appearance that characterizes this establishment. The displays of fish of all kinds are made on white enamelled trays placed in glass-fronted refrigerating counters. Behind these counters are other refrigerators and ice boxes where fish are kept for the replenishment of the stock in the counters.

A Well Lighted Store

This store is well lighted, a factor which in many cases lends an atmosphere of cleanliness, besides making the place inviting. People are always attracted by bright lights. At the same time the lighting system is so arranged that there is no glare to bother the eyes. In the center of the store the lighting is done by the indirect system, but behind the counters there are many drop lights, which are not noticeable from in front of the counters. A well lighted store not only makes the place attractive but lends a tone of quality which is an exceedingly valuable asset especially in the fish business. The effect is that a customer in that store cannot imagine any fish but of the finest quality being sold there. gives confidence.

The Parcel Carrier

The electric lights behind the count are screened from the view of the c tomers by overhead parcel carriers t hang down about two feet from the c ing and run along three sides of store. From the center of the store th carriers simply appear as a polished panel, hung from the ceiling which o adds to the attractiveness of the st When a customer makes a purchase asks that it be delivered, the clerk s ply wraps it up and places it on the tr elling belt above his head and it is ried out to the back store where it placed in the proper section for the c venience of the driver. In that way parcels are ready for delivery as soo ney are purchased and the distribution so systematized that there is nothing delay the deliveries.

What Display Does

The manager of the fish department in his store claims that perhaps the most important factor in the sale of fish is the ay in which it is displayed. "This is very oticeable sometimes," he remarked to a anadian Grocer representative, "when customer comes in with the intention f buying some meat and is so attracted y the display of fish that he or she hanges her mind and a fish sale is made. When the fish is cleaned and made ready or the pan or the oven and so displayed, people are ready then to buy it but to many the preparation of a fish dinner seems to entail an endless amount of work. The dealer can convince his customers that this is not so if he takes the trouble to make attractive his display of fish.

Quality Makes Steady Sales

"These attractive displays must be backed up by quality. When a customer once gets a poor piece of fish it is not only likely that she does not buy from that dealer again but in many cases she will refrain from using fish for some time, so that not only has the careless merchant lost the business but he has made it at least difficult for another merchant to procure the business. In fish quality counts for more than in perhaps any other line."

Montreal Butchers' Strike Will Not Affect Supply

Although Nearly Five Hundred Butchers Are Out it is Not Considered Serious—No Relief Yet in Sight. Employees Ask for Increase and a Reduction of Hours

MONTREAL, March 2.—(Special).—A strike affecting about five hundred butchers commenced on Monday in Montreal, and at the time of going to press continues, slightly augmented in numbers and with no immediate prospect of settlement. The employers claim the cause of the difference is that the men are asking for an increase of 10 cents an hour, with a reduction in hours. The men, on the other hand, assert that their employers seek to reduce their wages and increase their working time. The firms principally affected are Wm. Davies Co., Ltd.; the Canadian Packing Co., Ltd., and the Montreal Abattoirs, Ltd.

Will Not Affect Supply

Arthur Walker, of Canadian Packing Co., Ltd., informed Canadian Grocer representative that only about half of the two hundred and fifty employed by his company are out on strike. At the present time they are able to go on with their killing, although the output will be smaller. They expect to be able to meet all the demands of the trade. Mr. Walker said that at present there is no settlement in sight, but he expresses the opinion that the strike will not last for any length of time. "A demand has been made for an increase of 10c an hour in wages and a reduction in time from 48 hours to 44 hours per week, and the company cannot see its way clear to accept these terms," said Mr. Walker.

The management of Wm. Davies, Ltd., of Montreal, state that the strike is not affecting them as seriously as the daily newspapers intimate. In fact, one of the managers stated that the firm was not worrying in the least about the strike and that their output would not be affected seriously. They also confirmed the report that so far there is no relief to the situation in sight. The men met last Sunday and after discussing the situation decided to strike, which they did on Monday. The point of contention is the suggested decrease in wages by the employers against the demand of the butchers for an increase in wages.

Montreal Abattoir, Ltd., claim that their plant is not affected to the same extent as some of the others, since they have lost only about thirty or forty men out of a total of two hundred and these had not left because they were themselves dissatisfied, but because they did not care to work when their comrades were out. This company understood that demands had been made to other companies, but none had been made to them and their men were contented.

Strike May Not Last Long

The general opinion among the packers seems to be that the strike will not last long, since it is not a unanimous move on the part of the butchers. The packing companies seem to be in a position at the present time to almost disregard the stand taken by the men. The grocery and butcher trade are given the assurance that the effect of the strike will not be felt in the supplies at their disposal.

How the Sardine Is Made Boneless

By Richard Sansonnet

THE title "Boneless" applied to sardines aroused my curiosity to the highest pitch. How could there be sardines without bones? I didn't believe in the preternatural, but still I wished to get to the bottom of the mystery.

Ah, well! it turned out to be due simply to a special process of manufacture, or rather, I should say, a multitude of complicated processes, each differing from one another, for each manufacturer has his own process patented.

However, it is a very simple matter after all: You have only to draw out the fish-bone of the sardine without spoiling the sardine!

Two Methods

But how is this done?

Well, there are two methods before us. In the first case, the moment is chosen, when the sardine, its head having been taken off, has been left to be well dried in the sun. Then the bone is gently broken by bending the end of the tail, and is then drawn out of the other end by a pair of pincers. That is how the trick is done! The elasticity of the flesh keeps the tail in position and the fish does not appear to have undergone any operation; in the box the sardine appears intact!

But this process, which is in general use everywhere, offers one great inconvenience; for, as a matter of fact, in extracting the bone from the raw sardine, there are also drawn out at the same time some strips of the torn flesh inside, which is an undoubted injury to the quality of the sardine.

Certain manufacturers, of a most inventive genius, have devised a form of tweezers to cut out this backbone, which is so easily broken. They have also taken the trouble to secure a patent for the purpose of putting their manufacture more in the public eye.

This makes you smile, doesn't it? But it takes no more than this sometimes to make a fortune!

Another process is as follows: The fish is first cooked, and then boned after having been slightly congealed on leaving the cooking pan. The fishbone is broken at the tail and then is drawn out very easily by the help of little flat pincers, without dragging with it the slightest piece of flesh. You needn't be a great scientist to explain how the bone of a cooked sardine comes out more easily than that of a raw one.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 2.—The feature of the produce market this week is the firmer market for eggs. The supply of strictly fresh eggs is not as large as it has been and slightly higher prices are being asked in the country. The hog market shows a further weakness this week and prices quoted are lower. Dressed hogs are also a little lower. The butter market is firmer with an increased demand for supplies, but prices remain unchanged. The supply of cheese on hand in Montreal is not large but there is a good demand for export. The market for smoked meats remains unchanged. The condition of the lard market continues unsettled with lower prices quoted this week. The supply of fresh killed poultry is limited and storage supplies are called on to meet the demand.

BUTTER.—A firmer feeling prevails in the butter market on account of the increased demand for supplies for both local consumption and shipment to outside points. On the whole a fairly active trade is being done and prices hold firm, from 53 to 56 cents per pound for the finest creamery. Lower grades are selling from 50 to 51 cents.

Higher Prices for Eggs

Montreal.

EGGS.—There is a much stronger feeling in the egg market this week. This is attributed to the falling-off in the production as compared with the rather large supply that has been coming to hand in recent weeks. Higher prices are demanded at country points. The market throughout last week was active and a good amount of business was done. In wholesale business there has been an advance of two cents per dozen on eggs, but retail prices vary considerably and some quotations go as high as 75 and 80 cents per dozen for strictly fresh eggs. In most cases the retail price depends upon the source from which the grocer gets his supply.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 2.—Live hogs continue with a downward trend and prices are further reduced. Beef cattle, calves and lambs have developed a firmer tone with values slightly advanced. The consumption of eggs has increased to such proportions that the supply is hardly meeting the demand, this condition has resulted in a firmer market with prices higher. Poultry is firmer under a good demand and light receipts. Butter and cheese are ruling firm at unchanged quotations. Smoked hams and bacon are easy with quotations slightly lower. Salt and barrel meats show a decline in prices. Lard and shortening are easy and lower. Boiled hams also show a slight reduction.

Butter Steady to Firm

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market continues to rule steady to firm. The best quality Canadian butter is generally holding at 58 cents per pound, although some of the fresh-made brands are quoted as high as 60 to 62 cents per pound. These last quotations, however, are not general, and as the quantity is limited they have little bearing on market. Some further shipments of Danish and Argentine butter have arrived, the quality being about the same as a No. 2 grade, and are quoted from 50 to 54 cents.

Cheese Holds Frim

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The cheese market maintains its firm tone, but recently supplies have improved in moderate quantities. One dealer stated that he has a larger quantity than is required for his own trade and is offering it at 29½ cents per pound. The general quotation, however, is 31 cents to the retail trade. Stilton cheese is quoted at 35 cents.

Egg Market Firmer

Toronto.

EGGS.—The egg market has shown considerable strength since our last report. The demand at present is far greater than the supply and some days dealers have difficulty in procuring sufficient to fill their orders. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that the production has somewhat fallen off, but it is generally conceded that the reason for the shortage is due to the increase in the consumption since prices dropped from the high levels. American fresh eggs are being brought in to relieve the situation. These American eggs are of good quality, and can be laid down at around three cents per dozen less than the prices paid by dealers at country points. Quotations are advanced three cents per dozen, bringing the price to the retail trade 50 cents per dozen.

Boiled Hams Down One Cent

Toronto.

COOKED MEATS.—Boiled hams are slightly reduced in price under a fair demand for this season of the year. Ordinary trimmed hams are quoted at 53 cents to 55 cents per pound and the square trim at 57 cents. These quotations are one cent less than last week. Headcheese is also lower, now quoted at 13 cents per pound. Other lines are unchanged.

Fresh Pork Cuts Lower

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The uncertain condition that has marked the hog market for some time was again in evidence during the week. Prices were reduced to $13.75 on the fed and watered basis and packers are bidding 50c under this price for the balance of the week. Cattle are steady to firm, with values on good quality advanced 25 cents per hundred. Calves and lamb are firm, with prices slightly higher. Pork cuts are down one to two cents per pound.

FISH.—The fish business is fairly active, but some dealers report that the uncertain and mild weather is curtailing business to some extent. Outside merchants are not ordering as freely as they would if the weather was colder, and naturally the consumption is not as great as it would be under better weather conditions. Taking the business on the whole, however, it is comparing very favorably with last year. Quotations are steady to firm and are unchanged as follows:

PROVISIONS.—The market for smoked and cured meats is feeling the influence of the downward trend of the hog market and further reductions are manifest on some lines. Smoked hams, averaging up to 18 pounds, are quoted at 36½ cents per pound, which is a reduction of one-half cent. Prices on the heavier hams are irregular and change from day to day according to the quantity on hand by the different packers. Ordinary breakfast bacon is quoted at 40 cents to 45 cents per pound, and the special trimmed at 55 cents. Wiltshire smoked sides are down one to one and one-half cents per pound. Dry salt meats are reduced two cents per pound, and barrel meats are down $3.00 to $4.00 per barrel.

The Season's On for DAVIES Quality BOLOGNA

This is the time of the year when there is a heavy demand for a real good quality line of Bologna. This can be encouraged a great deal by featuring consistently a good quality line, and displaying it prominently and tastily on your counters or in your refrigerator. Try Davies' Bologna.

Book a Standing Order and get your Bologna regularly, thus be sure of always having fresh stock on hand.

Sausages

Any of the fresh Pork Sausages offered by Davies are real quality brands. Order by name:

Small Oxford,
New England,
Cambridge,
Little Pork.

Bolognas

There are different kinds of Bologna to suit almost every taste. These are known as follows:

Peerless (Bung),
Thick (Beef Bung),
Lakeside (Paraffined),
Ham (Small).

Drop us a postcard, and we will gladly send you quotations, and, if it is at all possible, we will have a salesman call upon you.

Mail orders given special attention.

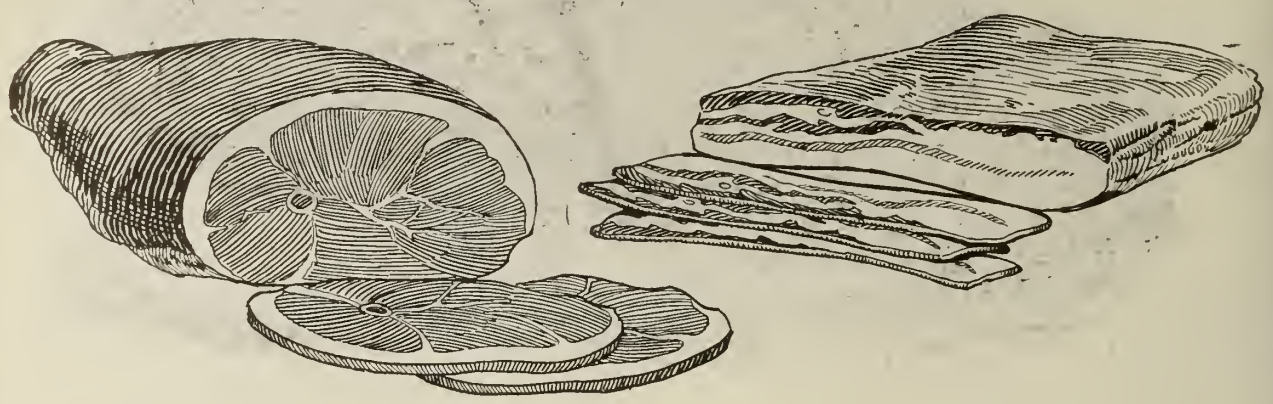
ROSE BRAND



Food Products Which Promote Sales—

The purveyor who supplies pure foods which are beyond comparison for quality and flavor is bound to increase his better class of trade.

Rose Brand are those pure foods.

Their wholesome richness and delicate appetite-tempting flavors is due to the fact that they are the choicest of selected foods, skilfully prepared under ideal and scrupulously sanitary conditions.

Rose Brand products never disappoint. Each sale makes and retains a customer.

National advertising has created a public demand for these superior pure foods. Capitalize it. Display Rose Brand products prominently. Sales will assuredly follow.

The show cards, window trims, hangers, folders, etc., which have been produced for the benefit of our purveyors, are strikingly handsome, beautifully colored pieces that have an almost irresistible appeal. Merchants can use them to great advantage in improving their food department and special display.

The record of each clerk

An up-to-date National Cash Register shows you exactly what each one of your clerks does every day. Adding counters on the register tell:

① How many customers each clerk waited on.

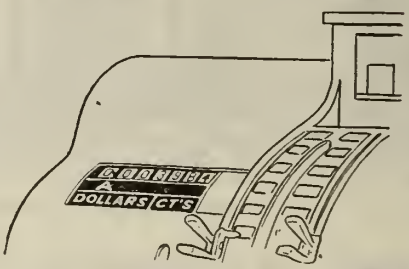
② The total amount of each clerk's sales.

These daily records show you which clerks are most industrious, which clerks sell the most goods, which clerks are most accurate.

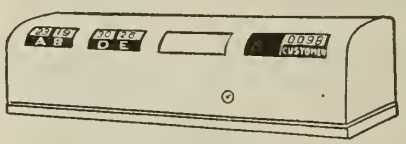
They enable you to fix wages on actual selling ability.

They give you the figures needed for a bonus or profit-sharing system.

These clerks' records, together with the many other printed and added records made by an up-to-date National Cash Register, enable you to control your business.



This adding counter, at the left side of the register, shows that Clerk A took in $39.84 during the day. Similar counters show what the other clerks took in.



These adding counters, at the front of the register just above the cash drawers, show how many customers each clerk waited on, and the total number of customers.

We make cash registers for every line of business

"Yes, sir, and there's a good reason for it too. Since we installed the BOWSER Oil Filtering Outfit the men in the engine room have been competing to see who could save the most oil. They've cleaned the journal boxes, put pans under them to catch the drips and then put the salvage through the BOWSER Oil Filtering Outfit. We are now using the oil over and over again that was formerly wasted."

The BOWSER Oil Filtering Outfit is simple, compact, economical and reliable.

DAY & MARTIN, LTD.

The House with a History.

In recommending Day & Martin's Wax Shoe Polish, in the Tin with the "Tab," you may be sure that you are offering a polish which has just the points that give satisfaction to your customers, and make them regular users.

1. It responds instantly to the polishing brush.
2. The shine is bright and dense.
3. The DAY & MARTIN shine remains bright beneath the day's dust, so that a flick and rub with a cloth restores the brightness, without any further immediate application.
4. It is waterproof, and throws off the rain-drops like a "duck's back."
5. Only the highest grade Waxes and Pure Turpentine are used in its manufacture.
6. It is so thoroughly British.
7. The "temper-saving" Tin, can be opened at once by means of the simple "Tab" device.

Here is the Tin.
The Tin with the "Tab."

Sell your customers Day & Martin's Wax Shoe Polish, and you will still further add to your reputation for always supplying the Right goods.

Mr. RETAIL MERCHANT: Would You Like to Employ an Expert Bookkeeper at $10.00 a Month?

Without any further trouble on your part than making out your sales slip when your customer makes a purchase, would you like this bookkeeper—

I. To give your customer, with each purchase, without offending him, a statement of the full amount he owes you to date?

II. When a customer wishes to pay his account it gives you, within 30 seconds, a complete statement showing every item purchased?

III. To make you out a yearly statement of your affairs to conform to the requirements of the Dominion Income Tax Act within three hours after you have taken stock?

IV. After 15 months to continue to give you this service for nothing as long as you remain in business?

That is what the Barr Register will do. Write us and let us demonstrate.

The Service that Counts

To Manufacturers

Think of your business—

Now think of all the news appearing in the newspapers of Canada and United States relating to your business.

Now imagine that news coming to your desk promptly, regularly—do you not see advantages and opportunities in a service of this kind?

We supply many customers with important news and they find it saves them time—often money, and keeps them in touch with all that is going on in their line of business.

When writing for rates let us have some information on your business and we can then outline a service that will benefit your whole organization.

POTATOES EASY AND LOWER

Potatoes continue with a downward trend and there is no likelihood that conditions will change. With the large crop in Canada and no export demand producers can hardly expect to get anywhere near the price of a year ago. In some sections in Ontario potatoes are selling as low as fifty cents per bag, but many farmers say that they will feed them up sooner than market them at such a low price.

The same condition practically exists in the United States, so there is little prospect of that country importing Canadian potatoes as has been the case in other years. Steuben County in New York, the second largest producer of potatoes in the United States, expects to have a surplus of several thousand bushels of potatoes this spring for which there is likely to be no market on account of the low prices in prospect.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

PURITY

Canadians Demand Pure Maple Products

You know from experience that the quick sale of Maple Syrup and Maple Sugar depends on its purity. Moreover the Canadian Government demands absolute purity in the merchandising of this national product if the name "Maple" is used on the container.

Every Government test has been successfully passed by

Old Colony Maple Syrup

"Old Colony" has that delicious, pure Maple flavor, which can be obtained only by using the first run of sap. As everyone handling Maple Syrup knows, qualities vary, and Old Colony is of the highest standard.

Our Maple Sugar

Our Maple Sugar is the same stock as "Old Colony" Maple Syrup, only boiled to that exact degree where it becomes perfect Maple Sugar, with enough moisture retained to keep it from getting too hard and dry with age.

Part of Your Stock in Trade

Clean, bright merchandise, immaculate display counters and dustless floors are a real asset to your business. The regular use of Imperial Floor Dressing is the simplest and easiest way to attain such desirable results.

Imperial Floor Dressing does prevent dust from rising. It holds it to the floor where it can be conveniently swept up and entirely removed. As a cleaner and preservative for wood, linoleum or oil cloth, Imperial Floor Dressing is unequalled.

One gallon of Imperial Floor Dressing will treat a surface of from 500 to 700 square feet. It does not gum or evaporate and one application will give satisfactory service for weeks. It keeps your store looking right at all times. Makes it an attractive shopping centre for the most particular customer.

Use Imperial Floor Dressing on your floors and display it prominently on your shelves. You can easily turn a good stock into profit. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for a demonstration and be convinced.

IMPERIAL FLOOR DRESSING

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

AS ONE BUSINESS MAN TO ANOTHER

The aim of the MacLean Publishing Company is to give our readers the finest type of editorial service—the best market service and the most up-to-date methods and ideas as aids to better merchandising.

We are confident you will want to renew your subscription for 1921—for, as many men have expressed it in renewing, they would not want to continue in business if the market information of MacLean business newspapers were not available.

Every dollar saved in renewing subscriptions means just one dollar more that we can devote to bettering our editorial and market services. The large majority of merchants realize this and when they do not renew promptly—it is due to an oversight. We feel in bringing the plain facts to their attention they will not, in their own interests, permit us to waste money in persuading them to renew when they intend doing so from the first.

In the present indefinite state of markets and prices you will not wish to be without a single issue — which will happen if you do not renew promptly.

If you will help us in this way we can serve you better and to serve our readers better is the daily effort of every member of our staff.

Renew promptly in your own interest.

Business Is Just As Good As You Make It

Hysteria and lack of courage will never make business go forward to normal. Neither will protesting that business is all right bring that condition to pass.

The surest way to good business is to carry on, as though it were, to plan courageously, to build determinedly and by the force of your own confidence to carry your own organization and your own trade with you.

Right now more business is being lost than is being done—all for lack of understanding. What are you doing to better it? Merchants everywhere are waiting for their cue from you.

Entrust them with your confidence; build up their faith in the future security of business so they in turn will go after business.

A "Buyers' strike" can't last forever—there's business to be had. Show your dealers you are behind them.

Take your merchant into your confidence through his business newspaper. He is the actual outpost of industry—the ultimate salesman to the buying public. If he prospers you prosper. It will pay you to help him build his business.

He's reading his trade newspaper to-day for news of your product—searching the editorial pages for ideas and the advertising section for your plans.

The merchant is ready to carry on to normal—WILL YOU SHOW HIM THE WAY?

Enormous Expansion in Food Exports

Comparisons of Totals for Nine Months Ending December, 1920, With Corresponding Period in 1910, Show Tremendous Increases in Exports of Foodstuffs From Canada—Some Interesting Figures

CANADA'S export trade in foodstuffs has expanded at an enormous rate in the past ten years. Apart altogether from the abnormal demand for foodstuffs from Great Britain and European countries during the period of the war, comparing the year 1910 with 1920, the latter shows a tremendous increase over the former. Last year the export demand for goods was not so abnormal of course as in the months of the war, and during the time that Canada had thousands of her men overseas. Consequently the period under review, that is the nine months ending December 1920, compares with the same period in 1910, on a basis nearer what might be termed normal than any period since the opening of hostilities in 1914. Certain commodities have of course not been sent out of the country in these last nine months of 1920 in anything like the proportion that they were in the years immediately preceding, but the large gains made indicate that Canada has greatly enlarged her export business and established it on a permanent basis. Canadian manufacturers are in the export markets to stay, and they do not contemplate letting trade of this kind, that, in many instances, primarily developed out of the great European conflict, slip out of their hands. Canadian manufactured foodstuffs have become established in the British and European markets, and their reputation has become sufficiently popular to guarantee a growing demand.

Heavy Increase in Canned Milk

Comparisons of figures for the period ending December, 1910, with the same period in 1920 are interesting, the gains, in practically every instance, being several times greater. Condensed and canned milk and cream, for example, were exported in this period in 1920 to the extent of $6,997,697, as compared with $395,551 in the corresponding period of 1910. Canada's trade in this regard, has, as is evident from these figures, increased tremendously, developing a trade that ten years ago was only in its infancy. Canada's apples have always been in great demand in the Old Country, and the heavy apple crop in the Dominion last year resulted in increased shipments, figures for the nine months' period totalling $4,742,189, as against $1,113,008, in the same months in 1910. Over a million dollars' worth of dried apples also went out of the country last year, the exact total being $1,531,892 as against $125,521 in 1910. Berries of all kinds were exported to the amount of $371,884 last year, as against $92,821 in 1910. Comparative amounts for canned and preserved fruits in 1920 and 1910 are respectively $607,447 and $179,769, representing a very considerable gain last year.

Four Times Greater

A very heavy increase is shown in the figures for flour, the export trade in this commodity being more than four times as much as in the corresponding period in 1910. Of course, it is generally known the demand for flour overseas during the war was excessive, but this abnormal inquiry fell away last year, and now wheat is being exported to the elimination of flour. In spite of this fact, however, last year in the nine months ending December, Canada exported wheat flour to the extent of $46,111,590, as compared with $10,170,120 in 1910. On the other hand, it seems that cereals of the manufactured kind had a bigger market in 1910 than in 1920, the total in the first mentioned period amounting to $1,302,874, compared with $632,948 in 1920. Potatoes filled a large export order for Canada, the total for the nine months under review running over eight million dollars, the exact figures being $8,851,086. In 1910, the total for the same period was $556,722. Canned vegetables were not heavily exported last year, the amount being $348,407, as compared with $28,016 in 1910.

In the provision markets of the Old Country, Canada's products have an enviable reputation. Cheese takes first place with a total of $33,707,317, for these nine months last year as against $19,186,399 in 1910. Next come bacon and hams with an export of $23,319,104 in 1920, as compared with $5,658,869 in 1910. Butter was exported to the amount of $4,491,055 as against $685,458, eggs, $3,670,643, as compared with $23,613, lard $358,262 as against $24,577, beef $7,196,208, as against $77,694, and honey $7,733 as compared with $862.

Canada's total fish exports in the nine months under review totalled $26,689,711 as against $12,136,339 in the same period of 1910.

Exporting Macaroni

Two commodities in the way of foodstuffs that were not exported from Canada in 1910, and that last year, and the years of the war, found a very large account overseas, are macaroni and confectionery. Macaroni, spaghetti, and vermicelli were not manufactured on this side before the war to any large extent. Export in 1920, nine months, totalled $180,703. Exports of confectionery in this period totalled $1,120,117. Canada's export of sugar amounted to $11,809,753, and in the period in 1910 was only $48,243.

NEW PURE FOOD BUILDING

Toronto.—Space is being rapidly reserved in the new Pure Food Building to be erected this year on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds. Firms that have used the old Manufacturers' Building are reserving space in the new one and several firms that have not used space in recent years have arranged to go in.

The Food Products Association is taking the matter of space reservation up with the various exhibitors. The allotment of the space will later be taken up by the individual firms with the Exhibition Board.

The Food Products Association have selected the following as a Building Committee to assist the architects when necessary: H. N. Cowan, president the Cowan Co.; Joseph Ruddy, vice-president Canada Starch Co.; Charles Edmonds, general manager Christie, Brown Co., and Brig.-General Gunn, president Gunns Limited.

The City Council is looking forward to calling for tenders for the erection of the new building within the near future.

SWEET POTATO CROP SPOILED

Although Alabama produced 13,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes in 1920, only 400 cars were shipped out of the state as a large portion of the crop was lost through improper storing. The second largest sweet potato producing state in the Union, Tennessee, produced 4,000,000 bushels, but shipped 1,100 cars.

Better Export Demand for the Cheaper Salmons

Vancouver.—(Special.) — Fred Gosse, of Harry Hall & Co., Ltd., states that the export demand for lower-priced canned salmon is steadily improving, satisfactory shipments having been made recently. The improvement in exchange has been a factor in this. "In Canada," says Mr. Gosse, "the stocks of sockeye, cohoes and red springs are very low in 1-lb. tins, and there is no sockeye in halves to be had at all." The Canadian demand is developing also.

COMPARISON OF PRICES IN GROCERY COMMODITIES 1918-1921

Correct Packing is Chief Factor

A Thorough Understanding of Proper and Efficient Packing is Essential for the Successful Promotion of an Export Trade—How to Proceed in Exporting to British and Foreign Ports

THE question of the proper procedure to pursue in exporting to British or foreign ports very often baffles the Canadian manufacturer who has an opportunity to engage in export trade and who has not done much in this regard. In order that this information might be secured first-hand, a Canadian Grocer representative interviewed officials of some of the steamship companies. Inquiries from foreign countries indicate that many Canadian manufacturers have an opportunity to enlarge their export business and the correct method in packing and shipping goods in trade of this kind is very important, much depending, particularly in first shipments, on the care taken.

Consult Transportation Companies

The first step to be taken is to get in touch with the foreign department of the transportation company, giving the number of packages and the nature of the commodity, specifying measurements, weights and the destination. The carrying company then arranges for ocean space, providing permits for the same. These permits are furnished in sufficient time to enable the goods to arrive at the seaboard in order to connect with the specified date of sailing. In no case, however, shall an agent guarantee that property will clear on a particular steamer or date. When large shipments have been booked for clearance over a specified period, permits only will be supplied by foreign freight department at Montreal, when confirmation is received from the steamship company interested that space has been reserved on certain vessels. The permit indicates quantities which must be shipped out between specified dates.

Packing Most Important

In the various factors entering into an export business, the one of packing and shipping is particularly important. Exporters in all countries have sustained substantial losses, both in the way of goods and also in repeat orders, through careless and improper packing. When goods arrive in a damaged condition, it often necessitates lengthy adjustments, resulting in loss of market. It also creates dissatisfaction and may give the importer opportunity of refusing to accept the goods. Complications of a difficult character can often arise from lack of proper packing, and complications and adjustments of any kind, in an export business, are usually expensive.

In the consideration of correct packing first thing to have in mind is safety. Exporters should consider the additional handling by forwarders, and endeavor to visualize what the case must go through, before arriving at the importer's warehouse. The exporter must guard against all the hazards of domestic shipping, and be assured of the strength of the case or container to protect the goods against the considerably increased handling of ocean shipping and the by no means gentle handling of stevedores, when loading or discharging the ship. Cargo pressure must also be considered, that is pressure that is the result of rough sailing. Messages of advice printed on the cases, such as "handle with care," "use no hooks," etc., might as a general rule be omitted because little attention is given to them.

Loading the Ship

Cases are usually loaded aboard ship in slings, and hoisted aboard with the aid of a steam winch, when the winch takes up the sling, the cases are rolled into a bundle. Considerable pressure is thus exerted on all the cases—particularly the outter ones.

The sling is brought over the hatch, prior to lowering away into the ship's hold, and it is not an unknown thing that this lowering process sometimes becomes a dropping process. Consequently, it is evident the care that must be taken in packing. The case that can stand these operations both in loading and discharging must of a necessity be a sound one.

A shipping case can, however, be unnecessarily strong, and if so will consequently increase ocean freight charges. Ocean freight rates are made up on a weight or measurement basis, ship's option. By ship's option, the steamship companies make their calculations based on 42 cubic feet to the ton. If the goods are light and take more than 42 cubic feet to the ton, they may on their own option charge on a measurement basis. If the goods are heavy and less than 42 cubic feet to the ton, the charges may be fixed on a weight basis. Unnecessary weight in a case is then to be avoided.

Proper Packing Builds Trade

In England it is the custom, particularly in piece goods, to have the goods prepared by professional export packers, who make a business of it. Proper packing has helped to build up England's tremendous export trade. In Canada, perhaps, it is not possible to engage professional packers, but if Canada's export business is to expand greater care must be given to this important feature.

Experience will teach the exporter the proper and the most economical size of case, both for efficient handling and minimum freight rates. A thorough knowledge and a better understanding of the packing and shipping problem is to-day absolutely necessary to the successful growth of a Canadian export trade.

HOW CANADIAN EXPORTERS CAN PROFIT FROM THE EXAMPLE OF ENGLISH PACKING

DISCUSSING with a large importer of British and foreign foodstuffs the question of correct packing of export shipments, in order to insure safe delivery, a representative of Canadian Grocer was told that the Canadian exporter could profit a great deal by following the example of Old Country shippers. "We scarcely have any consignments from England that do not arrive in perfect condition," he said. "The English shipper has made a study of this important factor, with the result that the best methods in packing goods have been adopted. Importing, as we do, a great many lines that come to us in bottles, we never have any trouble. These goods come in either cases or casks. The cases are packed four dozen to the case, and the casks twelve dozen to the cask.

"Domestic packers have very often used a very thin wood, with results, in a great many cases rather disastrous. A thin wood will not stand the rehandling, and shippers on this side have learned or must learn that the strongest possible cases or casks must be used for overseas delivery. In addition to the cases and casks arriving from the Old Country being of the strongest wood, they are all very strongly coopered.

"Particular care of course must be given to lines that are affected by climate, and the attention that is given to goods of this character, means everything in the delivery of them in first-class shape. Canadian exporters can learn a good deal from the way Old Country goods are shipped, and are well advised to follow them as completely as possible."

Selling in Mediterranean Countries

W. McL. Clarke, Canadian Trade Commissioner, Tells Canadian Exporters Some Points to Observe if They Want to do Business in the Mediterranean—Must Use the Language of the Countries

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, March 7.—A representative of Canadian Grocer interviewed W. McL. Clarke, Canadian Trade Commissioner, while he was in Vancouver. Discussing trade possibilities, the Trade Commissioner said:

"As the market in Mediterranean countries is not unlimited, and competition is very keen, it becomes necessary for our manufacturers who wish to export to go about their business in a more systematic way than they have done to date.

"It must be remembered," he said, "that Germany, Great Britain and Italy had the Mediterranean trade almost exclusively to themselves before the war, and the Canadian and United States merchants were looked upon as newcomers without experience by the importers generally. Up to date, I must frankly state, our Canadian exporters have not done a great deal to remove this impression. Letters to Levantine houses are seldom written in the language of the foreign buyer, not even in French, which is the language of commerce in the Levant generally. Furthermore, prices are not quoted in the metric system of weights and measures, notwithstanding the fact that the metric system is in universal use throughout Europe.

Must Use Proper Method

"If Canada is to seriously consider the question of building up export business," stated Mr. Clarke, "it will be imperative to use either the particular language spoken by the merchant addressed, or at least use French, which is the universal commercial language for practically all parts of Europe."

Mr. Clarke related one experience of the kind of attitude that will not build up foreign business. One salesman from this continent mentioned to him that he would in all probability remain in the Levant for five years for his firm, but wouldn't learn their —— language, further volunteering the statement, "If they want to buy from me, they'll have to talk Yoo-nited States."

Tact, Courtesy and Salesmanship

During the war and following the war Canada and the United States got a lot of business that ordinarily would have gone elsewhere. There were some exporters who gathered an entirely erroneous opinion of the hold they had on the markets, and with conditions approaching the normal those foreign buyers who were treated in a high-handed manner will revert to their old connections as early as possible. It will take tact, courtesy, and salesmanship to hold any advance made during the unsettled period just passed. Mr. Clarke further stated that quotations to Mediterranean countries should be in metric weights and measures, should be made c.i.f. foreign port to which the goods would be consigned, and the date of delivery should be given and most religiously observed.

Send Investigators

Unless these points receive the attention they merit, Mr. Clarke states that there is a slim possibility of Canada retaining the large business which has been built up between this country and Italy, Greece, Spain and Egypt. The commissioner also emphasizes the necessity of sending investigators to personally look over the ground before a serious attempt is made to enter the market.

Window Display of Sugar Increases Sales in Montreal Store

Assertion That Sugar is Too Much a Staple Article to Mean Anything in a Display is Proved a Fallacy—How One Merchant Displayed it

MONTREAL.—(Special.)—To the layman it may seem surprising that a window dressed with nothing but sugar, in its various packages, would noticeably increase the sale of this line, which is one of the every-day requirements of every household. But the merchant knows its selling power even on such a staple line. This has been shown to be the case by one of the Montreal grocers, who has for the last two weeks had his large window dressed solely with sugar.

A pyramid of sugar cartons is built up at the rear of the window and in front of this is a large framed and colored picture of one of the refineries. Many cartons are spread out on purple and orange crepe paper and around the front of the window are small piles of sugar, each with a card naming the grade of the sugar. The lighting is done by four stand-lamps, each with frosted globes, which bear the trade mark of the sugar displayed. At night the four lamps blink alternately, and so attract the attention of the passersby.

In speaking of the success of this display the manager of this store said to a Canadian Grocer representative:

"The mere fact that we have a striking display of sugar in our window has noticeably increased the sales of what is generally regarded as a line so stable that no effort to increase sales would pay. However, some people are so forgetful that they need to fall over a thing before they see it or remember it, and so we have noticed not once or twice, but many times during the last week that customers come in, give their orders and are just about to go out when they notice the window, and say, 'Oh, sugar! I need sugar. Send me some with that order.' If it hadn't been for the display that customer would have got home before she remembered that she needed sugar and if some corner grocery did not get the sale would have at least had to make a special trip for the sugar that should have gone with the first order. We have noticed this repeatedly lately and also noticed that we have sold more sugar, particularly in package lots, and also increased sales of tea-blocks. A thing like that makes the grocer ask himself the question if there are not great possibilities in increasing the sales of lines that are thought to be too well established to be made a feature. One thing is very evident, that it pays to feature one line at a time when dressing a window."

Sales Increased by One-Third

Canadian Grocer was informed that during the two weeks that this grocer featured sugar, he sold a third as much more sugar than he had done in the two weeks previous. It seems that the very fact that the sugar was there and forced the customers to think of sugar when they entered the store was responsible for the bigger sales. It is not that it increased the demand for sugar or its consumption, but it simply took advantage of every opportunity for a sale of sugar. The same might be said of almost any line that is well known and in common use.

Easter Is The Season to Make A Special Window Display

A forceful spring window display. Lilies help to carry out the Easter spirit.

WITH possibly the exception of the Christmas season, Easter is the retail grocer's best opportunity for pushing the sales on practically every line of foodstuff.

To many people Easter Sunday is considered a day of feasting in much the same manner as Christmas day, and for that reason they are open to make purchases on almost any article of food when it is placed before them in an attractive manner.

Window displays at this season can be made very striking and profitable as practically all lines can be featured. Fresh fruits and vegetables are just arriving, both imported and domestic hot-house. Then there are olives, fruits in cans and glass, table raisins and nuts. No table is considered without a salad of some kind; suggest canned chicken, lobster, tuna fish, canned pineapple, etc. The suggestion of something for a salad will instantly bring to mind a bottle of salad dressing or the ingredients to make it. Then of course there is bacon and ham and eggs which are always associated with the Easter season.

Many merchants make a sideline of flowers and have proven to themselves that it is indeed a profitable one. Other merchants do not handle flowers as a regular line, but at Easter always put in a stock of lilies, these not only form a source of revenue but add greatly to the decoration of the store and windows.

With Easter two weeks away it is not too early for the merchant to lay his selling plans for the biggest season on record.

"The Retailer Has Himself to Blame"

No Justification for the Merchant's Complaint That the Manufacturer Does Not Allow Him Sufficient Profit, According to Hutchinson & Foster, Alliston, Ont.—Should Have a Fair Profit for a Day's Work

"THE retail grocer has himself to blame when he complains that the manufacturer does not allow him sufficient profit," stated J. A. Hutchinson, of Hutchinson and Foster, retail grocers, Alliston, Ont., to a Canadian Grocer representative. "It is the usual custom among grocers to keep the selling price of an article down to almost a bare living margin and when a manufacturer or wholesaler gives a special discount or price, many retailers figure immediately it is a good opportunity to cut the price to their customers. The manufacturer naturally wishes to have his product sold at a uniform price, so he figures that as many retailers cannot be depended on to sell at the price that the manufacturer sets, he takes most of the profit and sells to the merchant at a price that will keep him from cutting, and allow him just a bare living profit."

A Fair Profit for a Day's Work

Mr. Hutchinson believes in getting a fair profit for a day's work and if a manufacturer gives an extra discount, that discount should be considered an addition to his income and not used as a leverage to obtain customers from other stores. "Mark all goods on a fair margin of profit, sell quality goods and give the customers good service and it will not be necessary to cut prices in order to get business.

"Another thing," continued Mr. Hutchinson, "a merchant must know his average profit every week if he is to lay up any savings. A profit must be made on every article sold, and the total average profit on all sales must be known every week. There is no use in saying that I can sell a little less this week and expect to make it up next week, because it can't be done. The profit on the rapid selling of staple lines is so narrow that no one line can bear the share of overhead that another line should carry."

Figuring the Gross Margin

The method of getting at the average gross margin on the selling price as adopted by Hutchinson and Foster is very interesting and simple. A book is ruled with several columns, in which are entered all purchases. The first column to the left is the date of purchase, next from whom purchased, number of invoice, amount of invoice, when paid, how paid (draft, cheque or cash), name of article, freight, gross cost, selling price, gross margin and per cent. of profit on selling price. For example, a shipment of biscuits is received. The total amount of the invoice is $20.71. These goods when sold should bring $22.05. To this amount is added the charge for empties, but as these empties represent an investment upon which no profit is made, the charge for the empties, which in this case was $3.80, is added to the total selling price of the invoice, which makes a total of $25.55, the total amount which must be received for the biscuits. Subtracting the amount of the invoice from the total selling price leaves a gross margin of $4.84 or a gross margin of 18 per cent. on the selling price.

Allowing for Shrinkage

In figuring the total selling price, Mr. Hutchinson pointed out that if there is a possibility for shrinkage it must be allowed. For instance, on biscuits he receives a discount of two per cent. This amount he figures takes care of the breakage and it is not taken into account when figuring the selling cost. On cheese he figures there is a shrinkage of three pounds on a whole cheese in the cutting and in slicing bacon and cooked meats, he figures it adds two cents per pound to the cost.

For recapitulation, Hutchinson and Foster have another book ruled in columns as follows:

Date, amount received on account, cash sales, total cash for the day, credit sales, total sales, paid out for merchandise, salaries, light and heat, sundries, total paid out, sales for week, total sales for year to date and average daily sales.

A Daily Record

Each page in the book represents one month's business and the total of each column is carried forward to the beginning of the next month. A record such as this shows the firm at the end of each day a complete record of the day's business and for the year up to date.

"If a merchant is careful in his mark-up and keeps a correct record of all his business transactions, I cannot see how he can fail to make money. Of course, if he has a large stock at the present time when the market is falling, he is sure to lose money; but for our own part, we have been keeping stocks as low as possible for some months and are now in a position to follow the prices downward," concluded Mr. Hutchinson.

Amendment Is Made to Foods And Drug Act

According to a recent order-in-council an amendment has been made to the Food and Drugs Act. The amendment is in regard to the regulation in the act providing that foods shall be deemed misbranded, if, in package form, sealed by the manufacturer or producer, they do not contain on the outside of the package the name and address of the manufacturer or producer and correct particulars re the contents in terms of weight, measure or number, when the package and contents exceed two ounces. The amendment states:

"The Governor-General in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Health, is pleased to make the following regulation: the operation of sub-section F, section 5, of the Food and Drugs Act, 1920, is hereby deferred to the first day of January, 1922."

Protests were made by certain manufacturers of soft drinks and bottled waters, and the amendment is the result of their representations.

Indian Government Should Reciprocate

Considerable Opposition is Heard Against the Export Tax on Tea Imposed by the Indian Government—Letter of a Representative of Western Grocers Ltd., Vancouver, Opens Bombardment

VANCOUVER.—(Special.)—A letter written by Mr. McLean, of the Western Grocers, Limited, Vancouver, to the Indian Planters' Gazette of Calcutta seems to have been the opening gun for a bombardment against the export tax on tea imposed by the Indian Government. The letter follows:

Dear Sir:—

In reading over your editorials of May 15th, in which ways and means of stimulating trade for Indian teas are discussed, you very justly pointed out that inasmuch as Great Britain and Canada had made a preference in favor of British-grown teas that other British possessions should follow suit in like manner.

It has just occurred to the writer, whose firm handles several thousand chests of India tea each year, that it is not out of order to suggest that your Indian Tea Association look into the matter of the present export duty of 1 rupee 8 annas per hundred pounds. Inasmuch as Canada has made a preferential tariff in favor of British-grown teas, the export duty on Indians should be reduced to those countries giving a preference to British-grown teas.

The Customs duty on teas in Canada at the present time is 7 cents per pound on British-grown teas, and 10 cents per pound on Javas, Japans and China teas. This is already having the effect of practically keeping Javas out of this market, as their prices would have to be three cents per pound, grade for grade, under Indians and Ceylons to permit them to compete.

If India and Japan were to reduce their export duties to Canada in like manner it would still further tend to absolutely close Javas out of this market.

This is certainly a question worthy of the consideration of your Indian Tea Association.

Thanking you for space,

Yours respectfully,

TEA DEPARTMENT,
Western Grocers, Limited.

After publication of this letter various other firms took up the question of more reciprocity between the Indian Government and the Canadian Government. In answer to one of these the Gazette writes editorially:

A Countervailing Duty

"It can not be very gratifying to the Canadian Government that the Government of India should offset this preference by exacting an export tax which can only be regarded as a countervailing duty. A Canadian statesman might reasonably look on the question in this way. For the benefit of an Empire-grown product Canada is sacrificing revenue to the extent of three cents a pound on tea imported to the Dominion and the Indian and Ceylon Governments take advantage of this and appropriate part of the revenue sacrificed by Canada by levying a countervailing export duty. Thus Java, China and Japan teas obtain a certain amount of compensation for the higher Canadian duty, and the sacrifice of revenue made by Canada is in part rendered nugatory. Fiscally this Indian policy is indefensibly wrong.

Needs Concessions

"It is notorious that never before in its history has Indian tea so urgently needed all the advantage that can be secured for it in competition with foreign grown tea and it is getting that advantage from the British and Canadian Governments—yet the Governments of India and Ceylon in the countries of production pursue exactly the opposite policies. If the full duties were imposed on all Canadian imports, the amount of tea imported into Canada would not fall off. The change would simply be that less British grown tea and more Javas, Chinas and Japans would be imported. This is a matter that affects the Indian and Ceylon Governments, not the British and Canadian Governments. The Indian and Ceylon Governments have no right to profit by the sacrifices made by other British Governments. In justice, the export tax should be abolished all round; failing that, it should at least be abolished to those British countries that give us a preference."

Reducing Production

The reports from India and Ceylon indicate that if the present tea prices continue a great number of tea plantations will be in the hands of receivers. The India Tea Association is giving serious consideration to the future prospects. They are planning at least 20 per cent. reductions in the production of teas. If through a series of conditions to which the Indian Government contributes, the tea planters are thrown into bankruptcy, there will not be any export teas to tax after a while.

CANADIAN GOODS WANTED

That there are possibilities for export trade with the United Kingdom is shown by a letter just received by Canadian Grocer from a prominent importer in Lancashire, England, in regard to food products. "I am desirous," he says, "of obtaining exclusive agencies for the United Kingdom of Canadian canned fruit, vegetables and fish, confectionery or any other commodities that would be suitable to the grocery, provision and confectionery trade."

Where Does the Publisher Get Off?

His Rights Are Seldom Respected in the Matter of Contracts—Expected to Reduce His Rates and Give Better Service at the Same Time—Time That the Space-Buyer Played Fair With Press

LAST May there was a director's meeting called by one of the leading farm paper publishers. The record of business booked was submitted. It showed a splendid volume of advertising lined up for 1921, in fact, it was one hundred and two per cent. better than ever before.

The president addressed the meeting as follows:

"Boys, now that they are coming our way, we should do the things that are necessary to put this paper so thoroughly 'over the top,' that its supremacy can never be disputed.

"Let us invest this splendid income in making improvements that will give the advertiser the best proposition there is for the money in our field. Let us make it so good that there never can be any question about his coming back."

Accordingly, plans were perfected for a 20 per cent. increase in circulation.

CANADA'S FOOD EXPORTS

IN this issue of Canadian Grocer there are articles appertaining to Canada's export trade, and urging upon exporters the necessity of careful packing in business of this kind. The opening article in this number compares Canada's food exports in the past year with that of 1910, and shows in a striking way the wonderful growth of Canada's foreign and British connection in this regard. Exports have expanded many times in the past ten years, and the fact that comparisons have no reference to the abnormal demand of the war years indicates something of the permanence and extent of this business.

That there are even greater possibilities of developing this trade on the part of Canadian manufacturers of foodstuffs there is no doubt. Further expansion will undoubtedly follow, and every effort should be put forth by Canadian manufacturers to capture as much of this trade as possible. The export business of many industries in this Dominion is just beginning, and with particular attention directed to this important department, giving special care and attention to the packing and shipping of goods, there is wide scope for development.

The organization of the Niagara Fruit Growers, Ltd., will do much to build up an export trade for Canada in fruits. It is the intention of the new association to go after trade of this kind, selling such fruits as peaches, plums, etc., in the United Kingdom to an extent that will take care of all the surplus crop in the Niagara district.

RE PURCHASE AT LOWER PRICE

A SUBSCRIBER in commenting on the fact that many retailers and also wholesalers are not making their selling prices consistent with replacement values says in part:

> "In our opinion the return of good business must await the time when stocks bought at high prices are cleaned from wholesalers' warehouses and from retailers' shelves. As goods will not move rapidly when marked on the old cost basis, every merchant should look the situation in the eye, re-price all goods at the lower price basis, and thereby do all in his power to hasten the re-establishment of sound business transactions."

Undoubtedly many retail merchants and wholesalers as well are slow to bring down prices in line with lower costs. Some retailers especially, lament that they cannot sell an article at a profit below what it cost, they seem to overlook the fact that the same article can be repurchased at a lower price. Selling an article below the cost price if it cannot be replaced at a price that would show a profit would be an actual loss, but if it can be replaced at a price to show a profit then the sale should be considered profitable. To express this more clearly, we will say that a merchant has in stock some canned lobster that cost him 45 cents per tin and retailed at 60 cents. Lobster dropped so that the cost was 30 cents per tin. The merchant should then sell his stock at say 40 cents and it would be profitable, because he could take that 40 cents and buy another tin for 30 cents.

In remarking his goods in accordance with lower price levels, the merchant is not only hastening the re-adjustment period, but is holding the confidence of his customers, which is his most valuable asset.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF FORM.

THE observant salesman in any store is a big asset. The grocery business is no place for the man who goes around with his eyes closed and his ears plugged.

WITH the approach of spring it is good policy to look about to see what improvements can be made. The purchase of a new show case or two may be the best investment that can be made.

IT IS a good plan to inject all the newness possible into the store as spring comes on. Something bright and attractive always appeals. Especially is this the case as the bleak days of winter pass.

IT IS always an advantage to keep just a little ahead of the game. If there is buying to be done, do it to-day. To-morrow may be too late. The man who keeps ahead of the band in the business procession is the first to get the applause.

RETAILERS selling honey should bear in mind that if the article is called "honey" it must be pure honey, according to the Government Food Standards. A firm was fined $70 and costs this week in the Toronto police court for selling to the trade adulterated honey. H. J. Dager, Government inspector, made the charge.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Retail Merchants' Association are waiting on the Ontario Legislature this week asking for a more stringent interpretation of the Transient Traders' Act, the Factory and Shop Act, the Division Court Act, and a new bill to bring wholesale produce dealers under the close supervision of the Department of Agriculture. Legislation of this kind is designed in the best interests of merchants, and it is essential that these enactments be strictly enforced.

All Burdens are Spread on Sales

Henry Johnson Jr. Answers a Number of Letters From Readers of Canadian Grocer—The Perennial Question Bobs Up Again as to How to Figure Margins

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

Feb. 24, 1921.

ONE writes me thus:

Dear Sir:—I have a nice store and market fully equipped. Modern machinery and cooler in market. Selling on credit basis. Am offering to rent my market for $25 per month (which is very reasonable), and am asking the meat cutter to pay or go 50-50 on light, fuel, telephone and delivery; besides, I am asking some percentage on meats charged out, as I pay cash to him every day and assume responsibility for all accounts. What percentage should he allow me with this arrangement? Would I be asking too much on the 50-50 items above? I am to decide definitely upon some arrangement soon, and could you give me your opinion briefly by mail. Unless I can arrange satisfactorily for both, I can keep my market and hire a meat cutter; but thought it would make my work lighter. Might say that my market business is a big 50 per cent. of the total—also, I do billing, shipping, furnishing stationery, etc.

Yours, J. F.

I answered thus:

I have just received yours of the 24th re proposal to rent out your meat department. I could not dare to give you advice on a matter so important with so little information to go on. Certainly, and at first glance, it seems to me a very risky thing to do. This not only because such things are risky at best, but because your business is, as you say, about 50 per cent. done in this department. All I can say, and I say it very earnestly, is go slow. Think carefully. Don't do what you may regret afterwards.

Such things as this man contemplates doing are done every day by merchants who then are satisfied and pleased and who make money thereafter. Such men are organizers. From such deals big business grows. But just the same it should be gone about with the utmost care, for it is just about like taking a partner. The relations in such an association are sure to be very close and intimate. So much depends on the personal factor, and geniality, the agreement on countless details of daily intercourse, that the deal should be made slowly.

I could not write except as I did offhand. And now I should suggest that the proper course would be to hire a cutter, live with him a while, work with him, get to know him. Then if you feel like making such a deal with him after that—after, say, eight months or a year of association—it may be a good thing to do.

But I repeat, go slow, and do not be ready to take such advice as mine as warrant for your decision.

What Again!

How the perennial question bobs up! This time it comes, too, from a city where most merchants know not only the what but the why of correct margin computation. It runs this way:

Dear Sir:—Will you please tell me in as short a way as possible the advantage of figuring profits on selling price rather than on cost price, as I am doing at present? As soon as I receive goods I immediately add 25 or 30 per cent., depending on the commodity, to the cost and cannot see why this procedure is not all right so long as I do it correctly. If there is any difference, though, I want to see to it that I get everything there is to get; and as I am green in this business, I am writing to you for a brief explanation in regard to this matter. May say that I have done remarkably well in the ten months I have been in business by figuring on cost, as stated above, and certainly want to thoroughly understand the new way of figuring before discarding the old way. Possibly this has been fully dealt with through your columns, but not since I have had the opportunity of reading this valuable paper.

To figure margins—not "profits," by the way—on cost is perfectly correct provided you know and realize exactly what you are doing. But few merchants do so realize, and those who realize it are the ones who long ago have concluded that the simplest, surest, wisest and best way is to figure altogether on sales. And let me say, further, that the method of figuring on sales is not by any means a "new" method. I have known of it for over 35 years—never followed any other way myself. The reason why it is new to so many merchants is because, for some reason, the reason has not yet found lodgement in any common school arithmetic; or if it has got in there, its importance is not grasped by teachers—for they certainly do not ground their pupils in the method or the theory of such computations.

If now the merchant who follows out what my friend indicates as his plan, and adds, say, 25 per cent. of the cost to the cost to arrive at a selling price, realizes that he then has 20 per cent. on sales, he will be O.K. But if he thus realizes, he will cut corners and figure on sales. He will do this for one vital consideration.

All Burdens Are Spread on Sales

Because his expenses are spread on sales.

Because the size of his business, as he thinks of it and states it, is always stated in sales.

There is, in fact, nothing about business which any man states or thinks that is not thought of and stated in relation to sales except the one factor on which the result of his sales—his entire business life and welfare—depends—his margins!

So long as a man is new in business, has a small business he can handle himself, does practically all the work himself, he often succeeds and makes money rapidly because, despite ignorance of correct methods of computation, he avoids the leaks, is diligent and gets all he sets out to get. Such a man has the benefit of his neighbors' knowledge and experience because he sets his prices to conform to theirs. Thus, no matter how he figures, he gets enough to make money.

But let that man grow and hire help, suffer from leakages and slow motions—from indifference and lowered efficiency—then whether he makes 25 or 20 per cent. on certain items readily may mean the difference between success and failure. The grocery business now is working on an average net earnings of about two per cent. on sales. How much leeway does that allow for a man to be out five per cent. one way or another?

Figures on Sales Are Conservative

But consider further: 20 per cent. on cost is 16 2-3 per cent. on sales—difference, 3 1-3 per cent.; 25 on cost is 20 on sales, difference, five per cent.; 33 1-3 on cost is 25 on sales, a difference of 8 1-3 per cent.; 40 on cost is 28 on sales—difference, 12 per cent.; 43 on cost is 30 on sales, a difference of 13 per cent., while 50 on cost is 33 1-3 on sales—a difference of 16 2-3 per cent.!

Glance at those figures of difference, and I think they will show you two things plainly: First, that those differences are fraught with tremendously serious danger to the man who handles them ignorantly. Second, that figures based on sales are always more conservative than those based on cost.

A man who, through figuring on cost, thinks he is getting a gross of 40 per cent., whose expenses and other burdens always are on sales, may get into

O. S. Matchett, Peterborough, Ont., traveling representative with Medland Bros., Lindsay, Ont., was a visitor in Toronto this week.

Daylight saving will come into effect in Toronto on May 15 and will terminate on Thursday, September 15. This is done to give the railways an opportunity to adjust their time schedules.

TO PACK "AIR-LINE" IN CANADA

H. Root and Charles G. Tollafield, of the A. I. Root Co., Medina, Ohio, packers of Air-Line honey, were in Toronto last Friday on their way to Ingersoll to make an inspection of machinery in the new factory they purchased last year. They have now completed arrangements to pack in Canada. Harold F. Ritchie & Co. are the selling agents.

CHANGES IN OLD ESTABLISHED FIRMS

Montreal, March 7.—Two large and old established business firms of Montreal will shortly change managements, according to information made public with regard to the real estate holdings of the two firms. From Martineau and Company, chocolate manufacturers, has been purchased the property at 451 Dorion Street. At the same time the business of J. A. Vaillancourt, Limited, is taken over by P. Burns & Co., Ltd., packers, of Calgary, Alta., Mr. Arthur Vaillancourt remaining on the directorate of the firm. The operation of the L. Martineau and Company will be taken over by J. A. Vaillancourt and his two sons, along with Leon Martineau.

New Goods

The Banana Specialty Company, Inc., is making plans to place a new product on the Canadian market. This is a dehydrated banana. This is for use chiefly as a filler for making cakes, etc., in addition to being used as a filler for chocolates. The bananas are peeled and put through the process whole. When the water has been removed it leaves a firm, chewy product. For baking purposes it is ground fine and mixed with some moistening substance, corn syrup being the one that is recommended. The whole dried banana is also made into a paste and sold to the manufacturing trade to be used as an individual filler or in combination with other fruits and nuts in pieces and in bar goods. The Banana Specialty Company is a subsidiary company to the United Food Company, New York.

The Grimsby Pickle Co., Ltd., Grimsby, are placing on the market pickles and catsup under the Grimsby brand. The pickles are represented by a full line, including sweet mixed, sweet mustard, sweet gherkins, sweet relish, sweet peeled pickles, sour mixed, sour gherkins and white onions. These are packed in various size bottles, also in bulk. The catsup is packed in eight-ounce glass bottles, reputed quart bottles, also No. 10 tins. The labels are very attractive, being white with black and gold lettering. This firm are also packers of jams, canned fruits and vegetables under the Victory brand.

F. W. Robinson, recently with the Harris Abattoir Co., Toronto, has opened an office at 106 Bay Street, Toronto, under the firm name of the Grimsby Brokerage Co. This firm are the selling agents for Ontario for Grimsby pickles, jams, canned fruits and vegetables.

Chase & Sanborn Company, Limited, packers of Seal Brand coffee and tea, have placed on the market a new brand of black tea, which is to be known as Chase & Sanborn's "Superior Brand" tea. The "Seal" trade mark of this company appears on this new package, as it does on their other products.

Quebec R. M. A. Is Organizing Province Into Six Districts

Branch Is Formed in Sherbrooke, and Quebec City Is Falling Into Line With an Enthusiastic Organization—Extending the Work of the Association

MONTREAL, March 8 (Special).—A few months ago at a meeting of the Quebec Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Asosciation of Canada, the executive officers decided that having secured a good organization in the city of Montreal, they would divide the province of Quebec into six districts. Montreal was to form one district and the other five were to take in the various counties and district officers were to be appointed and stationed in prominent centres, such as Sherbrooke for the eastern townships, Hull for the western counties, Three Rivers for the centre and Quebec city for the eastern and northern counties.

Meeting in Quebec

The first meeting in this connection was held in Sherbrooke about three weeks ago and officers were elected and a secretary appointed. On Thursday night, March 3, a large and influential gathering was held in Quebec city at which some of the prominent retail merchants of the province were present. The meeting was addressed by E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board; M. Lapointe, secretary of the Quebec Provincial Board, and P. J. Cote, past president of the Dominion Board.

Urges Co-operation

Mr. Cote urged upon the retail merchants to take their fair share of interest in the various matters that came before the retail trade and he asserted that he felt Quebec would be found standing shoulder to shoulder with the retail men of the other provinces.

All merchants present were unanimous in their desire to extend the work of the association and arrangements were made with the executive officers to take up the details of the organization work, which, when they are prepared, will be put into operation.

Oppose Tax on Retail Sales

An important feature of the meeting was the passing of a resolution opposing any attempt to place a tax on the sales of retail merchants and endorsation was given to the proposal of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada that the tax be applied at the source of supply, namely, on the manufacturer and importer.

The meeting was presided over by J. C. Savard, of Quebec city, who is president of the local branch, and at the conclusion of the meeting the speakers were each accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

WHERE DOES THE PUBLISHER GET OFF?

When this circulation was assured it was decided a new press would be required and it was ordered. To give the additional room and other proper facilities for good press work the floor space had to be greatly increased, hence the purchase of a building.

It also seemed, not only advisable, but just the right thing, to make a contract for a better grade of paper, and the extra amount necessary for this 20 per cent. increase added about $85,000 to the paper bill.

The next step was to increase the editorial service by the employing of two college professors. These men were engaged under contract to fill a larger paper.

Finally, a Research and Dealer Help Department was installed at a very considerable expense.

These directors planned to do the things that are most wanted by the advertiser, the advertising agent, the representative and even the reader of the paper, and those plans were made as a result of business actually booked.

All this in the month of May. Presto! Change! The tide turned. "From them that hath not shall be taken even that which they have." Instead of getting the expected and usual amount of fall orders, added to the surplus on hand, in comes a string of cancellations.

Biff! Bang! Smash! Who cares for the publisher? "Truly we gave him a contract, but what of that? Cancel it—we don't think we can use the space to advantage." Not one in a hundred even grant the courtesy of an explanation. It is just a case of cold-blooded indifference to the publishers' rights or the value of an advertising agent's order.

What can the publisher do? He is under contract for his extra circulation. He is under contract for his extra housing facilities—his extra printing equipment and his extra paper. He cannot discharge his editorial force, neither can he discontinue his Research and Service Department. These improvements, made very largely in the interest of a better product for the advertiser, must be carried on.

January first appears on the horizon. Mr. Manufacturer and Mr. Agent take stock of the 1921 prospects and then they jointly decide that Mr. Publisher must reduce his rates to a pre-war basis or get no business. Yes, the decree has gone forth from a very considerable number, and it goes forth without the slightest assurance of what the support would be were a reduction made. Simply a question of "We insist upon lower rates."

There is no recognition of an improved service on the part of the publisher. There is no recognition of the fact that the farm paper publisher was the last of all commercial industries to raise prices, and then never raised them in proportion to the increase in cost of production.

There is no recognition of the fact that the publisher cannot reduce his overhead as can be done in other lines of business. There is no recognition of the fact that the publisher is probably the most decided loser by this epidemic of "cancellitis." Still he must go on—his issue must come out—he is under contract to his readers to supply a specific article, of a standard quality, and there can be no let-up, no matter what the advertising patronage may be.

There is no consideration of the fact that for years and years the press of this country has struggled and struggled through all kinds of hardships, until it put the very foundation under commercial America.

Let the space buyer play fair—be reasonable with the publisher. If you want to suck the blood out of business, starve the press. If you want to put out the fires under the boiler of your own industry, stop your advertising. If you want to cripple the express, the postal, the freight and the railroad service of the United States, stop your advertising. If you want to dull the intellect, cease to educate the buying population of the United States and spread pessimism, then withhold your patronage from the press.

On the other hand, if you want to see the glorious sunshine of business prosperity throughout the length and breadth of this land, jump to the front with the determination to do your part in its promotion. The surest way you can do that is by giving the publisher what is necessary in advertising patronage, and at a profitable rate, thus enabling him to put forth an optimistic, confidence-inspiring and trade-building enthusiasm that will compel business development.—Reprint from Printers' Ink, issue of January 27, 1921.

AN "ADULTERATED" COMPLIMENT

"Ma wants two pounds of butter exactly like what you sent us last. If it ain't exactly like that she won't take it," said the small boy.

The grocer turned to his numerous customers and said blandly: "Some people in my business don't like particular customers, but I do. It's my delight to serve them and get them what they want; I will attend to you in a moment, little boy."

"Be sure and get the same kind," said the small boy, while the storeful of customers listened to him. "A lot of pa's relations are visiting our house and ma doesn't wan 'em to come again."

NEWS FROM WESTERN CANADA

WESTERN

S. K. Murray, of Gosse-Millerd Packing Co., Vancouver, B.C., is on a trip to the Prairie Provinces.

The executive committee of the Farmers' Co-operative Store at Starbuck, Man., has appointed Nelson Brynelson manager of the store there.

Richardson-Green, Limited, Winnipeg, have been appointed exclusive representatives of the N. K. Fairbanks Co., Ltd., in western Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Fernie and Cranbrook districts of British Columbia.

The Moose Jaw city council have been asked to quash the by-law which provides for the closing of grocery stores on Wednesday afternoons. A number of retail grocers have filed a petition with the mayor asking for the discontinuance of the half holiday, but state that they have no objection to it during the summer months.

The death occurred in New Westminster, B.C., a few days ago of James Ure, for eight years in the grocery business there. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1871, and came to Canada twelve years ago. He is survived by his wife and one son.

A. S. Arnason, Saskatoon, has sold his business and has taken a third interest in the Olafson store, the partnership comprising John Olafson, S. Olafson and A. S. Arnason.

Richardson-Green, Limited, have been appointed agents for the Louis Hilfer Distributing Corporation, who have the sole distributing rights for Mrs. Shepard's Apple Flakes. The Louis Hilfer Distributing Corporation have established a factory in Kelowna, B.C., and have commenced to market their product throughout Western Canada.

Paul Findlay, of Los Angeles, California, retail merchandiser, better known to the readers of Canadian Grocer as "Henry Johnson, Jr.," was in Winnipeg last week and gave a course of lectures before the merchants and their salesmen, who are attending the Short-course for Merchants at the University of Manitoba.

Robert C. Line, of Columbus, Montana, retail merchant, formerly professor of marketing at the University of Minnesota, addressed the merchants and salesmen who were attending the Short Course at the University of Manitoba.

Judge Frank T. Wilson, of Stillwater, Minnesota, community adviser for the State of Minnesota, at the University of Minnesota, gave a splendid address to the merchants who are attending Short Course on the subject, "The Store as a Community Builder" and "Co-operating of Farm Products."

Important Test Case Before Court

Exchequer Court at Ottawa Is Hearing Case This Week to Prove Status of Retail Merchant

THE date for the hearing of the test case to establish whether or not the Inland Revenue Department is justified in classing certain retail merchants as manufacturers and compelling them to apply for the manufacturer's license is taking place this week before the Exchequer Court in Ottawa.

Since November 3, 1920, the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, Dominion Board, has been contending that a retail merchant should not take out the manufacturer's license, there being no provision in the act whereby they may be compelled to do so. The Dominion Board decided the wisest plan would be to have a test case and they urged the Government to take proceedings against some firm in Ottawa, where the matter could be properly attended to. The Government concurred in the request and issued a writ against Frank J. Pedrick and Frederick A. Palen, merchant tailors.

Will Make Determined Fight

The Dominion Board has retained counsel and, according to the secretary, E. M. Trowern, the board is determined to fight the matter to the last ditch and, if necessary, to take it to the highest courts. The contention of the board is that when the act was passed there was no thought whatever of placing a retailer in the same category as a manufacturer, so that the action of the Inland Revenue Department was contrary to the act, and while it may not be a question as to who is a manufacturer, the question that must be decided is what was intended by the act. And whatever that intention may have been all retailers disclaim the right of any person to class them as manufacturers.

habits of careless price-cutting to "beat that sucker down the street," who would know better if he were to realize that his actual margin was only 28 per cent. And those times of temptation to cut prices to beat competition will come to my friend when he grows to larger proportions. Then will come his time of danger.

Again, it is not practicable to figure on cost because then all factors must be computed from the same end of the problem, and if you want to see how impossible that is, try it all the way through.

The Rule

The rule for correct computation is this:

Take the margin you decide to make from one hundred and divide the cost by the remainder. The answer will be your correct selling price.

Thus, if you want to make 18 per cent., divide by 82; if 20 per cent., divide by 80; if 30 per cent., divide by 70; if 22 per cent., divide by 78, and so on.

Try this out for a few days. You will find that your margins are not nearly so generous as you have been thinking they were. Consult your jobber—not your banker, for he probably does not know the importance of this—and he will guide you right and explain further the pitfalls and dangers of cost-computation. Then take as a final suggestion the fact that all big houses follow this rule. All the department stores everywhere, who are practically universally successful, figure my way. All the jobbing houses do it. All the packers do it. All men who have attained commanding positions in successful business do it. So try it on faith a while. You will get the idea, and once you have it you will never go back to your really "old" way!

A Little Bouquet for Me

Maybe this next letter will do for a closer this week:

Dear Sir:—We have been in the business for nearly five years. The first two were be-guess and be-gosh—until I finally became interested in your sage advice. In 1920 we did $65,865.48 on an average stock of $3,400. Our net earnings were only three per cent. While this is not as large as you would think it should be, we figure we have made some progress. We have tried putting over sales, but somehow do not seem able to put them across. We advertise in the papers and manage to convince the people. You could no doubt give us a lot more good advice, but we hardly know what to ask for. We feel we are surely indebted to you for the good stuff you have slipped us.

Well, if this is really true; if he made $1,975 net last year he is to be congratulated, and a turnover of stock of nearly fifteen and a half is a fine record.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

DURING the week under review several heavy transactions in raw sugars have transpired, covering full duty paying sugars such as San Domingos at 4⅝ cents c.i.f. New York, including 2,000 tons for Canadian accounts at top figure, also another lot of 2,000 bags for Canada at 4 9-16 cents c.i.f. Several large transactions in Cubas at 4¾ cents c. & f. New York. A parcel of Demerara sugar in store in New York changed hands at 5.77 cents duty paid ex store. Some 5,000 bags of Porto Ricos for March shipment were sold. Cuban production to the end of February is 857,082 tons, which is 390,000 tons less than the same period last year.

Canadian refined sugar is holding firm at unchanged prices. One refinery is reported behind in their shipments, which is due to running on reduced capacity for some time past.

Canned vegetables have a stronger tone and prices have been advanced on many lines. Jams are again reduced in price, and in Toronto there appears to be a lot of price cutting among wholesalers on this line.

Shelled nuts are in a strong position, and with spot stocks very low higher prices can be expected as replacement prices in primary markets have considerably advanced. New crop brazil nuts in the shell are offered at much lower prices than last year.

The tea and coffee markets continue firm and quotations in primary markets are ruling with an upward tendency. Spot stocks are not large, and in fact they are considered to be the lowest on record, prices, however, are generally unchanged to the retail trade, although an upward change in prices, especially on the better grade, can be expected.

Dried fruits are quiet and unchanged. Rices are in good demand since the low level was reached. The primary rice markets show a firmer tendency and it is conceded by those in close touch with the situation that prices have reached the turning point and further changes in prices will tend upward rather than downward.

Cereals and flour are fairly steady under a small demand that is regulated purely by consumption.

Potatoes continue to rule easy and lower. Domestic vegetables are slow sellers but imported green vegetables are arriving in heavy shipments in the larger centres, and attractive demand is noted.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 9.—There are not many changes in grocery lines this week. Prices in most lines remain steady and trade in general is in a steadier condition. Sugar stands firm at the basis that has held for some time past. The tea market is unchanged and buying consists only of purchasing quantities for immediate requirements. The rice market is in an unsettled condition. American rice is offered on the market at sacrifice prices. There is a much better movement of canned goods with the stronger tone to the market, and wholesalers have advanced their prices on many brands. Some jams are reduced in price this week. Evaporated apples are much stronger in price although there has been considerable cutting going on and it seems evident that the present is the buying time in this line. There is a good demand for nuts with a very firm market. Pimento and carraway seed are reduced in price this week. The most striking feature of the market is the big demand for green and fresh vegetables and the large shipments that have been disposed of in the last two weeks. Price seems to play a small part in this demand. Oranges and grapefruit are in big demand and dealers state that higher prices are looked for. Wrapping paper is reduced again in price this week and grape juice is quoted much higher.

Cereal Market Steady

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is no change this week in the cereal market. The demand for cereals is only fair, but the movement is steady and prices are firm at the present basis, which varies considerably for different brands. Anywhere from $3.55 to $3.75 is quoted on rolled oats.

Some Jams are Reduced

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—During the last two weeks there has been a noticeable improvement in the movement of canned goods. This has resulted from the advance in price made by the local wholesalers following the decline which was made in order to stimulate business. The advance, however, in price has been more effective in stimulating the business than was the decline, and dealers are buying more freely on the firmer market. Many lines of jams are reduced in price this week, ranging from 5 to 10 per cent. Brunswick Brand sardines have been reduced 25 cents per case and are now quoted at $6.50. Canned oysters are reduced 25 cents per dozen on the five and ten ounce tins, and are quoted at $2.25 and $4.75 per dozen respectively.

Evaporated Apples Higher

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—Despite the fact that a number of the local wholesalers are quoting as low as 11½ cents on evaporated apples this week, this market shows stronger tendencies, with higher prices. Replacement cannot be made at the price that is now quoted on evaporated apples and an advance in the price is sure. The evaporators are doing their utmost to strengthen the market and fruits of their efforts are becoming apparent in the prices quoted this week on the primary market. Valencia raisins are quoted dearer on the New York market, which adds strength locally, but there is no change in price.

Stronger Orange Market

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The only change in the fruit market this week is the stronger feeling on oranges. Importers state that higher prices are looked for. The large size oranges are very scarce and as a consequence those dealers who find that they have to have them also find that they must pay a premium to get them. There is a big demand for both oranges and grapefruit at the present time. Porto Rico grapefruit is selling at $5 per crate. Some shipments of strawberries have arrived in the city, but they must be sold as high as $1.25 per small box in order to make it worth while handling. There is, however, a certain demand for such expensive lines in the big cities that must be met. Other lines of fruit are unchanged in price.

Package Goods Unchanged

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—There are no changes to record this week in the market for package goods. Under this heading last week there was an item dealing with self-rising flour. The reductions listed on this line should have read five cents per dozen on the three-pound package and ten cents per dozen on the six pound package. Package goods are standing firm in price this week, and there is nothing notable to mention.

Wrapping Paper Lower

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Paraffin candles are reduced two and three cents per pound this week. In bulk the 6's are selling at 16½ cents per pound and 12's are selling at 12 cents per pound. Layer candles are also lower. There is a sharp advance this week in the price quoted on Niagara Red grape juice. Quarts are advanced from $4.50 per dozen to $6.00 and pints are advanced 75 cents to $3.25 per dozen. Grey brown wrapping paper is reduced 1½ cents per pound; now quoted 8 cents, and manilla is reduced one cent per pound, now selling at 9c.

Nut Market Very Firm

Montreal.

NUTS.—There are no changes in the prices quoted this week on nuts, but there is a very good demand with a firm market. It is also interesting to note that spot stocks are very low in warehouses, where a big supply is generally carried, and especially in view of the fact that replacement prices are higher and consequently a strong market stands ahead. Walnuts in particular are very firm in price.

American Rice Lower

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market continues in the same stagnant condition with even new upsetting influences. American rices are offered on the market at sacrifice prices on account of an effort to unload supplies before the new crop is on hand. The buying on the local market is for immediate requirements only and sales, although small, are steady.

Carraway Seed Lower

Montreal.

SPICES.—Reports show a little better movement of spices during the past week and the spring business brings bigger requirements for this line. Carraway seed is reduced five cents a pound, and is now quoted at 20 cents per pound. Pimento is reduced three cents per pound and is quoted at 15 cents per pound. These are the only price changes recorded this week.

Sugar Market Very Firm

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market stands firm at the present basis with no change in view. The whole market is in a very stable condition, especially in view of the control of raw sugar prices by the Cuban Commission. It is decidedly a good buying market at the present time and the movement of stocks has noticeably increased.

Tea Market Quiet

Montreal.

TEA.—Reports from the trade show that the tea market is still in a stagnant condition, although reports from the primary markets show a much firmer tone. Stocks in the country are low, but buyers are only making purchases to meet immediate requirements and no speculation is being done. The choicest Japan teas are being offered at from 75 to 90 cents per pound. The tea market is generally quiet, but there are no striking changes in the prices quoted.

Green Vegetables in Demand

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—The most interesting feature of the vegetable market is the big demand for green and fresh vegetables. One dealer states that during the past ten days three straight carloads of spinach have been disposed of in this city, and that dealers are demanding more. There is also a big demand for new cabbage, although it is selling at $3 per hamper wholesale. A number of cars of tomatoes have arrived in the city and grocers are willing to pay $8 and $8.50 per crate for all they can get. Fine quality celery is on the market from Florida, selling at $4 and $5, and from California at $10.50 per crate. The quality is reported to be particularly good this year and on account of the very mild season there are no losses due to frost.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 9.—There again appears to be considerable price cutting on jams with a range of prices; these prices are 15 to 25 cents less on fours, than a week ago. Canned vegetables are firm and some wholesalers have advanced quotations on tomatoes. Teas and coffees continue with a strong tone. Shelled walnuts are scarce and firm under a strong demand. Some cereals in bulk are revised downward. Sugar is steady to firm at the refiners' price basis. Quotations on cream of tartar are lower but generally spices are holding fairly steady. Reductions are noted on one brand of cooking oil, soap chips, chocolate and cocoa. Putz cream and silver polish are quoted higher.

Good Demand for Beans

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is a fairly active demand for beans and quotations are practically unchanged. California limas are offered at 10 cents per pound in bag lots and 12 cents in broken lots. Ontario hand picked are quoted at $3.25 per bushel. The market is steady.

Toronto.

CEREALS—Revised prices are noted on several lines of cereals, the new prices being slightly lower. Golden cornmeal is quoted at $3.25 per bag. Barley is down 25 cents per bag, bringing the price on pearl to $6.25 and pot to $5. Corn flour is now $3.75 per bag. Cracked wheat $5.50. Split peas $6.25. Whole wheat flour $5.25 and wheat kernels $6.75 per bag.

Jams Offered Lower

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS—Canned vegetables is practically the only line that is showing any amount of activity; prices too are steadily stiffening, especially on the better known brands. Some wholesalers have advanced quotations on tomatoes to $1.85 per dozen, other quotations range from $1.65 to $1.80 per dozen. Canned fruits show little movement. Price cutting in jams is again much in evidence and strawberry and raspberry, fours, are quoted from 75 cents to 85 cents each, according to the brand. Black currant in 16 ounce jars in one quarter is offered as low as $3.60 per dozen.

Dried Fruits Quiet

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS—There is little activity in any of the dried fruit lines and perhaps with the exception of prunes there is little demand. Prunes are showing an improved inquiry but mostly in small lots according to consumptive demand. Currants are likely to be easier in price when new shipments arrive. Raisins are holding firm at the high prices.

Fruit Market Steady

Toronto.

FRUITS—There are practically no changes in prices on fruits. Large shipments of oranges and grapefruit are arriving daily. Porto Rico grapefruit is offered at $5.75 per case, all sizes. California navel oranges are in good demand at unchanged prices. Hot house rhubarb is moving at $1.25 per dozen.

Tea Market Holds Firm

Toronto.

TEAS—There are no new developments in the tea market. The situation continues strong and high grades are in active demand. The offerings of India teas on the London market have generally been of poor quality and these poorer grades can be purchased at low figures but the better grades hold firm with an upward tendency. Ceylon teas are holding firm on all grades but the demand appears to be the keenest on the better grades. Teas on spot are generally unchanged as to quotations, but there are indications of an upward movement.

Florida Cabbage Arrive

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—There is a slightly firmer tone to potatoes, but this condition is considered only temporary, due to the smaller receipts during the week. Florida cabbage is offered for the first time this season and is quoted at $2.75 per hamper. Florida tomatoes are lower; 120s and 140s are quoted at $8.50 per case and 180s at $7.75 per case. Green peppers are quoted at $1 per dozen. Parsley at $1 per dozen bunches. New carrots, endives and shallots are commencing to arrive.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, March 9.—The week has been marked by the renewal of business from both city and country districts. Merchants are buying more freely, which is an indication that when prices are at a reasonable figure the demand for groceries shows a keener activity. One of the features has been the reduction in dried fruits. Prunes are holding lower. Peaches and apricots are easier. Raisins, however, remain firm. There are no indications of reduced prices on canned goods, especially canned vegetables, which are considered to have already reached the bottom prices. Cereals remain firm. Jams have shown a decline. Sugars are steady.

Bulk Cereals Firm

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—Bulk cereals generally are firm. Beans declined 10 cents per bushel and are now quoted as low as $3.65 per bushel. Rolled oats are firmer and it is generally felt that the oat market has reached the lowest point and if any change it would be for higher prices.

Halifax, N.S., March 9.—Business for the past week has been well up to the average. Butter, cheese and eggs varied slightly in price during the week, but in most cases are the same as last week. Potatoes continue downward, Prince Edward Island selling at $1.65, while New Brunswick bring $1.50. This difference in price is accounted for by the larger supply of New Brunswick potatoes over P. E. I. new shipments. Oranges are slightly higher and grapefruit is quoted at $1.00 per case less. Wholesale fruiterers who have not been importing bananas all winter say shipments will commence next week.

Social Season Means Bigger Sales

George Marshall, Manager of Fish Department in F. Simpson & Sons, Yonge Street, Toronto, Gives Special Attention to Orders for Dinner and Supper Parties—An Opportunity Unequalled by Demand in Lenten Season

"OUR increase in sales of fish through the Lenten season does not equal the trade in this department provided by parties and social functions, which disappears with the beginning of Lent," George Marshall, manager of F. Simpson & Sons, 236 Yonge Street, Toronto, told Canadian Grocer. "During the social season we do a very heavy business, and sell a lot of fish for special events. We cater to this class of trade, and aim to give it that personal attention that means a great deal in the way of bringing new business to the department, and increasing sales of fish. The past few weeks have been the busiest we have experienced in a long time. The social season is at its height just now, and there is a rush to crowd in as many parties as possible before the Lenten season begins. I give all these special orders my own special attention, for the reason that one satisfied customer will do more to advertise your business than the average person will believe. 'I was at Mrs. Blank's dinner party last evening, and she served a particularly delicious fish. She told me that you chose it for her. Couldn't you do the same for me? I will just leave it to you.'

One Tells Another

"Now these are remarks I am constantly hearing from people who are wanting something special for dinner parties, or a certain kind of fish for a very delicious salad that some hostess is planning for the party she is about to give. It pays us to cater to this class of trade. It has been a big feature this winter, and the two weeks prior to Lent will see a big supply of special orders for occasions of this kind. The grocer who is selling fish can increase his sales by going after this trade, and by giving to the personal care and attention that the customer appreciates, he will find that it steadily increases, one satisfied customer telling another, and so building up a trade that is well worth while. Last week we sold, for instance, two barrels of oysters in the half shell, to say nothing of heavy sales of bulk oysters, lobster and other special lines, that are suitable for the dinner or supper party.

"Of course, with the beginning of Lent there is a slackening of this trade, and we are more or less restricted to our regular fish sales, which in our business are pretty well confined to Thursday, Friday and Saturday. In Lent, however, sales of fish on Wednesday are increased, but the bulk of the fish orders come in on Thursday afternoon and Friday morning."

Best Quality Fish Only

Six girls are employed in the Simpson store, whose duties are to take the orders. On Thursday afternoon they commence to call the customers for their orders to be delivered on Friday. The fish order is always placed at the top, and receives first attention. "We are finding," Mr. Marshall remarked in the course of his conversation with Canadian Grocer, "that the majority of people are now eating fish one day a week. It usually is on Friday or Saturday. Most of the customers in regular store are also good customers in the fish department. We are selling high quality fish all the time, and while there is some increase in sales during the Lenten period, we do not specially look upon this season as a time to turn over a very much greater amount of fish. Our aim is to sell fish all the time, to show it in an attractive manner, and make it so tempting to people that they will make it a regular article of diet in their homes. Fish should be a good sale at all times, and we are finding just as heavy an inquiry for it from people who are not called upon in particular seasons to fast as from persons of certain creeds, upon whom it is incumbent to refrain from the eating of meat."

Service and Satisfaction

Fish sales in the Simpson store total up into the hundreds of pounds every week. They have now for some time consistently gone after this business, and believe the fish department is one of the best in the grocery trade. It works so well with the regular grocery business, and in the hands of a manager fully conversant with the handling of fish in the best and most profitable way, it easily becomes a source of gratifying revenue. "Giving the people service and satisfaction is what counts," Mr. Marshall declares, and it is his endeavor as manager of the fish department of the Simpson store to so personally cater to the wants of his customers that he cannot fail to hold their trade, and, through their confidence in his ability to please them, extend his trade.

FISHERIES EXPERT MAKES REPORT TO B.C. GOVERNMENT

Victoria, B.C., March 8.—The run of sockeye salmon to the Fraser River this year will range itself definitely with the lean years of that river, and the former big years of the Fraser must be regarded wholly as a thing of the past, according to the conclusion reached by Dr. C. H. Gilbert, fisheries expert appointed by the Government. Blockade of the Yale Canyon in 1913, as a result of blasting operations, the report says, caused the catastrophe which became irreparable before adequate measures of relief could be taken.

Fresh Halibut Is Now Available

Present Prices Are Very Low, Although It Is Unlikely That Current Values Will Hold for Much More Than a Week—Big Demand for Qualla Salmon

By D. B. DRYSDALE

THE first carload of fresh halibut will arrive in the city this week. This signifies the opening of the fresh fish season so far as the Pacific coast fisheries are concerned.

Prices at the present time are very low, although it is not likely that present prices in all lines will hold out for much more than a week. With the increased express rates in effect it pays to order ahead and have your orders shipped by freight. There are still two weeks of the Lenten season left with two and three fish days a week, and provided the consumer can get the fish he is as likely to eat as much fish in March as in January or February.

Big Demand for Qualla

This season there has been an exceptional demand for qualla salmon. In fact there has never been a season in the history of the wholesaler in Toronto in which the demand for qualla was greater. This is probably due to the extremely low prices and the quality of the fish.

The pink qualla is being offered at eight cents per pound in case lots and the silver bright ocean caught paper wrapped at nine cents. It is an easy fish to handle and cut and is very rich in flavor. This week Alaska qualla will be put on the market and although the price of twelve cents per pound may seem a little high the customer will be getting full value for his money. These fish have a heavy ice coating and could be sold as cohoes, and it would take an expert to tell the difference. They are considered extra good value and it is only by ordering in five and six carload lots that makes it possible to offer them to the trade at such a price.

Best Weeks to Come

Although we have had quite a lot of soft weather this season, it is doubtful if the trade has suffered any. Most of the frozen fish has been so well frozen that it would take a very long freight journey to make any difference in appearance or quality of the fish.

Wholesalers are looking forward for the best weeks yet during Lent and all have a large and satisfying stock on hand.

THE BANANA IN A NEW FORM

A Canadian Grocer representative was shown the other day something new in the banana line. This is a new filler for chocolates, pastry, etc., and is actually a dehydrated banana. In other words, it is the banana with the water extracted by the dehydration process and is entirely different from the dried banana or banana fig that has been on the Canadian market for some time.

For retail purposes it is packed in a small box. The banana has a uniform brownish color and looks not unlike a sausage but, of course, has less color.

For baking purposes in the home the dehydrated banana is ground fine. Water may be mixed with it but better still corn syrup.

The writer tasted a caramel made with the dehydrated banana filling and it certainly is a delicious confection.

The process to which the bananas are subjected is essentially a drying one with careful regulation of the temperature, moisture and selection of fruit, etc. The bananas are peeled and put through the process whole. It is pointed out that all the substance of the banana is retained; only the water is extracted. The manufacturers state that one pound of dehydrated banana equals four pounds of the fresh fruit.

The manufacturing trade use the whole banana made into a paste as a filler b itself or in combination with other fille such as fruits, chopped nuts, etc.

263,189,000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT IN 1920

The total yield of wheat as compared with 1919 is as follows:

1920—263,189,000 bushels from 18,232,374 acres.

which means an increased yield last year of 69,928,600 bushels from a decreased acreage of 893,594.

The yield per acre of other crops as compared with 1919 shows an increased production per acre over a five year average on oats, barley, rye, peas, beans, buckwheat, mixed grain and corn for husking. The Government gives the total value for 1920 for the crops as $1,636,664,900 as compared with $1,452,437,500 in 1919 even allowing for the decrease in price.

This simply means that the decrease in price has been taken care of by the increase in yield, and the purchasing power of the Canadian farmer is greater this year than last by $184,227,400.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 9.—The feature of the produce market this week is the easier market for eggs, with a better supply arriving. Prices, in some instances, are reduced two cents per dozen, but the general market is at least a little easier. There is no change in the hog market this week, prices ruling steady though there have been some fluctuations in price during the week. Fresh meat prices in general are steady. An interesting feature of the smoked meat market is the importation of large shipments of American picnic hams. Local prices, however, are not changed in any of the smoked meat lines. Butter is advanced in price this week, due to the shortage in supplies of creamery and the higher prices offered in the West. The cheese market is very strong in virtue of the shortage of spot stocks and local requirements call for all available supplies despite demands for export. Prices on lard seem to be standing fairly steady. The labor troubles among the packers are responsible for a steadier local tone to the meat market, due to the smaller supplies coming from these establishments. The poultry market is very firm and unchanged. There is a shortage of fresh killed poultry and storage supplies are called on to meet the demand. There is no change in the fish market.

Creamery Butter Higher

Montreal.

BUTTER.—On account of the stocks of creamery butter at the first of the month being the smallest at this period for the past three years, and the fact that the prices of creamery butter in the Northwest markets have advanced considerably over a week ago a much stronger feeling prevails in the local market this week and prices have closed with an advance of two cents per pound.

Cheese Supplies Limited

Montreal.

CHEESE.—There has been no important change in the condition of the market during the week, the feeling being firm on account of the very limited supplies available on spot, for which there is a good inquiry for home consumption. Buyers in some cases have found it difficult to fill their wants. There is no change in the quotations this week.

A Better Supply of Eggs

Montreal.

EGGS.—Quotations on eggs are the same this week as they were a week ago, although prices have fluctuated during the week. Larger supplies are arriving on the market and for this reason a weakness is evident. The supply has noticeably increased during the week and in some cases the prices are two cents per dozen lower than a week ago. It seems evident that the egg market will be a little easier through the next week, but at the present time strictly fresh eggs are selling at from 48 to 50 cents per dozen. The demand is very good and is almost limited to the strictly fresh eggs.

Fish Market Unchanged

Montreal.

FISH.—The fish market shows no price change. Supplies are still arriving in good quantities and the demand is good, although the requirements of the trade are not as large as they were earlier in the Lenten season. Fish prices hold firm this week.

Lard Market Steady

Montreal.

LARD.—A fair amount of business continues to be done in lard for local account, and sales of Canadian pure leaf lard are being made at from 19 to 20 cents per pound in twenty-pound wood pails. This is the same figure that was quoted a week ago and the lard market seems to be fairly steady this week.

Hog Market Holds Steady

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—There is very little change this week in the hog market. Prices have remained steady throughout the week, although the labor situation has had some effect in cutting down the output of some of the plants. Prices dropped as low as 14½ cents per pound for live hogs, but the average price has held fairly firm to 15 cents per pound. There are no changes in quotations in the fresh meat market this week.

Importing American Hams

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—The feature of the smoked meat market this week is the demand from local packers for supplies of American picnic hams. This is explained by the fact that American packers are only paying 9½ cents for hogs and calculating the exchange Canadian packers find it profitable to import American hams. There are no changes in the prices on the local market, prices for all lines being steady.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 9.—Live hogs continue weak with packers still aiming to reduce prices. Beef is firm, calves and mutton are easy. Spring lamb is offered and prices are considerably lower than a year ago. Some fresh pork cuts are reduced. Cured meats are in an easy position but prices generally are unchanged although some packers are quoting slightly lower prices on smoked hams. Cooked hams and shoulders are reduced in price. Cheese and butter are stronger with quotations higher. Shortening and lard are easy with lower quotations on the latter. Eggs are easy and lower under heavier receipts. Poultry prices to the producer are higher but to the retail trade are unchanged.

Butter Firmer and Higher

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market has a decidedly firmer tone and quotations are higher. Argentine, Dutch and New Zealand butter is offered in fair volume and the flavor is fair, but they have a streaky appearance, which practically puts them in the second grade. There is good demand, however, for these butters, as the price is attractive. Quotations on this butter range from 52 to 56 cents per pound. No. 1 creamery butter is higher, now quoted 60 cents to 63 cents per pound.

Egg Market Easier

Toronto.

EGGS.—The firm condition of the egg market that was manifest during the past ten days was apparently a temporary one, as since then an easier tone with lower prices has developed. The arrival of large shipments of American eggs, which are laid down at lower prices than those demanded by Ontario producers, is no doubt the leading factor in bringing about a lower tendency. Dealers also report an increase in receipts. Quotations to the retail trade are 46 to 47 cents per dozen.

Hog Market Continues Easy

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The receipts of live hogs during the week were not heavy and packers were unable to reduce prices in line with their ideas. They continue to offer lower prices for this week's delivery and whether they will be suc ful will depend upon the quantity off Beef cattle have a firmer tone, with pr higher. Dressed calves are about $ per hundred lower. Yearling lam also lower. Some spring lamb is off at $10.00 to $12.00 each. Some f pork cuts are down one to two c per pound.

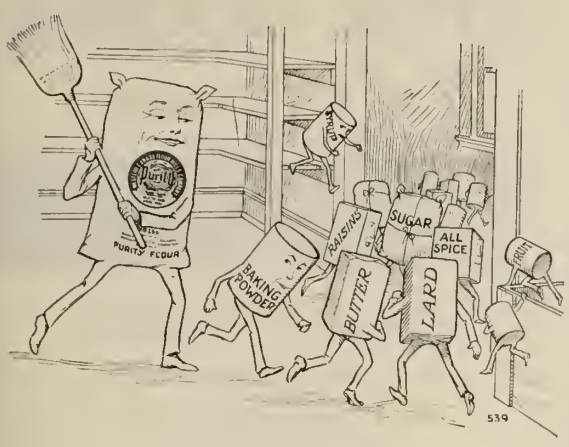
Flour Empties the Stock Room



It's nice to see your stock room filled up with new goods, but it's nicer to see it emptying out again. One of the best agents to hasten the turnover in a retail grocery store is flour. Selling flour means selling also the groceries that go with flour to turn flour into bread, cakes, pies, pastry, etc.

PURITY FLOUR

is well known as the leading Western flour for bread and for home baking of all kinds. You can recommend it with profit to your customer and to yourself.

Is It a Good Man You Want?

Wishing and wanting won't get him for you. Advertising probably will. You ask what paper to use? Well, you can waste a lot of good money using wrong papers. The best one to use is CANADIAN GROCER.

This newspaper is probably read by the man you will engage. At any rate, if you want a man trained, the chances are that he sees and reads CANADIAN GROCER. If your advertisement tastes good to him, the chances are he'll answer it. Then it's up to you to land him.

But look for him where he's likely to be—behind some counter or desk in a retail or wholesale grocery house.

You never can tell what's in the mind of men to make them willing to change. Perhaps it's money; perhaps a cranky boss; perhaps climate; perhaps a girl. But it will be something or other.

Sometimes the first insertion of an advertisement finds the man. Sometimes you will have to keep on advertising.

Our part is not to guarantee you answers, or to promise any. We have no control over such things. But we can put your advertisement—and do—into about 6,500 grocery stores, wholesale and retail, all over Canada. This is our part. And surely 6,500 is enough.

Rate is 3 cents a word first insertion and 2 cents per word each subsequent insertion. Numbers count as words. Use a Box Number if you prefer. Five cents per insertion extra for Box Number. Make advertisements brief as a telegram.

Let Value Be The Basis of Your Business

AS long as Macdonald's gives the smoker More Tobacco for his money, so long will the smoker prefer Macdonald's Tobaccos. And as long as you can supply him with such tobaccos, just so long can you expect to hold his custom.

There is only one sure foundation for a profitable, permanent business—and that is VALUE. The term VALUE. includes, of course, Quality. The name Macdonald's stands for both. That it stands for Profits, too, a trial will convince you.

George Ham says "Good-Bye"

A STRIKING and affectionate farewell is bade by Col. George H. Ham in the March 15th issue of MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE, to his thousands of friends, as well as to other readers who may know him only by hearsay, who have been following his reminiscences in Canada's National Magazine since last August.

"The Curtain is Rolled Down, for seventy-three years makes a long act," says George. "Recalling three score and ten of these years has been a pleasant though difficult task; thirty-three of them have been spent in the service of the C.P.R., and one cannot but realize that the corridors of the Company's office will not long be trodden by the older ones of this generation and that some of us perhaps will soon not even be a memory."

"There Were Giants in Those Days"

The concluding instalment of this remarkable, all-Canadian feature, is the biggest and best of the lot—and here is the proof: There are seven full magazine pages, chock full of stories of those amazing days when the C.P.R. was conceived and constructed; human, hitherto unpublished details of the lives and careers of those three veteran founders, and, later, presidents of our first transcontinental: Lord Mount Stephen, the late Sir William Van Horne, and Baron Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O. And funny stories! Well, just read about Baron Shaughnessy's racing experiences; the pranks George Ham and William Stitt used to play on each other; Fred Cook's "German Band," and countless other incidents that could only be retained in such a mind—and heart—as that possessed by Canada's grand old raconteur.

Big Features of Fiction and Fact

"Personality, Plus"—By Guy Morton.

A fascinating story about an advertising agency man who put across a trick to close a contract—and then gave the whole game away.

"Lenix Fools the Jinx"—By Archie P. McKishnie.

Another of those deliciously droll Lenix Ballister negro stories, in which more than the usual number of comic and absurd scenes are depicted.

"Pawned"—By Frank L. Packard.

The third instalment of this masterful serial goes a long way to show how the triple regeneration is going to be effected.

"Broadway to Brussels"—By C. C. Jenkins.

The story of the rise of J. H. Gundy, a shy youngster, who developed into one of Canada's most brilliant orators and a leading financier.

"Little Bundles of Pluck"—By Agnes C. Laut.

In this, Miss Laut tells with graphic pen the story of some of the war brides who are making good out on the lonely prairies, where they and their husbands have been located by the S.S.B.

"A Woman Would Know ——"—By Charles G. Booth.

This whole gripping story centres around the possession of a wee bundle of humanity, cursed with a dope-fiend father. There is plenty of love interest, too.

"Those Who Stood in Darkness"—By J. L. Rutledge.

A symposium giving the opinions of a number of Ministers of various denominations on some of the doubts which have arisen in this war aftermath, in the minds of many Christians—and others. An Easter Message.

The Service that Counts

To Manufacturers

Think of your business—

Now think of all the news appearing in the newspapers of Canada and United States relating to your business.

Now imagine that news coming to your desk promptly, regularly—do you not see advantages and opportunities in a service of this kind?

We supply many customers with important news and they find it saves them time—often money, and keeps them in touch with all that is going on in their line of business.

When writing for rates let us have some information on your business and we can then outline a service that will benefit your whole organization.

THE LONDON TEA MARKET

McMeekin & Co., in their monthly report on the tea market for January, 1921, say: "The offerings of India teas at London Public Auctions were 234,000 packages against 169,300 packages in the same month of 1920. The quality generally showed a greater falling away than has been noticeable for some time back, but a few of the better class Assam gardens continued to offer high grade tea, which realized full rates. The opening sale of the year showed an improved tone with a good inquiry for all kinds, and prices generally showed an advancing tendency. As the month progressed, however, it was evident that the quantity of tea—generally inferior in quality—was in excess of demand and consequently buyers became cautious and prices declined considerably. The offerings of Ceylon teas were 110,200 packages against 94,800 packages in the same month of 1920. The quality generally was good and an active demand for all grades was maintained at advancing prices."

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

if—

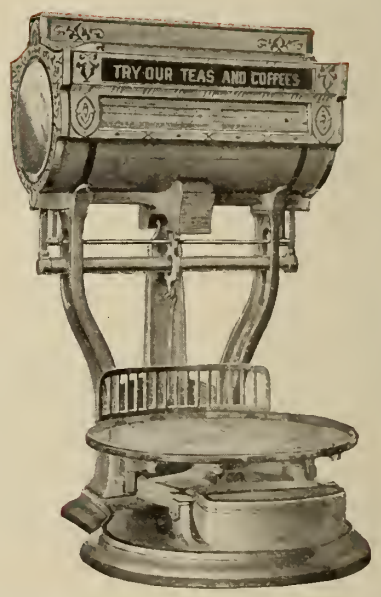
—if you could hire a clerk who could assure your customers that weights were always correct,—and prove it to them visibly.

—if this clerk could see that the values of the goods you sell were always figured out to the fraction of a cent.

—if, moreover, the clerk would do these things instantly, willingly, cheerfully, at any hour of the day or evening.

—if, again, the clerk would be smart in appearance—a business-bringing asset in itself.

—if you received all these services, what would you be willing to pay for them?



Would you gladly PAY FIVE CENTS A DAY?

The answer is: You would.

You would hire him instantly, eagerly, at a cost of many times five cents a day if—and here is the big, insuperable IF—you could get him.

Such a super-clerk does not exist.

Yet, at an even more modest cost, you have at your bidding all the services mentioned above—and many others.

It's at your command—the greatest of service-givers and business-builders in modern merchandising.

The "Half-Dozen" Idea

Some druggists sell Aladdin by the dozen—these druggists seldom let a customer go out with just one cake.

We ourselves believe you need never confine an Aladdin sale to "one cake"—we favor the idea of six cakes to a sale.

It can easily be accomplished if you and your clerks just take the trouble to point out the advantage of having a selection of the beautiful Aladdin Colors on hand always.

A Size for Every Need

Borden's St. Charles Milk is put up in handy 6-oz., 12-oz., 1-pound and 2-pound tins—a size for every need.

It will pay you to co-operate with Borden's National advertising by keeping your stock of St. Charles Milk well displayed. Once you get your customers to use Borden's St. Charles in their cooking, baking, etc., you will find they will become steady users. It is so rich and creamy, and so high in butter fats that recipes in which it is used require less butter and the improved flavor it gives is instantly noticeable. Feature it in your windows and keep it well displayed—it pays.

"It's Nature's Own Color"

IS THE Great Creator's color scheme right? Who would doubt it, particularly in that of Salmon? It is truly wonderful. The vivacious little Pink, a gamely fighter, is not endowed by nature with much color, but he is fine in flesh, in bone, and is one of the best flavored fish of the Salmon family. TRY HIM SERVED LIKE THIS—

Baked Salmon Loaf

One can salmon; one pint of mashed potatoes; one cup browned cracker crumbs; two cups of parsley sauce. Grease a good-sized mold with butter, sprinkle with cracker crumbs, and line with mashed potatoes. Drain oil from salmon and remove skin and bones. Season with pepper and salt, and pack in mold. Cover with potatoes and then cracker crumbs, put a few pieces of butter on top, and bake one-half hour in fairly hot oven. Turn out and pour parsley sauce over.

Show every lady customer the above recipe and sell her a can of Cascade, Bighorn, Wellington and Tip-Top high-grade pink salmon. She will be delighted with the result.

There is a guarantee of quality on any brand.

B.C. Fishing & Packing Co., Limited

VANCOUVER, B.C.

How do you figure your profits?

Suppose you are paying $8.00 for a box of soap, and sell 3 boxes a year for $10.00 a box. You make a gross yearly profit of $6.00 or 75% on your investment.

Now, suppose you were paying $8.00 for a box of Procter & Gamble Soap, and sell it, too, for $10.00 a box. But, because it's better soap, and better advertised, you sell 12 boxes a year. You make $2.00 on each box also, but your yearly gross profit is $24.00, four times as much or 300% on your original investment.

It's quick turnover that makes these legitimate big profits.

Don't you want to share in them?

Familiarizing the Trade With Your Trade-Mark, Brand or Name

The whole value of a trade-mark, brand or name lies in its renown.

The surest, quickest and least expensive way to make your trade-mark, brand or name well known to the whole Canadian grocery trade is by identifying them each week through continuous advertising in Canadian Grocer—Canada's only weekly grocery trade newspaper—the source to which they look for every business message to the grocery trade of the Dominion.

A Quarter Million Dollars to Teach Women to Bake!

And More Baking Means More Buying

Figuring our total investment in Five Roses Cook Books on the basis of to-day's actual net cost (over 40 cents per copy), the 600,000 books in distribution would total over a quarter million dollars!

This is effective educational work on a big scale, practical work that costs you nothing as a distributor. Yet it affords the consumer a constant source of grocery-consuming suggestions, the point of origin of countless retail profits, because flour is only one ingredient in baking.

When you consider that out of Canada's one and a quarter million families, every other home has one of these famous Five Roses Cook Books, using it daily, learning to bake from its pages, is it surprising that Five Roses Flour has such a tremendous prestige?

If you don't handle this famous brand, it is merely because you don't realize its tremendous sales influence.

How much easier and more profitable to go with the current! Some day you'll get tired of rowing!

To any legitimate dealer who has not yet seen the famous Five Roses Cook Book, we will send one free on request. The consumer now pays 40 cents each!

MAN! MAN! MAN!

Where is that man you need so badly?

Well, no use grouching, is there? Best thing to do is to advertise for the man you want. Use CANADIAN GROCER as the best and cheapest medium. Use dailies if you think they're better. It's up to you.

All we know is that you get to a sifted class when you use CANADIAN GROCER. The replies you will get will be from men now in jobs—not slackers nor idlers, not job-chasers. It will cost you three cents a word first insertion to use CANADIAN GROCER, and you may have to use several issues before the right man puts himself on your hook. Nobody knows in advance just how much you'll have to advertise. But we all know good men are scarce and don't have to look for jobs. You'll have to do some inducing, perhaps, to tempt the man you want to leave his present employer.

But you never can tell who's open for your proposal. Climate, inclination, the boss's bad temper, a fancied slight, desire to get into a new field — all these are explanations of why men change; all these are pegs on which you can hang your hopes.

So send along your advertisement. Better order it to run "until forbid." It will be cheap enough if you find the right man; and anyhow, there's no other cheaper or better way of finding your man.

Three cents a word for the first insertion, two cents a word for each insertion after. Five cents extra per insertion if addressed to Box Number. Payable in advance.

Tax on Turnover Is Recommended

Never Before Has Industry Been Organized to a Point That Seems to Offer so Fair a Chance for the Success of This Plan of Taxation —A Tax Upon the Total or Gross Business Done by Every Person or Association of Persons

Written for Canadian Grocer by AUSTIN CAMPBELL, of Financial Post staff.

TAXATION is undoubtedly the most vital problem facing the world of commerce to-day. Out of the whirlwind of the war all nations and peoples have now to garner a harvest of heavy taxes. It is inevitable. We expected it, and must face it. National debts must be liquidated. Government credit must be maintained and interest payments met. In the words of Lincoln, "We must finish the work we are in and bind up the nation's wounds."

This all requires revenue, and revenue means taxation. It is, therefore, not a question of how little, it is rather a problem of devising ways and means to raise the required amount with least trouble and in the most equitable manner. To this problem Canadian merchants and business men are to-day giving most careful thought. Our immediate and future success and prosperity, they recognize, both as individuals and nations depends upon its adequate solution.

The Condition of Affairs

Burdened with a national debt of over two billion dollars, which it is estimated will require $225,000,000 annually to retire with interest at maturity; witnessing a reduction in customs receipts and a huge deficit in railway operation; recognizing that the much lauded business profits tax has failed of its hopes as a revenue producer—with these and other vital financial problems staring the country in the face, is it any wonder that economists are searching for the all-redeeming solution?

Indirect sources of revenue such as Excise, Postal Service and Customs cannot be expanded to cover the emergency. Indeed the last-named source is due, in 1921, to yield even less revenue than in previous years, if those who advocate downward tariff revisions have their way. By taxation alone, therefore, can the essential revenue be raised.

Ideal and perfect taxation is an admittedly human impossibility. Students of this most vexed problem unite in agreeing that the present system is "a cankering sore eating into the vitals of business." The Excess Profits Tax, they maintain, throttles industry and strangles initiative. The Income Tax practically exempts the little man and affects the wealthy, so that he withdraws both his capital and his brains from commerce. Where then lies the solution?

The Turnover Tax

Into this controversy the Gross Sales or Turnover Tax injects itself with a high hope. The idea is not new. It has been debated for centuries, but never before has industry been organized to a point that seems to offer so fair a chance for the success of this plan. William C. Cornwell, editor of Bache Review, expresses his view in the following forceful sentence:

"There is but one way out; one source untapped; one reservoir with almost unlimited supply; one method simple, smooth working, practicable and business like, instantly available, easy and economically administered—the tax on turnover—it will inestimably benefit every citizen of every class."

The Turnover Tax is, as its name implies, a tax upon the total or gross business done by every person or association of persons. The fixing of the rate or percentage, which for purposes of studying the problem has been figured at 1 per cent., is a matter which will be dependent upon the amount of revenue required from this tax and the amount of "turnover" of the country's business. The tax implies that every one who sells anything, or renders any service for payment, shall collect a prearranged percentage in addition to the actual sale price of the transaction. Essentially this percentage must be capable of being "passed on" to the consumer.

Basically it is the ultimate consumer —and we are all ultimate consumers— who enjoys the benefits and protection of Government, hence, fundamentally, any just tax must be borne by all the people equally in proportion. This is not the case with any system of taxation now in force.

The Problem

Granted then that the Turnover Tax has many strong arguments to recommend it, and admitting that the Business Profits Tax must be repealed, the questions arise: How much revenue is required? Can this tax produce it?

While Sir Henry Drayton has not yet tabled his 1921 budget, we have in hand the estimates of the fixed annual expenses of the Government, and the reasonable knowledge that this year's business activity is not likely on the whole to exceed 1920. With this in mind, and allowing for the repeal of the Business Profits Tax, also calculating a deficit of $50,000,000 on the National Railways,

WILL HOLD CONFERENCE ON MARCH 30 AND 31

A conference of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, will be held in Toronto on March 30 and 31, to discuss this important subject of taxation. The system of taxation at present in force, alternative methods suggested by the three interests and a possible taxation system that would be acceptable to all, will be taken up.

This article on the subject of taxation is one of a series. Taxation will be discussed from different angles and readers are invited and urged to express their opinions on this all-important matter. Canadian Grocer will be glad to receive expressions of opinions from retailers.

we arrive at a figure of $150,000,000, which has been estimated by some students as the probable yield that would be required from a Turnover Tax in 1921. Can this be done?

The answer is decidedly, yes, easily and cheaply. The actual "turnover" of Canadian business is not known, no official records ever having been prepared, but in the operation of the present Sales and Manufacturers' Tax, however, we have a most fortunate and striking example. According to the records of the Financial Department these two systems, which by the way have operated without friction or complaint, have yielded revenue to date at the rate of over $8,000,000 per month. Nearly $100,000,000 per year, and at that all food products, raw or manufactured, are totally exempt.

Can any better proof be asked? An increase of 1 per cent. in these combined taxes would raise the full amount needed. The extension of the system to the full intent of a Turnover Tax would raise enough revenue to retire our national debt in one or two years. A prominent member of the Senate Finance Committee estimates five billion dollars.

The Application

At first glance it might appear that 1 per cent. added to the cost of an article with each movement from raw material stage to consumer would accumulate a heavy aggregate tax. That this is not so has been proved by extensive studies of particular commodities, which indicate, in the case of a loaf of bread, an increase of merely one-sixth of a cent. A pound of beef adds, through four taxable sales, only one cent, or say 2½ per cent. to the final cost, while a pair of shoes, which sold in 1919 at $16.75, are increased 49 cents or 2.87 per cent. Jules S. Bache, speaking on this question in the United States, says:

"Those who have given time and thought to the working out of this tax have as yet been unable to find an article on which the tax would aggregate a greater amount than 3¼ per cent."

The Individual's Position

Though every one confesses to a willingness to pay his share, each is equally frank in claiming that conditions in his own particular business are "just a little bit different from every one else." The manufacturers see every reason why the retailer should do all the work of collecting, while the retailer argues that the tax should be applied at "the source." Fortunately the Turnover Tax will admit of many and varied applications and adjustments. On the officials at Ottawa will fall the duty of deciding its details. To us as merchants, business men and taxpayers, lies an obligation to see that our suggestions and views are made known.

This proposed tax should be considered by each individual, its incidence to his own business studied and the results of such investigation forwarded to Ottawa through association channels or direct. At this critical time of Government finance and business history, those who are responsible for national policies should have the benefit of the views of all classes and conditions of business men.

Taxation can make or break a nation —a fair and equitable tax spells progress—discriminatory, burdensome taxation means stagnation. It is our duty as citizens to decide whether we prefer to pay out our profits and income under the present system, or whether we prefer to have the burden spread, as it should be, equally, reasonably and proportionately over all the people.

Corn Syrups and Starches Reach Lower Levels

Reductions in the Cost of Corn Said to be the Reason—Containers Still High and Further Reductions Not Expected—Prices Now Lower Than a Year Ago

PRICES of laundry and culinary starches and of corn syrups declined this week, the decline taking effect on Thursday morning.

The starches are down half a cent a pound all round. Bulk syrup is reduced ½ cent. per pound, 2 pound tins 50 cents a case, 5, 10 and 20 pound tins 35 cents a case.

Gradually decreasing costs along some lines is the chief reason for the declines. The vice-president of one of the large Canadian companies, discussing this matter with Canadian Grocer, said that they seemed now to be approaching a basic price and that further recessions were not being looked for unless prices of raw materials should decline considerably more, which was not expected.

A year ago corn was around $1.90 a bushel, whereas today it is about half that price. On the other hand there is practically no difference in labels, boxes and barrels. In some cases prices are higher. So much so is this the case that the contents of the containers today represent only 45 per cent. of the total cost, whereas the package, including tins, labels, box, etc., represents 55 per cent.

A comparison between prices of starch and corn syrup today compared with those of a year ago shows considerable reductions. Here are some:

Laundry starch, March, 1920, 10¾ cents; same brand, March, 1921, 8 cents.

Corn starch, March, 1920, 12½ cents; same brand, March, 1921, 10 cents.

Look For a Big Increase in Small Fruit Production

Vancouver, B.C., March 14.—According to present estimates of the British Columbia Berry Growers' Association, a production of approximately 2,500 tons of small fruits is anticipated. Five hundred freight cars have been asked for to move the crop, as owing to their bulk a freight car will only handle about six tons of small fruits.

The British Columbia Berry Growers' Association has just been formed to do for berries what the Okanagan United Growers has done for apples and other tree fruits. It is made up of nine of the thirteen co-operative berry marketing organizations at present existing. The other four are expected to come in shortly. The association is a sales organization.

"Increased production has rendered this new organization necessary," said H. A. McNaughton, of Gordon Head, Vancouver Island, sales manager of the new association.

"Our production this year will be over 50 per cent. greater than last year, when the crop brought in $1,000,000. The berry acreage under cultivation will amount to about 2,800 acres. So successful have the berry growers found their smaller organizations that this new association, comprising the lower mainland and Vancouver Island, has been enthusiastically entered into."

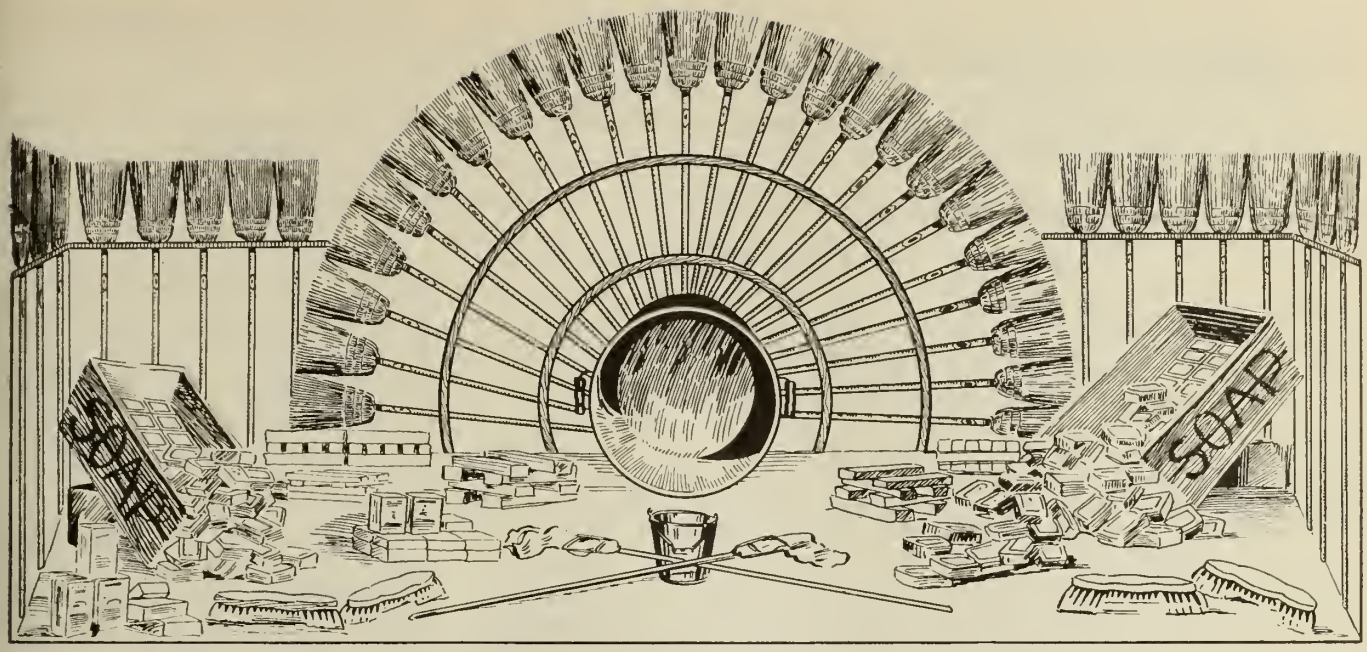
The new association will endeavor to enlarge the market for British Columbia berries. In the past the bulk of the crop has been shipped to the prairies as fresh fruit. This market will be exploited and enlarged wherever possible. An increasing quantity of small fruit will also be turned over to British Columbia factories to be made into jam.

GROCERY CLERKS IN MOOSE JAW WANT BY-LAW TO STAND

The grocery clerks of Moose Jaw, Sask., petitioned the council there recently, making a strong appeal against the cancelling of the by-law closing the stores on Wednesday afternoons.

A petition from a number of grocery store owners was later read to the council and Ald. W. E. Stephenson gave notice of motion that at the next regular meeting of the council he would introduce a by-law to amend the closing by-law in pursuance with the petition.

The council has no alternative but to bring in an amending by-law when a petition with the necessary number of bona fide grocers' names is presented.



This sketch is a suggestion for a window display of ho use cleaning needs that can be quickly and easily assembled. Note especially the brooms; how attractively and artistically they can be arranged.

Time for Housecleaning Suggestions

Spring Months Should See Every Grocer Stimulating Sales of Lines That Are Much Needed in the Weeks of Spring Renovating —Displays of These Articles Will Help

HOUSE cleaning time! How it conjures in the mind of the housekeeper days of ceaseless scouring, beating of rugs, hurried meals, backaches and all sprinkled with a certain amount of short temper. To friend husband it simply means digging up more excuses to detain him at the office with more regularity.

But what does it mean to the merchant? It is the opportune time to place on display goods that are more or less dormant for many months. Furniture polish, scouring powders, brooms, tubs, clothes pins, carpet beaters, brass and silver polish, floor wax, soaps, clothes lines, whitewash brushes, floor mops, carpet tacks, scrubbing brushes, laundry starch, wash boards and the many other articles contained in the stock carried by the retail grocer, that go a long way to lighten the strenuous housework during the spring house cleaning season.

Time for Window Displays

Many merchants are already making window displays of cleansing materials. Some of these displays are composed of just one article, but it is surprising the number of sales that can be made on many similar lines by such a suggestion.

One merchant recently made a window display of ammonia powder, put a price card on it and sold nearly five cases the last three days of the week. This merchant stated that many other articles were also sold, because invariably with every request for ammonia powder, soap, scrubbing brushes, brass polish or some other kindred article was suggested.

How This Idea Worked

When a representative of Canadian Grocer was in the store of Will Applegate, Hamilton, Ont., a customer was attracted by a basket on the counter containing a number of small round objects made of a yellowish brown substance. The customer, becoming curious, inquired what they were. She was informed that they were pieces of beeswax, very useful for ironing. The customer then remarked, "That puts me in mind, I am right out of starch. Send me over a 6 pound tin of gloss starch, and you might as well send five bars of soap and a package of —— blue."

After the customer was duly attended to, the Canadian Grocer representative referred to the incident and Mr. Applegate remarked, "I find it a good idea to have some article on the counter that the customer will get curious about, something that, when it is explained, will suggest some other article. This beeswax I had made into small domes by a customer living in the country who had some beeswax to sell. It occurred to me that, made into small shapes, the housewife would find uses for it in the home, and at the same time placed on the counter without any card explaining it would create an interest and eventually lead to sales of other articles of similar use. It has worked out satisfactorily and has been the direct means of making many sales."

Selling Polish

There are many articles that perhaps are not directly connected with house cleaning, but indirectly they are. One of these articles is shoe polish. It is in the spring months when the sales on this line are perhaps the heaviest. Some merchants do not let any opportunity pass them by to increase sales, no matter whether the opportune time is for selling shoe polish, house cleaning supplies or foodstuffs. The opportunity is there and they take advantage of it.

R. McDougal & Sons, Ingersoll, Ont., recently devoted a complete table to the display of a certain brand of shoe polish. This was a direct reminder to every person entering the store, and as the muddy days have arrived sales were made every day that perhaps would have gone to the nearest store.

Another table had a fine display of a certain brand of silver cream, brass polish and stove polish, both liquid and in tins. This was also successful not only in selling the particular lines and brand that was being concentrated on, but other lines as well.

Quickly Prepared Foodstuffs

There are certain lines of foodstuffs that could also be suggested to the housekeeper during the busy house cleaning days. Articles that are easily and quickly prepared are the best ones to feature. Baked beans are favorites at this season and should occupy a prominent place on display both in the window and in the store for several weeks yet to come, salmon and other fish and various kinds of canned meats, vegetables and fruits. Macaroni could also be a feature, and in selling macaroni do not forget to suggest canned tomatoes and cheese.

Difficulty Is Experienced in Turning Out Good Brooms Now

Such a Small Percentage of a Good Grade Broom Corn is Available That There Never Was Such a Spread in Prices as Now Exists.

SELL a customer a good broom and you have that customer's friendship for life, but sell her a poor one and —well, it is useless to comment upon this point as the majority of merchants have had some experience along this line.

From time to time since the last season's crop of broom corn was harvested, Canadian Grocer has reported the condition of the crop as to quality and as to the probable trend of prices. From information gathered it has been learned that a large portion of the crop was damaged by rain, leaving the corn stained and brittle and unfit for the manufacture of a good quality broom. Manufacturers have never had the difficulty in turning out their quality product as they are now experiencing. There is such a large portion of the poorer grade and such a small percentage of good grade that perhaps there never was such a spread in prices as exists at the present time. This has resulted in brooms of superior quality holding at high prices and the poorer grades dropping to a lower price than has been the case for several years.

The Present Situation

One manufacturer in summing up the present position in brooms says, "I may say that the situation is perhaps the most peculiar in the history of the broom business, and brooms can be bought from $13 per dozen down to $5 per dozen, and perhaps considerably less. This is due to the very unusual spread between the prices of the best and the lowest grade corn.

"Buyers will note that in brooms of equal weight and appearance there may be quite a large difference in price, and this is not necessarily an evidence that the one at the low price is the better value. The best colored corn produced in 1920 was grown in the most westerly broom corn section. It is a beautiful green color but as brittle as a pipe stem, and has very little wear. A good looking, low-priced broom can be made from this corn because the corn can be bought very cheaply. There is also a very great amount of dark brown, rain-damaged corn, and this also is very brashy.

Good Brooms Are Not Lower

"There is a tendency on the part of buyers to purchase brooms made of hard, brittle corn, if it is green, in preference to brooms made of corn which may be a little red but is very tough. A great percentage of the best wearing corn this year is somewhat red in color, but it has very fine, tough fibre.

"Real good quality corn of good color and fine, tough fibre still commands a high price, as it is very scarce, and therefore it is our opinion that the trade cannot expect to buy good brooms at any lower prices until another crop is harvested next fall."

Illustrating how one merchant stimulates sales on house cleaning supplies. Brooms, brushes, washboards, polishes and other articles that assist the housewife during housecleaning days, are attractively displayed. Many of the articles have price cards attached so that the passerby can readily become acquainted with the price without bothering to ask.

This Grocer Sells the New Lines

James L. Hewson, Oakville, Ont., Is Enthusiastic About Introducing New Lines, Providing of Course, They Have Quality, and He is Convinced of It—His Success in Some Instances

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

APPLYING selling effort to new lines that have not previously been sold in his store, and are comparatively new on the market, is a practice that James L. Hewson, Oakville, Ont., has followed with more or less success. Articles of food, that were very little known in his district before he decided to push their sale, are now popular sellers with him, and have a well-established reputation. Mr. Hewson has been in business in Oakville for many years, and, of course, during this long period he has built up a large clientele. His customers have been such for an extended time, and have come to take Mr. Hewson's recommendation as a pretty safe guarantee that an article is of high-grade quality and well worth a trial.

A Certain Exclusiveness

Selling special lines and new preparations that are of reputable value is not only good business from the standpoint of profit, but it gives a store a certain exclusiveness that is worth while. The store is known as the place to buy high-class specialties. Some grocers make no attempt to introduce lines of this kind, but wait until in some other way a customer hears of them and asks for them. On the other hand, the live grocer has a splendid opportunity to increase his sales by keeping in touch with new foodstuffs as they come on the market, making a careful study of their value. Assured of their quality, he can with perfect safety introduce them to his trade.

Tries Them at Home First

Mr. Hewson in his business has done a good deal along these lines. "Of course, I always try them out in my own home first," he told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day, when discussing his experience in introducing lines that he had not before carried. "Sell yourself on a product first, and then there will not be much difficulty in the way of selling your trade," Mr. Hewson continued. "The average customer looks to her grocer for his recommendation before purchasing an article that she herself knows little about. The grocer must have confidence in the line." Just here it may be remarked that while the Canadian Grocer representative waited in Mr. Hewson's store he saw something of this merchant's selling ability. Two women customers who deal all the time with Mr. Hewson came into the store, purchasing a number of articles. Completing their order they were about to depart when Mr. Hewson directed their attention to a certain kind of cream cheese that he had just received. Discussing its merits with them, the result was that he added a sale of this cheese to what was supposedly a complete order. This is just an instance of what Mr. Hewson is doing all the time in the way of selling, and is merely mentioned in passing.

Success in Powdered Coffee

The subject of selling prepared or soluble coffee came up in the course of the conversation. Mr. Hewson is selling a lot of it, in spite of the fact that his ordinary sales of his own coffee, ground in his own store, run over one hundred and fifty pounds a month. "Some time ago," he remarked, "I decided to 'push' the sale of a certain brand of this powdered coffee. Previously I had been selling another kind, but to-day I am selling ten to one of the other. That is, I am selling more of the one I decided to push, and to-day people are buying it in preference to all others. The best class of people in Oakville are buying soluble coffee and buying it all the time.

Repeat Sales All the Time

"Three years ago I bought a certain oil preparation for cooking. It was a line that was not enjoying any popularity as far as this district was concerned. However, I tried it and was convinced of its worth. At the outset it was not an easy thing to sell, but sales have steadily grown, and I am constantly having repeat orders. A new breakfast food came on the market a short time ago. I am boosting it all the time, and am selling on an average a dozen packages per week. I believe it will be a big seller as more people give it a trial. There was another breakfast preparation that I introduced here with a good deal of success, particularly in the winter months."

Windows Greatest Asset

Mr. Hewson is enthusiastic about this business of selling new lines and enumerated some other articles for which he had created a good demand by getting behind them and recommending them to his trade. His method of introduction can be followed by any merchant. It is merely selling effort directed against certain lines. Mr. Hewson usually backs up his selling talks with attractive window displays, as well as displays on the counter. "A grocer's windows are his greatest asset," he added, "but he must keep them right. If they are not frequently changed and made sufficiently attractive to bring people into the store, they won't do much in the way of increasing sales."

One Hundred Merchants in West Attend Short Course

Splendid Addresses are Given at Merchants' Training School, at the University of Manitoba, on Subjects of Vital Interest to the Retail Trade—"Henry Johnson, Jr." Speaks

WINNIPEG, March 12.—In the neighborhood of one hundred retailers attended the fourth annual training school for merchants at the University of Manitoba here. Winnipeg, as well as many Manitoba and Saskatchewan towns, was represented.

Grocers and general merchants in Western Canada who attended this short course for retailers were A. D. Blair, Alexander, Man.; George Hardy, manager A. F. Higgins Co., Ltd., Carman, Man.; B. W. Caldwell, Carberry, Man.; Misses A. B. Ferguson and L. A. Halliday, clerks in Elm Creek, Man.; J. F. Teeple, Foxwarren, Man.; Mrs. J. H. Carrell, Glenora; F. A. Kent, and W. A. EXERTING SELLING EFFORT

A GOOD motto for the business man to keep before himself and his staff these days is that one to the effect that there are "no hard times coming, it's just the soft times going." It has been pointed out on many occasions that the present phase of the readjustment process is one which forces a return to those conditions where selling again returns to its former importance. In this connection every merchant should see to it that due attention is paid to the perfection of his selling system to meet present conditions. One of the first steps that might be taken is to see that every salesman on the staff is sufficiently well informed in regard to the lines he sells that he can give the maximum service to customers. There are many points such as courtesy, to be kept in mind, but it is doubtful if any other element is quite as important in selling as a detailed knowledge of the goods being sold, and as to what advantage will result from their ownership.

A good example of effective selling is that contained in the experience of an Oakville grocer, as told elsewhere in this issue. This merchant is getting behind new lines that recommend themselves to him all the time, and greatly increasing his profits by such selling effort.

Such facts as these provide convincing argument and whereas in recent years of prosperity there has been little need for such selling effort, it is now required in full measure.

WHERE HAVE MY PROFITS GONE

EVERY once in a while or at least once a year, a merchant will take a pencil and go off to some quiet corner and try to figure out why his profits did not turn out as he expected. His turnover is sufficiently large to warrant the expected profit. The honesty of his assistants is unquestioned. Apparently there is no great amount of petty pilferage by outsiders. Customers are settling their accounts fairly regularly and bad accounts are not alarming. He fusses and fumes, scratches his head, then settles down to a quiet hour of figuring and yet he cannot get any nearer the truth. What is the matter?

It is a perplexing problem and the answer to it is significantly set forth in the words of a merchant who stated a fundamental truth when he said: "If a merchant is careful in his markup and keeps a correct record of all his business transactions, I cannot see how he can fail to make money."

REAPING THE BENEFIT

MERCHANTS who are following the markets downward are already reaping the benefit, and having adjusted their prices according to replacement values, are now turning their merchandise over at a profit. The experience of the grocer who posted a large card in his store stating prices before the readjustment period and since, in order that he might convince his trade that prices had really declined has apparently been followed by grocers in other communities. The other day a representative of Canadian Grocer was calling on merchants in a Western Ontario town. An enterprising merchant there referred to the article in this paper that related this comparison incident. He stated that he, too, had prepared a card, and was going to put it in his window. However, when he walked down the street he saw that one of his competitors had also seized the idea, and already had his price card before the public. Consequently he refrained from doing the same.

The wide-awake merchant is meeting the new prices, and this occurrence shows how some retailers are making the most of these price changes to stimulate trade. They are hastening a return of normal values.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

SPRING business promises to be good for those who will go after it. The man who gets an early start stands the best chance of getting his share.

MARCH is a good month for the grocer. As the halfway house between winter and spring, it offers big opportunities. Jams or preserved fruits may now be displayed to excellent advantage.

WITH only a week until Easter, the next few days afford the grocer an excellent opportunity to stimulate sales. There is always increased buying at this time, and with the help of window and counter displays the merchant can do much in the way of selling special lines in the next week. It is up to the retailer to make the most of these days preceding the holiday.

THE season is approaching or rather has arrived when merchants should give some attention to the selling of housecleaning lines. It is not too early to begin at once. Spring is here earlier this year than usual, and housewives will soon be into the spring cleaning. The early bird gets the worm and suggestions in the way of display will soon get your customers buying.

THE action of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association in seeking to have the Government increase parcel postage rates will have the approval of the retailer, particularly in the small towns and villages. Mail order houses who carry on extensively through the mails have enjoyed special privileges in this regard, while express and freight rates have had several advances.

Turnover, Sales, Profits and Margins

More Extended Comment and Examination of the Letter Quoted in Last Week's Issue—Does This Correspondent Make Three Per Cent. Net on Sales as He States?

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

THE last letter quoted last week I find deserves a little more extended comment and examination. My friend says I might aid him further if he knew what to ask for. Perhaps I can do it anyway.

Selling upwards of $65,000 with $3,400 stock, allowing for 20 per cent. average spread, he shows a stock-turn of just under 15½ times, which in itself is pretty nearly excellent.

But he says he makes three per cent. net on sales. Does he? I should want more detailed figures before I could feel sure he is right. Does he pay himself and son a salary for their work—a salary commensurate with their real value to the business—paid in money regularly? Does he figure normal interest—at this time at least 7 per cent. a year—on his capital investment and take that into his expense account before he casts up his record for the year? If either of these factors is omitted, he is not making any three per cent. net. There are other factors, but it is these that are most liable to omission. I shall be glad to hear.

He says he has tried sales but does not seem able to put them across. Then he adds that he advertises in the newspapers and seems able to convince the people. Question: What, then, does he understand by "sales"?

Sales Are the Disposal of Merchandise

Sales are the disposal of goods to buyers. If by any means, advertising or other, you succeed in selling goods enough to make your business pay and grow, you thereby show that you succeed in making sales.

If you mean special sales, efforts to clean up a lot of goods through extra push, cut prices, or other unusual and maybe spectacular means, maybe it is just as well that you did not succeed with them; for in any well established business such "events" are of doubtful utility or value.

By far too much stress tends to be placed on the price factor in all sales effort. A man puts on some special offering at a cut price, advertises it, and feels blue if it apparently fails to bite. What he overlooks here is the very valuable fact that his trade does not look to him for price as a primary consideration. His customers are interested in him and his goods more for the quality and character of the merchandise and service than for what he asks for the combination of goods plus service.

That he uses the newspaper and seems to convince his trade is the best evidence of this truth. Whatever effort he puts into trying to get rid of goods without adequate return in money is waste effort; and whatever sales result from that kind of effort are losing sales.

The lesson to be derived from this condition is that it is excellent business to advertise what you have and to state the price on it; but no need to quote losing prices, for your store is of the character that does not appeal for price—and as such is more valuable than if it did thus appeal. So continue the kind of "sales" that it pays you to make—sales of goods in daily business at fair margins.

If ever you have something bought on a special basis which will enable you to offer something extra choice at extra good value, by all means offer it. Do that without much excitement and back up your advertising by special inside effort of display and personal offerings. On this basis your business will continue to grow along lines that are profitable.

I'll be mighty glad to hear more from you.

What Margins Pay and Why

Edward Furer, in the West, writes to me thusly:

"I spend a good deal of time reading your articles and think a lot of them, but you most always show that it costs better than 15 per cent. to do business and, using this percentage to operate on, what money or profit do we make on a jelly powder costing $1.15 plus freight at $1.25 a cwt. on first-class merchandise, and selling it at $1.50. Also show me what we make on macaroni selling it at the price of one dime."

My answer, which I now elaborate, was along these lines:

With freight at $1.25 per cwt. you do not state what it costs you per dozen to lay in the jelly powder. If the cost is not more than 5 cents the dozen—and I shall be surprised if it is more—then the margin you indicate is not bad for that article. It pays you 20 per cent. in lots of 2 for 25 cents and nearly 24 per cent. when you sell one for 13 cents. This brand you speak of is undoubtedly the most rapidly moving item in its class, so is really a staple.

If the real margin is less than I indicate, it is not sufficiently profitable to justify you in handling it. You can find a way around any article that does not pay its way equitably; but that is up to you. You can tell nothing about it at all until you know in exact figures, down to the last decimal, just what it costs you laid in.

Much misunderstanding and confusion exists about many items because of necessary variations of margin. Look over what I have shown about sugar. This jelly powder as such and taken by itself as an unidentified item of a special class would have to pay more than 20 per cent.; but when it is so introduced, so completely sold, to your customers that it moves out regularly, in good quantity, without loss, automatically, it gets into the class of near-staple, or even full staple; and thus the sale at 20 per cent. is justifiable.

If you will compare this item with some that admit of larger earnings but cannot be sold even with considerable effort, you will have no difficulty in determining for yourself which is profitable and which not. And again, all these things must be figured to the third decimal before you can feel that you know and are not guessing.

Fair Margins vs. Grocers' Limitations

I was not posted on this particular macaroni at the time so wrote thus: I do not know cost or sales price on this macaroni. If you will give definite figures in your inquiries, we can always make a stab at analysis, but not otherwise.

It is not always true that items sold below the average cost of operation are sold without net profit. It is true that too many things are handled so they tend to cross your counter without paying their way, and you must be watchful and stand up for your rights. Let it be noted very carefully, at the same time, that the grocer himself is at fault, perhaps chiefly at fault, because it is almost impossible to get him to keep an adequate margin if you give it to him. Just as soon as the spread looks liberal, he cuts. Then the manufacturer is apt to think, "What's the use? I might as well charge the suckers more, seeing they do not care to make a profit!" Why not? What would you do in the manufacturer's place? I shall put more of this into an article in the near future.

Since I thus wrote, I have investigated. You can judge how nearly I hit the facts on the macaroni, for this is what I got first hand from the advertising man:

That macaroni sells to the grocer at 97½ cents in single dozen lots. Retailing at 10 cents it brings in 18¾ per cent. In five case lots it costs 95 cents, which makes the margin 20 5-6 per cent. This minimum of 95 cents is charged, as the manufacturer says, "to protect the retailer from himself," because if it were sold at 85 cents, the said retailer uni-

The Board of Trade of Peterborough, Ont., by a vote of its members is overwhelmingly in favor of daylight saving, and an effort will be made to have it again introduced for the summer months. Last year Peterborough did not adopt the measure.

John Panter, the oldest merchant in Belleville, Ont., celebrated his 84th birthday on Friday last by attending at his grocery as he has done for the past sixty years. He has been longer in business than any other merchant living in Belleville. He was born in Cornwall, England, and came to Canada in 1858.

The legislation committee of the Toronto city council decided to support the application of the retail merchants to amend the early closing by-law so that only fruiterers handling fresh fruits and vegetables should be excluded. The proposed amendment if adopted will mean that practically 95 per cent. of the fruit stores will have to close at the same time as the grocery stores.

OTTAWA GROCER IS FINED FIFTY DOLLARS AND COSTS

Ottawa, Ont.—On January 13, Magistrate Askwith fined an Ottawa grocer $50 and costs following a conviction for selling coloring contrary to the Oleomargarine Act. This led to an appeal and Judge McGillivray on March 8 dismissed the appeal. Austin O'Connor acted for the Department of Agriculture.

OTTAWA GROCERS' ANNUAL MEETING ON MARCH 23

The Ottawa Retail Merchants, grocers' section, held the usual meeting on March 10 when the notice of the annual election of officers was given, the date being set for March 23. The secretary of the Pure Food Show stated that the outlook for a record exhibition was remarkably bright as the response to letters sent out to the wholesale houses was very encouraging.

The sum of $25 was donated to the Protestant Infants' Home.

New Wholesale Business Opens In Granby, Que.

Granby, Que., March 15.—A new fireproof three-story wholesale warehouse has been built in Granby, Que., and is now occupied by the Dealers' Supply Co., Ltd., of which M. Mitchell is president. F. A. Wallace is secretary of the company and Edmund Dextradeur is vice-president. D. P. McDonald and J. E. Fuller, business men of Granby, are among the directors of the firm. For some years Mr. Mitchell, the president and manager of the company, owned a retail store in the city which handled general lines, including a grocery department. One year ago Mr. Mitchell went into the wholesale business, and is now deaing almost exclusively in wholesale grocery lines. The new warehouse is built of brick with a solid cement basement nine feet deep. This affords a dry, well-ventilated storeroom below the ground which can easily be kept at an even temperature. The floors throughout the building are of hardwood and the ceilings are high, which gives an increased capacity to the floor space of the building. Being practically a new company they are not carrying a heavy stock at the present time on account of market conditions. Mr. Mitchell reports a noticeable improvement in business conditions during the past month on account of the stabilization of the market with better buying on the part of both the consumer and the retailer.

Use Truck Delivery

From Granby in a radius of fifty miles there are many small towns, a great number of which are not touched by any railroad. This firm employs a large truck for their service to these outlying towns and in this way are able to make regular delivery twice a week.

NEW MAPLE SYRUP EARLIER THAN USUAL

Ingersoll, March 14.—Syrup-making is in progress in a number of the outlying districts, the season opening nearly two weeks earlier than usual. A small quantity of syrup has already been sold at $4 per gallon, according to reports, but this is not taken to indicate the standard price. With the drop in the price of other commodities as compared with previous seasons, it is expected syrup will also be cheaper.

New Goods

"DRY-CLENE"

"Dry-Clene" is a name of a new window-cleaning powder about to be placed on the Canadian market. It is made in London, England. The manufacturers point out that Dry-Clene requires no water. A little of the powder is sprinkled on the duster and rubbed on the glass. The claim is made for it that it will not smear or scratch the glass; that it will not soil the hands or damage paint work; that it will clean brass, copper and metals, as well as glass, also cutlery and steel instruments. It is put up in three different sized tins — two ounces, five ounces and one pound, also in bulk. La Fontaine & Harvey, 122 London Wall, London, England, are the export agents of the Dry-Clene Company.

Mark Shipping Gross Weight On Left-hand Corner of Container

Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association Issues Circular Asking for the Co-operation of the Manufacturers in This Regard—Protection Against Loss

An effort is being made on the part of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association to have manufacturers mark the shipping gross weight on all containers, on the left-hand corner. In a circular letter sent out to manufacturers it is pointed out that distributors should be protected against loss through freight overcharges by adopting such measures. Full particulars giving size of unit and number of dozen, etc., should appear on both ends of case.

Responsible for Errors

Containers, it is urged, should bear no external advertising except pertaining to the contents. The practice of advertising several factory lines on four sides of the case has been responsible for many errors in shipments.

The circular in part says:

"For some time the wholesale trade have been impressed with the necessity of adopting some measure to protect themselves, and especially their customers, from losses — in the agregate an enormous loss — arising through billing of excess weights by the transportation companies.

"During the strenuous times of the war and immediately succeeding period when maintenance of production was the vital problem, it was not considered wise to ask manufacturers to add any additional detail, no matter how small, to the difficulties they were then facing. However, the trade now feels that this is the logical time to institute a proper method that undoubtedly will prevent losses of many thousands of dollars annually to consignees throughout the country.

Arrived at "by Guess"

"For many years the wholesale trade have been billing out shipments at open weights (i.e., no weights inserted on bill of lading)—the great variety of lines carried and method of assembling orders for shipment making it impracticable to pass each case over the scale. In those cases where wholesalers have been inserting weights on bill of lading it appears that these were generally arrived at 'by guess'—and it is just a question if the shipper's guess was much more accurate than the 'guess' of the railway checker. In any event the ultimate consignee, who seldom has proper facilities for weighing up inward shipments, paid for the over-weight. In the days of pre-war freight rates these aggregate overcharges were a serious item; on to-day's rates they are about 80 per cent. more serious.

"Our request to you is that you meet the wishes of the trade, both wholesale and retail, by marking the gross shipping weight on the upper left-hand corner of your containers."

AUSTRALIA THE LARGEST TEA-DRINKING COUNTRY

Australia, not Russia or Great Britain, or even China, is the largest tea-drinking country in the world on the capitation basis. There the consumption for each individual, including children, is equal to nine pounds a year. About three-quarters of the quantity comes from India and the balance from China. There is no duty on the importation of tea into the commonwealth, consequently there is no expectation, so long as that position remains, of growing tea there on a large exporting scale, but for consumption in the home it is very possible in certain districts, particularly in Queensland. Coffee will also thrive in many parts of Queensland. Connoisseurs in England have already expressed a favorable opinion upon the quality of the coffee grown upon the coast lands of Queensland, and though the cost of harvesting the berries commercially is at present a handicap, that reason does not apply to harvesting the quantity needed for family consumption.

ACTIVITY IN THE TEA TRADE

As an indication of the activity in the tea trade it is interesting to note that a few days ago there arrived in Toronto from Halifax a single shipment of twenty carloads of tea consigned to one company. The 4,000 chests in the lot were brought over from London by the steamers Castellano, Corsican and Canadian Planter.

who go fishing these days?

It's on the opposite page.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Did you ever go fishin' without bait?—get many?

There's a big catch of Sun-Maid Raisin profits to be hooked in the next two months. Are you displaying your stock?

WE'RE pushing now the greatest food advertising campaign ever released to American newspapers. Half a billion copies of our ads will run in the next nine weeks. Nothing like it ever appeared before in the raisin business.

Millions and millions of people in practically every city and town urged to eat more raisins than ever before! Millions of women are told of the new discovery that "food-iron" in raisins makes them the best natural beauty food.

Imagine it! How many dollars that formerly went to the cosmetic manufacturers will roll into the retail grocers' pockets.

What are you doing to hook YOUR share of this business?

Raisins are the bait! Don't hide them under your counter—put them in the window where the readers of our ads can see that YOU have them. Identify YOUR business with this campaign.

There's a mighty big demand for SUN-MAID RAISINS. YOUR customers are reading "reasons-why" arguments in their papers every day.

We are being literally swamped by increased demands for recipe books. We're putting out more a day than we formerly did a month. They come from every market—YOUR customers are convinced of everything except that YOU have them in stock.

If you were fishin' you wouldn't expect the fish to go through your pockets for the bait!

Opportunity is at your front door now, knocking the skin off his knuckles—don't be in the back yard looking for four-leaf clovers! Throw it wide and grab him by the coat lapel!

Trim that window today!

Don't wait until the campaign is over. Fill your window with real SUN-MAID RAISINS—open some of the cartons. Let your customers see what you have to sell. You wouldn't go fishin' without bait, would you?

Yours for Sun-Maid Success,

SEND IN PHOTO OF YOUR WINDOW DISPLAYS

Readers of Canadian Grocer are constantly making special window displays, pictures of which Canadian Grocer would be glad to obtain for the purpose of reproduction. We will pay up to three dollars for each acceptable window sent in, the photograph to be at least six by eight inches. The live merchant is always displaying some line of goods in an effort to stimulate sales, and we want to get these displays from time to time. Easter displays, windows of housecleaning merchandise, of jams, of fresh fruits, of canned goods, in fact of all products sold in a grocery store, will be appreciated, and subscribers are asked to send them to Canadian Grocer, accompanied by invoices of cost of the same in duplicate. In the next ten days you will be making a feature in your windows of special lines for Easter. Many attractive displays will be made. Let us have a photograph of yours.

bank, Sask., and Chas. S. McLean, Preeceville, Sask.

Efficiency in Retail Stores

Paul Findlay, Los Angeles, Cal., better known to readers of Canadian Grocer as Henry Johnson, Jr., was one of the speakers at the training school, speaking on "Efficiency in retail stores." Mr. Findlay showed the fallacy of extensive price cutting and the reaction on the goods to which it is applied. One of the biggest principles in efficiency of retail stores was the ability to say "no," he declared. This had special significance in the conduct of a credit business.

Study Mail Order Prices

Retail merchants who examine the catalogues of mail-order houses and study them carefully are able to compete successfully with this class of business, said Robert C. Line, retail merchant, of Columbus, Montana, in addressing the training school for merchants. The mail-order business stimulates business generally, and local trade is benefited because of the fact that new business has been created and because of the creation of new demands. This Mr. Line illustrated by the introduction of new devices for production on the farm bringing about increased farm production and greater wealth to the farmer with a consequent better purchasing power.

Judge Frank T. Wilson, of Minnesota, spoke on "The Co-operative Marketing of Farm Products," in which he emphasized the importance of local merchants making themselves familiar with the marketing conditions in their own town so that the farmer could receive the top price for his products.

During the course, a dinner was tendered those attending, by the Sales Managers' Association, representing the wholesalers and manufacturers of Winnipeg.

G. F. Stevenson, of the Western Grocers, Ltd., Winnipeg, is on an inspection trip to the various branches of this firm.

Want Parcel Postal Rates Increased

Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association Endorsed by Retail Merchants' Associations and Boards of Trade, Will Petition Government in Effort to Have Parcel Postage Increased—Charge Rates on Parcel Postage on Basis of Third-class Mail Matter

ENDORSATION of Retail Merchants' Associations and Boards of Trade throughout the Dominion is being sought by the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association on behalf of a petition to be forwarded to the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, Premier of Canada, and the members of the Dominion Cabinet. This petition is the outcome of some concerted action decided upon by the Wholesale Grocers' Association in an endeavor to remedy what the association claims is unfair discrimination in favor of mail order houses. For some time past this organization has discussed the question of parcel postage rates, pointing out that the same are unreasonably low and have not increased correspondingly with the advances that have taken place in freight and express charges. This discrimination, it is pointed out, has operated to the disadvantage of small towns and villages and very much to the profit of mail order houses in large cities.

The petition that is now being signed in its entirety is as follows:

Your petitioners humbly desire to show that your Government is distributing general merchandise at a tremendous loss to the revenue of the country, injuring the regular distributing trade and the village and rural interests of the country. That your Government in the distribution of third-class mail matter has given an option to the sender to forward by parcel post, which permits the large catalogues from the mail order houses to be distributed at parcel postage rates.

A Loss to the Country

That your Government has been distributing second-class mail matter at a considerable loss to the country, the Minister of Labor in September, 1919, having stated that in delivering newspapers alone there was a loss to the revenue of approximately $6,000,000 annually. That during the session of 1920 the Parliament of Canada increased the postal rates on newspapers, but no increase was made in rates on catalogues or parcel postage.

That your Government is charging excessive rates on first-class mail matter, which shows a large profit, which is being absorbed by the loss in the other classes.

That this condition results in a practical alliance between your Government and the mail order houses for the distribution of catalogues and general merchandise at less than cost, in competition with the regular distributing business of Canada.

Four Increases in Freight Charges

That at the time the Government of Canada entered into the contract with the railway companies for the transportation of mail matter, the dominating influence of the Government secured a more favorable contract from the railways than the rates charged to the general public, which we contend is wrong, as the Government (representing the people collectively) should pay on the same basis as the people individually. Otherwise, there is a discrimination against certain class interests.

Your petitioners humbly show that there have been four increases in freight rates since the contract was entered into, viz.: December, 1916, 5 per cent.; March, 1918, 15 per cent.; August, 1918, 25 per cent., and September, 1920, 40 per cent., making an accumulated increased charge of 111.3125, which applied to the full extent on all classification goods except the item of fresh milk, which is not dealt in by mail order houses in the way it is handled by the farmers and distributing trade. Since January 1, 1921, however, the 40 per cent. advance of September, 1920, has been reduced to 35 per cent., making the present increased charge 103¼ per cent.

Express Charges Also Advance

That the rates by express have also been substantially advanced from time to time. On September 1, 1919, the Board of Railway Commissioners made an order giving large increases in rates, which, however, in view of the change to the "Block System" to correspond with that adopted by the United States Interstate Commerce Commission, it is difficult to ascertain the exact increase, but it was considered to be not less than 37 per cent. on first-class rates. On 9th February, 1921, the rates were further advanced by 35 per cent. on first-class rates, 25 per cent. on second-class rates and 20 per cent. on commodity rates. Goods distributed by parcel post would be first-class by express and these two advances would make 84.95 per cent. As a transportation problem parcel postage distribution is in direct competition with the express companies and should be subject to the same treatment from that point of view.

That the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada investigated the terms of the contract between the Government and the railway companies on October 3, 1911; November 17, 1911, and March 18, 1919, and it was shown that while the railways charged 16 cents per full car mile (the basis of calculation) they should have increased it to 34.7 cents for a full car mile, an advance of 116⅞ per cent. Since that investigation there has been an advance of 40 per cent., less 5 per cent., equalling 35 per cent.—which would increase the 34.7 cents to 46.845 cents as against 16 cents, an advance of 192¾ per cent.—a condition that the Government surely must admit as unjust to the railway companies, and creating an unwarrantable discrimination against the regular distributing interests of the country.

That on the 16th February, 1921, the Government, by order-in-council P.C. 379 has given effect to the Board of Railway Commissioners' judgment of August 29, 1919, and established 34.7 cents as a full car mile rate, an advance of 116⅞ per cent., which, however, does not take care of the last advance in freight rates allowed the railway companies of 35 per cent.

Mail Costs Are Higher

That there has been a large general advance in the cost of distribution to the Government. Wages have increased and further increases are apparently in order, and the equipment in every branch for the distribution and delivery of mail matter has also advanced.

That the system of mail order houses being able to, under such circumstances, there having been no increase whatever in parcel postage, deliver their goods at less than cost through the Government service, and at a loss to the Government and transportation companies, is seriously injuring village and country life. Millions of dollars have been taken away from the small villages and surrounding country and centred in the large cities, to the detriment of the general welfare of the country.

That the question has been seriously considered by the local legislatures, but no system has been found practical for assessing the mail order houses in the village or rural municipalities where these houses send their goods without paying any taxes towards the upkeep of such municipalities. These privileged advantages accorded the mail order houses preclude the country retailer from profitably keeping a well-assorted stock of the best quality of goods, and prevent him from being able to give an efficient service to his customers.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

GENERALLY speaking the markets for grocery commodities are slowly coming back to a steadier basis, and although there are still considerable irregularities in prices these are not in accordance with market conditions but are more in the nature of competition among wholesalers.

The tone of the sugar market is a strong one with a possibility of an advance, attributed to the higher prices on raws. The Sugar Finance Committee which has control of the Cuban crop have advanced prices of raws to a basis of 5 cents c. & f. and have disposed of some 100,000 tons; 65,000 tons being sold to American interests and 35,000 tons to European and Canadian interests at 4.60 f.o.b. Cuba. Considerable sales have also transpired of sugars outside the control such as Porto Ricos at 6.02 cents and full duty paying sugars such as San Domingos at 4⅝ cents.

Corn syrups and starches are reduced in price, due to the lower cost of corn, but as containers and other costs outside of corn are still high, further reductions are not looked for.

Teas and coffees continue with a strong tone and advances in primary markets are noted, especially on the finer grades, for which Canadian consumers show the preference.

Shelled walnuts on spot continue in light supply and are holding at firm figures. Pecans are also strong at the high figure. New crop Brazils in the shell are offered at a lower price than last season. Cocoanut is ruling steady and unchanged.

Canned vegetables are firm at slightly higher quotations in some quarters, while canned fruits are dull with a great deal of irregularity in prices and the same condition is manifest on jams.

Currants are firmer and higher in primary markets. Evaporated apples have a firmer tone and are showing greater activity. Raisins are holding firm and stocks are not large. Raisins at the coast are practically cleaned up and some buyers for American houses have been on the Canadian market, and some 15,000 cases of raisins have been re-shipped from Toronto stocks to American points.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 16.—Perhaps the most striking and most important feature of the markets this week is the probability of higher prices on sugar in view of the advance in the price of raws. In canned goods higher prices are quoted locally on corn and peas. Some notable changes are made in the quotations on spices this week which is the result of a more active market and the ability of importers to follow more closely the trends of the primary markets when the spices are moving more quickly. There is no change in molasses. Corn syrup is reduced in price. Golden syrups are being sold cheaper. In vegetables, new cabbage and onions are advanced, but California celery is offered at reduced prices. The only change in the fruit market is a lower quotation on Porto Rico grapefruit. The rolled oats market is very firm and there is some talk of advance in price. There is practically no change in nuts or dried fruits. The coffee market is very strong with a tendency towards higher prices. Some lower quotations are made this week on soaps and wrapping paper. The tea market has a much firmer tone with a steady movement of supplies, but these are only in quantities to meet immediate requirements.

Strong Tendency to Coffee

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The coffee market is unchanged this week. The primary markets are very strong, with an upward tendency, which is expected to break any time. This market, however, will not be immediately affected, as the stocks on hand are sufficient to carry over trade until adjustments are made gradually. At the present time the market is very firm in price.

Rolled Oats in Firm Market

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is no actual change this week in the quotations on cereals, but the rolled oats market is exceedingly firm and there is every indication of a rising market. Nothing definite has been said in this regard, but from general appearances the market is at present a buying market for the retailer. Prices on rolled oats have in the past been cut to a very low point and it seems likely that prices are coming back at least a little.

CANNED GOODS.—Further advances have been made this week in the prices quoted in Montreal on corn and peas by the local wholesalers. There has been a big run lately on both these lines, which has forced prices upward. The canned goods market in general is very firm at this time. Corn, early June and standard peas are up five cents a dozen.

RIED FRUITS.—There is nothing rticularly new in the dried fruit mar- this week. The demand continues y good, with a shortage of spot stocks raisins. The market is quite firm roughout, with a good movement. Cur- nts having steadily gained in demand th a firm price. Dried apples and aches are much firmer and supplies of e cheaper grades did not last long ough to disturb the market. New tes, loose, are being offered on the rket at 11 cents per pound.

Grapefruit Lower

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The only change in the fruit market this week is a decline of 25 cents per case on Porto Rico grapefruit, making the price $4.75 per case. There is a good demand for oranges and grapefruit, but there has not been a big call for strawberries and such fruit, which, though out of season, have been imported for the city trade. Strawberries are selling retail at $1 and $1.25 for a small box.

Brazil Nuts are Lower

Montreal.

WALNUTS.—The nut market is quite steady and firm in price, with a good demand for supplies. Walnuts in particular are very firm, but new Brazil nuts are quoted lower at 30 cents per pound. This is the only change of the week in the nut market.

Wooden Dishes Cheaper

Montreal.

WOODEN DISHES.—Lower prices are quoted this week on wooden dishes. The new prices quoted below are on crates of five hundred: ½ lb., $2.48 per crate; 1 lb., $2.70 per crate; 2 lb., $3.13 per crate; 3 lb., $3.90 per crate.

Wrapping Paper Reduced

Montreal.

WRAPPING PAPER.—Further reductions are made on Kraft wrapping paper this week. The prices quoted locally are reduced 1¼ cents per pound to 13¼ cents. This is on account of the lower prices on paper generally.

Lower Prices on Tapioca

Montreal.

RICE—The rice market is in the same unsettled condition, and it is impossible to quote any standard price. American dealers are endeavoring to unload stocks and prices are being cut further. The tapioca market is in about the same condition and New York is selling pearl and seed at as low as 2½ cents per pound in larger shipments. This gives dealers throughout the country the chance to sell well under the quotations here given which are about the average market prices here.

Sugar Likely to be Higher

Montreal.

SUGAR.—More strength is added to the sugar market this week in view of the fact that during the last ten days the Cuban Commission, which has a controlling hand in the sugar market, has seen fit to advance the price of raws twice, and quotations now stand at 6 cents duty paid New York. From this it seems quite evident that there will be a break in the sugar prices in Canada. American refineries have already withdrawn their quotations.

Maple Syrup Prices Uncertain

Montreal.

MAPLE SYRUP.—The maple syrup and maple sugar market is yet in a very uncertain state. The weather has not been conducive to a good flow of sap, but a cold wave has struck the Province of Quebec with a snowfall. It remains to be seen whether or not this is too late to revive possibilities of a production this year. The season is particularly early this year. If there is a flow there are reasons to believe that prices will be very low this year on account of certain market conditions, which are explained at length elsewhere in this issue. The initial price on some syrup that has been produced in some parts of this province has been set at $1.25 per gallon. Other prices, as quoted in the city, are much higher. No definite statement can yet be made in regard to this market.

Changes in Spice Prices

Montreal.

SPICES.—Dealers in spices report a much better trade in spices this month, which has resulted in some adjustments in prices. In some cases it means lower prices, while in others it means higher prices. The prices of cloves on the primary markets have dropped considerably and local prices are down a little as a result. Spot stocks, however, have been purchased at a higher price than present quotations and dealers are losing money at present prices, which are not yet as low as the quotations on primary markets would warrant. It is then to be expected that still lower prices will be quoted on cloves as soon as the importers are in the market to buy again. Mace and allspice are cheaper, but the demand for mixed spices has caused some advance on the price, which is now quoted at 30 to 32 cents a pound.

Syrups are Reduced

Montreal.

MOLASSES AND CORN SYRUPS.—There is no change in the molasses market this week, which is standing fairly firm. Lower prices are given on Lyle's Golden syrup, which is an English product. There is a decline of $1 per case (112 one-pound tins), which makes the price $18 per case, and a decline of $1.25 per case (56 two-pound tins), which is quoted at $16.75. Corn syrups are reduced 35 to 50 cents per case.

Starches are Lower

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—There are few changes in the quotations on package goods this week. Sisters' starch is reduced 25 cents per case (48 packages), now quoted $6.25 per case. Other laundry and culinary starches are reduced one-half cent per pound. Lowney's Breakfast Cocoa is reduced 3 cents per pound and half-pound packages are quoted at 44 cents per pound.

Lower Prices on Soaps

Montreal.

SOAPS.—The soap market has fluctuated considerably in the last few weeks. This week the price is reduced twenty-five cents per case on all laundry soaps of standard brands and Fairy and Comco soap is reduced $1.15 per case to $7.

Firmer Trend to Tea Market

Montreal.

TEAS.—There is very little change in the tea market this week except that quotations coming from the primary markets are a little firmer than they have been and a little stronger tendency to the market is evident. Buying is reported to be a little better, but still only in quantities sufficient to carry the dealers from month to month. There is no speculation in this market, but the trade is fairly steady.

California Celery Cheaper

Montreal.

VEGETABLES. — There are three changes in the quotations given on vegetables this week and two of the three are advances in price. New cabbages are fifty cents per hamper dearer, red onions are advanced fifty cents per cwt., and California celery is quoted one dollar per crate lower. There is an excellent demand for the fresh imported vegetables and in the case of cabbages this is mainly responsible for the advance in price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 16.—The most notable feature in general groceries is the reduction in the price of corn syrups and starches. These reductions bring these commodities down considerably less than a year ago, further details of which are contained in an article elsewhere in this issue. The sugar market is strong with indications for an advance. Dried apricots are lower. Tea and coffees are holding firm. Shelled walnuts on spot continue scarce with quotations firm and unchanged. Canned vegetables are active and quotations firm. Canned fruits are dull and some irregularity is noted in quotations. Sago is lower. One brand of marmalade is quoted easier for this season's pack. Reductions are noted on one brand of peanut butter, salted peanuts, baked beans, toilet soap, and washing powder.

Coffee Holding Firm

Toronto.

COFFEES — Fine grade coffees continue in a strong position but the lower grades appear to be easier. This last condition, however, does not materially affect the situation in Canada as Canadians generally show a preference for the better grades.

Cereals Rule Steady

Toronto.

CEREALS—Rolled oats are fairly firm at $3.50 to $3.60 per bag. Other cereals are ruling steady at unchanged quotations.

Canned Vegetables Firm

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS—Canned tomatoes generally are holding firm at $1.80 per dozen, although some wholesalers are offering independent packs at $1.60 per dozen. Standard peas are quoted at 1.65 to $1.70 per dozen and corn at 1.50 to $1.60 per dozen. The tone of canned vegetables has been more or less firm one for several weeks and indications point to a tendency to continue so for the balance of the season. Canned fruits are practically at a standstill and there appears to be a great deal of irregularity in prices. One wholesale is offering Hawaiian pineapple 2s this week at $3.60 per dozen. Quotations on jams are purely nominal as there is much price cutting and jams are now offered at lower prices than they have been for the past two or three years. Four pound jams strawberry or raspberry are offered as low as 75 cents and 16 ounce glass at 3.50 per dozen. Brunswick sardines are reduced to $6 per case.

Baked Beans Easier

Toronto.

BAKED BEANS—Van Camp's pork and beans are reduced to the following prices: Individual 85 cents per dozen, small $1.30 per dozen, medium $1.85 per dozen; spaghetti small $1.48 per dozen, spaghetti medium $2.20 per dozen, in five case lots 5 per cent. less.

Apricots Quoted Lower

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS — Evaporated apples are showing an improvement in the demand and the market is on a steadier basis. Prunes are showing more activity and prices are now generally holding fairly steady. Apricots are easier, one house is offering extra fancy in 25 pound boxes at 23 cents per pound. Peels are easier and the general price for lemon and orange is 45 cents per pound and for citron 75 cents per pound. Currants in primary markets are firmer but in some quarters wholesales state they have supplies in transit that they will be able to sell at less than the present prices. The supply of raisins at the coast is practically cleaned up and it is reported that some 15,000 cases have been sold from Toronto stocks and shipped to the United States.

Sugar Market Firm

Toronto.

SUGAR—With raw sugars steadily advancing there are indications for an advance in refined. Heavy transactions have transpired in raws for Europe, Canada and United States at prices around five cents per pound c. and f. This price is around two cents per pound higher than at the beginning of the year. The situation is such that with some of the refiners still working on raws that cost even higher prices than at the present, and with the raw market now practically under the control of the Sugar Finance Committee, there is every possibility of higher prices on Canadian refined. American refined also advanced to 8 cents per pound during the week.

Prune Prices Lower

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—There has been an active demand for prunes since lower prices were named. Peaches, pears and apricots are easier with indications for lower prices. The Grecian crop of currants is not up to expectations and prices quoted are considered very reasonable. The demand for currants has increased owing to the higher prices demanded for raisins. Raisins remain very firm.

Pineapples Arriving

Winnipeg.

FRUIT.—The first shipment of pineapples has arrived on the market and are quoted at $15 per case. Louisiana strawberries are expected on this market in time for the Easter trade. Bananas advanced one cent and are now quoted at 14 cents per pound. The demand for oranges and grapefruit continues steady and shows no change in price. Oranges are quoted at $4.50 to $7.50 per case and grapefruit at $6.50 to $7.50. California lemons are quoted at $6 to $6.50 per case.

Flour Unchanged

Winnipeg.

FLOUR.—There are no new developments in the flour market. The demand is mostly for domestic consumption. No. 1 Manitoba flour in cotton bags is quoted at $10.85 per barrel; jute bags, $10.65.

Shelled Walnuts Firm

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—Shelled Bordeaux walnuts remain very firm and indications are that prices may even go higher. Supplies which are arriving are going immediately into consumption. Shelled almonds are slightly easier in Europe but with the recovery of exchange prices locally are somewhat increased. No. 1 Spanish shelled peanuts are slightly easier and are quoted f.o.b. Virginia at practically pre-war prices. The present time is considered a timely one to buy this line at prices quoted. Brazils for future have shown a decided drop and it is expected that this popular nut will be back to a normal price and the consumption largely increased. Shelled pecans are practically unobtainable and the few that are offered are quoted at $1.30 per pound.

PICKLES.—Cheaper prices on pickles are not expected with perhaps the exception of sweet pickles. Pickle manufacturers state that it would, however, be necessary for sugar to drop about $2 per bag before the decline would be effected. The Empress Manufacturing Company, of Vancouver, B.C., have decided to pack a pickle in a number 10 tin, the prices of which are as follows:

Sweet pickle, No. 10 tin, $1.30; sweet chow, No. 10 tin, $1.30; sour pickles, No. 10 tin, $1.15; chow pickles, No. 10 tin, $1.25.

Tea Market Firm

Winnipeg.

TEA.—Tea reports from Colombo state that the market is rising and all low teas both broken and leaf show an increase of 20 cents while high-grown teas show an increase from 15 to 30 cents per pound. It is considered that the finer teas from Ceylon are the best seen for years, due to the finer plucking and more attention being paid to the manufacture of teas. It is not expected that prices will be so low as they have been during the past two months.

WANT PARCEL POSTAGE RATES INCREASED

Only a Partial Service

That your petitioners claim that the Government should not be a party to a system of distribution of merchandise, especially a system which gives only a partial service, in competition with the regular trade and commerce of the country, which gives a universal service, but if such should still be the policy of your Government you should increase the rates on parcel postage to the same extent as the rates on the same goods have been increased to the other distributors and charge the rates on parcel postage on the basis of third-class mail matter, in which case we are confident that the prosperity of the small villages and rural localities would be revived, and such a revival would obviously be greatly in the interests of the nation. No nation can expect to be truly great whose policy drains the life blood out of the villages and country districts and centres wealth and influence in its large cities instead of diffusing it as widely as possible.

Your petitioners therefore humbly request that a commission be appointed to take evidence and inquire into the whole question of the distribution of mail matter and report to your Government, making such recommendations as it may deem to be fair to the distributing trade and in the interests of the Canadian people.

Wall of Sliced Bacon Means Big Sales

A Few Days Preceding Easter the Time to Increase Sales of Hams and Bacon—Make the Most of Your Opportunity to Sell Special Foods at Easter—Some Window Displays Described

By Staff Correspondent, Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, March 18. — One week from to-day is Good Friday, giving the merchant one more week in which to take advantage of the Easter business. During this week the effectiveness of window displays is more evident than ever. On every hand are signs of Easter. Every down-town window has some seasonable significance and all have, no doubt, the effect of increasing sales in each particular line shown. Although Easter comes very early this year the weather, particularly in Ontario and Quebec, is quite in keeping with the Easter season and so increases its value as a stimulus to business.

Featuring Meats

In preparing and planning displays for this season it is well to keep in mind the fact that with the coming of Easter comes increased sales of meats and in most provision windows bacons and hams are very prominent. These and fruits lend themselves to very artistic arrangement. Then, too, early fresh vegetables are featured by many merchants, but still, during this coming week, it is important that in displaying these lines the suggestion of Easter should be present in order to get the most results from the display. People are looking for such displays at this time. Rosette and paper flowers are very popular bu perhaps almost common. The popula coloring seems to be red and blue o blue and white. In the choice of colo ing the lines to be displayed must b considered. Many merchants choos blue and white on which to displa bacons, hams and eggs. The rust color of the hams stands out in contra against this background and still ha monizes with the general color schem

A Cross of Fruits

One Montreal provision merchant wh is noted for his effective window dis plays has arranged a window of fruit vegetables and meats that command attention. The base of his window i tilted at an angle of about 45 degree The background of this window or th main coloring is green, made up of green vegetables such as lettuce, celery, young cabbages, etc. In the centre of the window, worked in among the green, is a cross made of oranges. The high color of the oranges makes the cross stand out against the green. The border around the whole window is made of the rusty brown color of a number of backs of bacon. This is a particularly attractive window.

A suggestion for an Easter display of hams, bacon and other produce lines. This window contains some valuable aids to Easter display and indicates the best selling lines at this time.

Attracting a Crowd

Another Montreal merchant has been so successful in making an attractive display of bacon that it is the talk of the down-town section of the city. People express surprise at a merchant attempting such a thing and in consequence he gains his point in getting publicity. It is not unusual to see so great a crowd in front of this window in the evening, not only at the time of this particular window but at other seasons, that one has to elbow his way through the crowd to get a glimpse at it. It is not surprising then that a merchant whose windows attract so much attention is able to prepare a window on the scale on which this one is dressed.

A Wall of Bacon

The fore part of the window features trays of fish and tempting steaks and other cuts of meat, but it was the background that attracted so much attention during the twelve hours it remained there. A wall of bacon about two feet high reaches clear across the back of the window. This would not be so unusual if it were not that it is all cut into very thin slices. Many sides of bacon were cut by a slicer and done up in very thin tissue paper into one-pound packages. The slices are carefully laid parallel so that the long streaks of white fat and red meat can be seen through the paper. These packages are piled lengthwise across the window and so form what has the appearance of a wall of red and white marble. By eight o'clock Saturday night this wall of bacon had entirely disappeared. It was all sold. As everyone is aware the attractiveness of bacon is in the appearance of the slice itself and by so displaying the bacon this merchant made the very best of the selling qualities of the supply he had in his store.

Maple Syrup Production is Likely to be Small This Year

Merchants and Dealers in the Product Generally Look for a Return of Pre-war Prices, That is, if There is Any Quantity of Maple Syrup Offered

MONTREAL, March 16.—With the unusually early spring this year it is not surprising that maple syrup and maple sugar should make an early appearance on the market. The concern, however, with which its appearance is heralded may cause some surprise among the trade. The general impression among merchants and dealers who handle it is that prices this year will be back to a pre-war basis or else there will be such a shortage of this year's maple sap that the trade will have practically none of it to offer to the consumer.

Production Very Doubtful

A Canadian Grocer representative called on C. B. McDonald, of McDonald Bros., Granby, Quebec, who are large handlers of maple syrup and maple sugar, both for domestic and export trade. Mr. McDonald pointed out that the prospects of the crop this year are very doubtful despite the fact that some is already being offered on the market. It is well known that weather conditions alone determine the production of the maple trees and since this year has been an unusually open one and the spring particularly early, it is not surprising that there is considerable concern as to the production. A steady cold winter, with plenty of snow and warm spring days, with frosty nights, brings the best production of maple sap, in fact, these conditions are essential for any production at all. This year, however, there has been very little snow in the Province of Quebec, with a very mild winter. The spring has come early, with alternate warm and cold days, but still very little frost. Even the nights lately have been warm and there has been very little stimulant to the run of sap.

Prices May Be Lower

In spite of these facts it is surprising to note the price at which the first and perhaps the only maple syrup that may reach the market is quoted. In Granby, Quebec, maple syrup is being at sold at $1 and $1.25 per gallon, which is half the prices quoted last year. Mr. McDonald accounts for this by the fact that there is practically no expert market for maple sugar this year. He states that in previous years 80 per cent. of the production of maple sugar and maple syrup was exported.

Big Quantities Used in Tobacco

The trade may be surprised to learn that large quantities of Canadian maple sugar go to Canadian and American tobacco firms to be mixed in tobacco products. The maple syrup is boiled down to the sugar point and moulded into large bricks, which are then shipped to the different tobacco factories. Here by a secret process it is mixed with the tobacco as a sweetening and is so distributed, having completely lost its identity, to the smokers throughout North America. This year, however, the demand for this sweetening to go into tobacco has fallen off considerably, perhaps in view of the fact that the production and demand last year was very large. Surplus supplies of last year's stock still remain in the hands of dealers throughout the country.

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL IS QUALITY AND THEN PRICE

"Those houses in the tea business that have made it a fixed rule to distribute a certain quality of tea, either in package form or in bulk, and who maintain the quality from year to year, stand out as the most successful in the tea business, and experience has shown that their methods are correct. Their first requirement is quality and the price comes as a secondary consideration."

The above is an extract from the March bulletin of one of the largest firms of tea brokers in the United States.

Although the initial price has been quoted at a very low figure, if the production this year is nil the prices may jump very suddenly to a higher figure, although there may be none offered on the market. In view of the weather conditions, it will not be surprising if there is little or no production this year.

WHAT STIPULATIONS IN CREDIT EXTENSION TO BELGIUM?

Ottawa. — L. T. Pacaud (Megantic) is asking the Government if there were any stipulations attached to the agreement extending a credit of $25,000,000 to Belgium which would tend to restrict the purchase of manufactured goods.

By means of this credit Belgium purchased foodstuffs in Canada amounting to $277,774, and Mr. Pacaud wants to know what percentage of this amount was used to purchase manufactured articles of food. He is also asking if there was anything in the agreement to prevent Belgium purchasing Canadian hard wheat.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 16.—The produce market shows more activity than it has for some time. There are a number of important changes both in the prices quoted and the general trend of the market. The close of the Lenten season brings a bigger demand for meats which has resulted in an advance on live hogs. The whole meat market shows stronger tendency in view of the increased demand that is evidently ahead. The butter market is also stronger with an advance, due to the shortage of the finest quality of creamery and the increasing demand for supplies. The egg market is, however, much weaker with lower prices quoted. Lard has declined in price due to the inactivity of the market. Fish and poultry are unchanged in quotations. Smoked meats will be in big demand next week and the effect is already being felt. The cheese market stands very firm with only limited spot supplies.

Butter Prices Advance

Montreal.

BUTTER—A strong feeling has prevailed in the butter market throughout the week and prices have steadily tended towards a higher level, closing at an advance of 2 cents per pound on the price quoted a week ago. This stronger feeling is due to the increasing demand for supplies both for domestic trade and for shipment to outside points coupled with the fact that the finest creamery butter is becoming scarce. The market has been active with sales of from 300 to 500 packages at 57½ cents per pound, smaller quantities at 58 cents per pound. Western graded creamery is being sold at from 56 to 56½ cents per pound.

LARD—The market for lard is in somewhat an unsettled condition and prices are irregular on account of the liberal offerings and the fact that buyers are not disposed to operate freely, expecting lower prices in the near future. The market on the whole is rather quiet with sales of small lots at from 19 to 20 cents per pound in 20 pound pails. This is a decline of 1 cent per pound on quotations made one week ago.

Montreal.

COOKED MEATS—There is no change in the cooked meat market this week. Although there is to be expected a better demand for these meats after Easter, the increase will not be sufficient to change market quotations which on cooked meats stand fairly firm the whole year round, excepting when there is a very marked change in the quotations on fresh meats.

Fish Prices Unchanged

Montreal.

FRESH FISH—During the Lenten season there has been a big demand for fish and prices have held steadily. It is expected, however, that with the close of the Lenten season the demand will swing the other way and there will not be such big requirements in the fish trade. Prices, however, stand steady this week with a fair inquiry for supplies.

No Change in Poultry

Montreal.

POULTRY—There is no change in the poultry market this week. Supplies from the country arriving are not large and there has been a steady drain on storage supplies. Quotations are unchanged this week.

Eggs Quoted Lower

Montreal.

EGGS—The feature of the week in the egg market has been the continued heavy arrivals which have had a depressing influence on the market and prices this week closed from 3 to 4 cents per dozen lower than a week ago. The prospects are that there will be still further declines owing to the fact that supplies are in excess of requirements notwithstanding the large consumption. The trade during the week was active and the market closed at 44 to 45 cents per dozen in wholesale quotations. Prices, however, vary considerably and as high as 60 cents per dozen is being asked for new laid eggs by the retail trade.

Barrelled Meats Quiet

Montreal.

BARRELLED MEATS—There is no change in the quotations on barrelled meats this week. The demand is fair, but the consumption of barrelled meats locally is not large and is not affected as the other meat markets are by the requirements of a popular demand.

Smoked Meats in Demand

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS—There has been no actual change in the local market for smoked meats, but the undertone is very firm on account of the increase in demand for supplies for immediate consumption and for future requirements. The trade is looking forward to the week after Easter when the demand for smoked meats will be resumed with even an increased activity on account of the restraint of the Lenten season. Quotations, however, are so far unchanged.

Live Hogs Higher

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS—The effect of the prospective increase in demand for fresh meats after Easter has already had an effect on the hog market in that prices have been advanced 50 cents per hundred on live hogs weighed off cars. The quotation in Montreal this week is $15.50 per hundred. Prices throughout the fresh meat market have a tendency to advance on this account.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 16.—The butter market continues firmer with prices slightly higher. There is no great volume of cheese offered and stocks are firmly held at slightly higher prices. Eggs are easier and lower. American eggs are still arriving on this market which is a factor in reducing prices. It is felt in some quarters that the market for eggs will probably hold fairly steady until after the big demand for the Easter trade. Lard and shortening are unchanged. Live hogs are higher but packers are endeavoring to reduce prices this week, by offering lower prices; whether they will be successful will depend to a large extent upon the receipts. Some cuts of fresh pork are marked higher. Smoked hams are slightly higher in price but bacon is unchanged. Poultry market is quite firm under light receipts. Fish is ruling steady under a fair business.

Butter Holds Firm

Toronto.

BUTTER—The butter market is slightly firmer with prices advanced one cent per pound. Local creamery is now quoted at 60 to 64 cents per pound and Argentine and Danish at 52 to 58 cents per pound.

Cheese Holds Firm

Toronto.

CHEESE—The cheese market is quiet with prices ruling firm. Some new cheese is offered, but this is of the fodder nature and little interest is shown in it. Stocks are low and little improvement can be expected until the grass season arrives. Large cheese is quoted at 33 cents per pound.

Egg Prices Lower

Toronto.

EGGS—Eggs are ruling with a weak trend and prices are around 5 cents per dozen lower than a week ago. The arrival of American fresh eggs has been a factor in reducing prices as these eggs can be bought for considerably less than the Canadian product.

Some Pork Cuts Higher

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS—The live hog market advanced considerably during the week, due to the light receipts. This week opened unsettled, as packers were aiming to get prices back to the former level. Most sales, however, were made on the basis of $15 to $15.25 fed and watered. Packers are offering $1 less per hundred for the balance of the week. Some pork cuts are advanced one or two cents per pound. Other fresh meats are fairly steady with no change in dressed meat quotations.

Fish Prices Steady to Firm

Toronto.

FISH—The first shipment of fresh caught halibut arrived during the week and was rapidly picked up. Further shipments are expected this week end. The demand for fish is only considered fair as the continued mild weather is to some extent holding back the volume of business that might otherwise have been passing. There are no price changes during the week.

Popular Favorites Sell Best!

Sales records everywhere show that is a great favorite with the Canadian people. The large volume of repeat sales is increased by steady growth in new business.

Grape-Nuts

Grape-Nuts advertising continually reaches the buying public of every town and city, featuring a product of real merit.

The sales policy supporting Grape-Nuts always guarantees fair treatment to the trade, the sale of every package, and certain profit.

Show Your Customer The Heart of a Keystone Broom

The dealer who sells Keystone Brooms has two distinct advantages. First of all, he has our guarantee that all Brooms of the same brand are absolutely uniform in quality.

To attain uniformity in broom making has been the biggest problem of the manufacturer.

In Keystone Brooms we have, at last, solved this problem by introducing into our factory a new system of sorting and grading corn, which permits of no variation in quality.

KEYSTONE BRAND

The second advantage, is in the undoubted superiority of Keystone Brooms. Pull the stock apart and show your customer the carefully trimmed seedless corn—just as clean at the centre as on the outside.

Keystone Brooms are light in weight, perfectly balanced and most attractive in appearance.

Eight brands, including the famous Nugget Broom.

Send for sample shipment to-day.

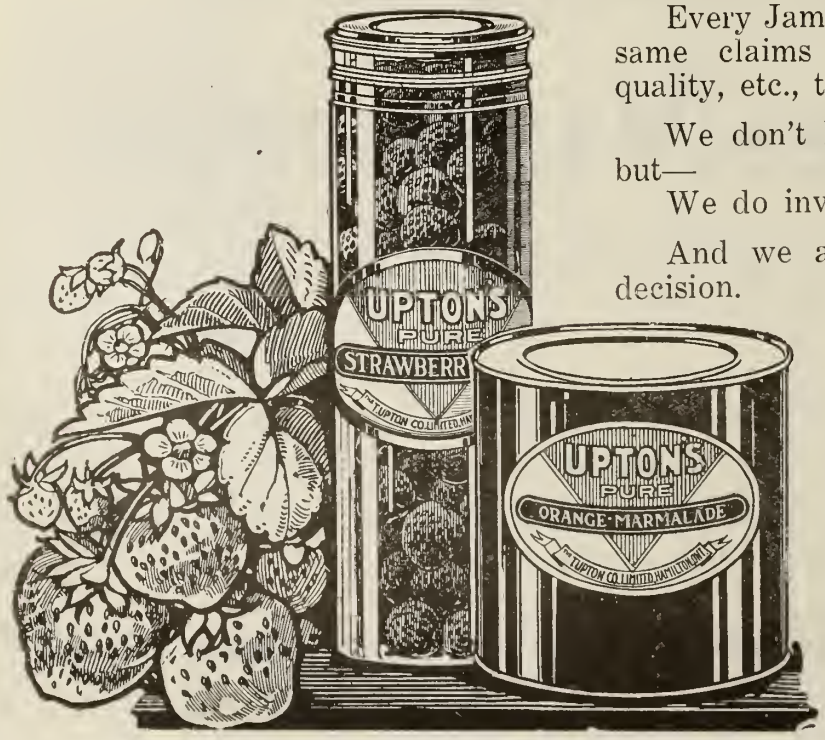
UPTON'S Pure Jams and Marmalades



Every Jam Maker in the country makes the same claims for his product as to purity, quality, etc., that we do for ours.

We don't like dealing in superlatives, but—

We do invite comparisons,

And we are content to abide by your decision.

Jams and Marmalades that a Grocer can safely recommend to his best customer.

The average Grocery, cluttered and unsanitary.

Which Picture Most Resembles Your Store?

The old-style store means doing business under a heavy handicap of waste, delay, slow service, dirt and loss of goods and profit. Hundreds of grocers are worrying along with old equipment trying to keep their stores clean and inviting. But people will not buy at such a store if there is a better one where food is protected from contamination. Don't keep trade away when it is easier to attract it.

Sherer's Counter has done more to improve and help the grocery business than any other thing that goes into the store. It provides compact storage for goods, and a means of displaying them attractively. Keeps food clean and free from handling, sampling, animals, flies and dirt. Economical—it saves steps and worry.

With a Sherer Counter in your store, you will have it all paid for in a few months with the extra profit it will make for you.

RICE MARKET SHOWS FIRMNESS

L. C. Naisawald & Sons in their rice circular say: "Although there is no great increase in business the general feeling from all parts is better and the trade places confidence in the strength and steadiness of the market. Despite the absolute absence of demand at times during the entire season the market has remained fairly steady and after each setback has rallied and strengthened with renewal of business. For a time buyers were not inclined to follow advances and evidently were not disposed to figure prices being maintained. The result of this was that local sellers created a cut-throat market, selling on close margin, while buyers looked for bargains and usually paid their own price. Now that this has ceased and stocks have dwindled buyers are compelled to meet the advances at the primary points, which are higher and steadier than the spot market. The California situation has been definitely settled and prices announced figured on a basis of $4.40 singles f.o.b. San Francisco."

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

—if you were on the "other side" of the counter —and had to walk 12 feet around the end to reach a scale

—WOULD YOU LET YOUR CUSTOMER WAIT?

THE SWIVEL BASE of a Dayton Scale gives you the use of two scales. Weights can be made on either side of the counter. By simply raising a small lever at the lower right hand side a gentle push will turn the scale "right about face." The swivel base operates by means of ball bearings.

THE DAYTON'S SWIVEL BASE

is one of the exclusive features of scientific construction which give this scale its commanding superiority. It enables the merchant:

1. To operate his scale from either side of the counter.
2. To get proper light on his scale.
3. To save walking time of clerks, thus speeding up service to customers.

The Swivel Base is the product of years of study and experiment.

The International Dayton Scale

has proven its reliability in a million stores. It saves time, satisfies customers and safeguards profits every time anything is weighed.

Made in Canada.

House-cleaning Time is Here! What Does That Mean to You?

IT should mean a chance to make extra sales in lines that are particularly "saleable" at this Season.

The season when the sales of O-Cedar Polish reach their Peak—therefore, the time of the year for O-Cedar Window Displays.

The merchant who makes use of O-Cedar Advertising Material in his Windows and around his store, gets the benefit of the extra demand that comes at House-cleaning time for both O-Cedar Polish and the O-Cedar Polish Mop

Color Is Not Quality

Dumas, in a most amusing chapter, showed: "At night all cats are grey." In other things his statement holds true, for the real clever Housewife of to-day can serve Cascade Pink Salmon, and give it all the delightful elegance of Sockeye, proving color is not quality. This recipe will demonstrate. Try it.

Baked Salmon With Spaghetti

One can of salmon, one-half pound of spaghetti broken fine, butter size of egg, one pint of milk, two eggs. Boil spaghetti in salted water until tender, drain in a colander, and pour cold water through it; grease baking dish and put layer of spaghetti, layer of salmon, bits of butter and pepper; continue until all is used. Beat eggs, add milk, and pour over and bake forty-five minutes. Serve with or without white sauce.

If your lady customers liked last week's recipe, they are sure to like the one above even better. Sell them Cascade.

Keeps Dust Down--

IMPERIAL
FLOOR DRESSING

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans, and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

Dirt is bound to accumulate in busy stores. But it can be kept from settling on your stock and shelves in the form of dust if you use Imperial Floor Dressing.

Customers will be attracted by the absence of dust in your store, by the neat appearance of your merchandise, by your "spick and span" displays and bright show cases.

One application of Imperial Floor Dressing cleans and preserves floors and prevents dust from rising. One gallon will treat upwards of 700 square feet and does not need renewing for weeks.

Imperial Floor Dressing is non-evaporating and non-gumming. It catches and holds the dust on the floor where it can easily be swept up and disposed of. It is the most sanitary and satisfactory dressing you can buy—or sell—for floors, linoleum or oil cloth.

Its effective use in your own place of business creates a big market for floor dressing among your customers. Talk to the Imperial Oil salesman about it.

Shirriff's JELLY POWDER

Distinctive flavor—is the reason so many people insist on Shirriff's Jelly Powders. The purchaser calls it "that fresh-fruit taste"—

But to the dealer, it is "that come-back-for-more" taste. For, come back they do—not once, or twice, but regularly and repeatedly.

There is only one Jelly for those who have tasted Shirriff's.

That is why Shirriff's Jelly Powders are fast-moving stock and not shelf-decoration.

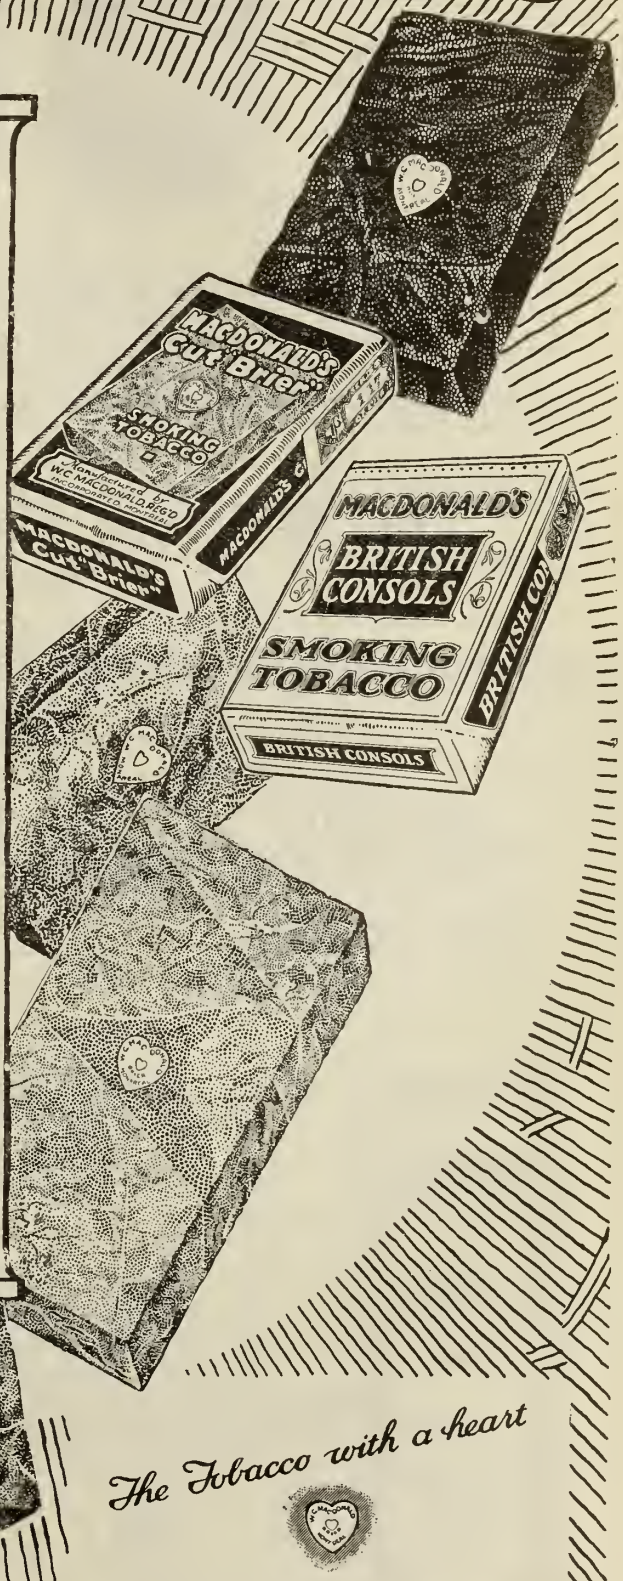
MACDONALD'S

The Meaning of Tobacco Value

THE reason why Macdonald's Tobacco is so overwhelmingly preferred by Canadian smokers is the same reason why it proves so attractive to the retailer. That reason is VALUE.

Value, to the smoker, means "More Tobacco for His Money" —to the retailer "More Money from His Tobacco." There really is more money in Macdonald's for the man who sells it—largely because there is more tobacco in Macdonald's for the man who buys it.

Ads that will not be ignored are insisting that you stock up on "The Tobacco with a Heart."



The Tobacco with a Heart

—The all-Canadian Leaders

That Malcolm purity and quality combined with Malcolm delicious goodness and undoubted economy have been appreciated by Canadian housewives is evidenced by the fact—that in spite of keen competition they have become the all-Canadian leaders in their line.

Now, as never before, it is the duty of every merchant to keep Canadian money in Canada. That's why we urge you to buy Malcolm's Milk products—the all-Canadian—Canadian-made products on the market.

Old Tea Is Bad Tea

Nothing will scare away custom as quickly as "stale" goods. Tea to be good must be fresh and to ensure satisfaction to your customers you should handle only freely selling lines ("Salada" is a larger seller than all the others put together) and see that your stocks are "rotated" properly. That is to say, when shelving, do not put fresh stock in front of old. Remember, too, that those who handle "Salada" are protected, absolutely; for we will take back and refund the purchase price of any "Salada" that grows old on their hands—that is why "Salada" is logically the only safe Tea to handle.

Stone and Fisher, Iroquois, Ont., Believe That Advertising Pays the Grocer—This Firm Also Advertises Through the Children, by Handling School Supplies and Otherwise Catering to Them.

By staff correspondent of Canadian Grocer

IROQUOIS, Ont., March 22.—In August, 1920, the grocery firm of Stone and Fisher opened their new grocery store in Iroquois, Ont. This new store is made up of two stores joined together, forming two wings with a connecting archway. One-half of the store is used in the summer as an ice cream parlor and confectionery store, and the other half is used for general groceries. In the winter time the ice cream parlor is used for chinaware and Christmas goods. As both of the stores, which have been connected to form one, have large display windows, it is evident that the whole floor space of the new store is well lighted, particularly since windows in the back of the store lead to an open court in the rear.

Above the main store there is a second floor which is used at the present time for the display of chinaware and crockery. Mr. Fisher contemplates remodelling the upper floor in the near future and turning it into a second department in his business. Since at the time of opening the store Mr. Fisher did not foresee the need of these new departments he leased part of the upper floor and is now unable to use it himself until the lease runs out.

The most striking feature of this store is the orderly and systematic layout of the different departments. On the right-hand side of the store when entering is a large glass front showcase which is lighted with electric lights. In this case are displayed pipes, cigars and smoking outfits. On the left hand side is another similar case displaying books, stationery and library equipment. Next to these cases on either side are showcases displaying chocolates both in bulk and in packages. The meat department is at the rear of the store immediately opposite the entrance and behind this is the refrigerator. The ceiling of both wings of the store is finished in white enamelled metal. The shelves and cases on the walls of the store are all finished in white enamel, giving the place a very bright appearance. At the rear of this building is a shed for the accommodation of the farmers' rigs and their sleighs in the winter time. Mr. Stone emphasized the importance of this accommodation when a grocery is catering to the farmer trade.

A Good Scale Creates Confidence

In speaking to a Canadian Grocer

Illustrating the interior of the store of Stone & Fisher at Iroquois, Ont., where this firm carries on an extensive country trade representative about the fixtures in the store W. C. Stone said, "There is one fixture in every store that to my mind is the most important. One which the grocer should take every care in choosing regardless of the expense. It is his weighing machine. The scale is the bond between the grocer and his customer, and as for myself I want nothing but the very best in my store. If any one can prove to me that there is a scale that is better than the one I now have I will buy it immediately because I know that only the best will pay the grocer. In the first place a good, accurate, business-like scale will encourage the confidence of the customers."

Advertising Pays the Grocer

When asked about his advertising Mr. Stone said, "Although we are situated in only a small town we miss the advertising medium of a newspaper. For some years we had one in Iroquois, but on the death of the proprietor it was discontinued and we have none now. While we had one we used it regularly and always obtained results. Then, too, the reading of outside journals by our townspeople has some detrimental effects on local business. There is no doubt that the grocer can make very good use of advertising if he only has the opportunity to do so.

Cannot Do Business Without Stock

"We have heard so much lately about hard times. The very talk about them has done much to intensify their effect, but I believe that if the merchants keep an optimistic attitude, a great deal can be done to counteract depressing influences. Some merchants are attempting to play safe by not buying. These men might just as well get out of the business entirely, because no one can carry on without the stock, and to let the stock run down means loss of trade beside communicating to the customers the same attitude towards buying. I have found that people like to feel that they are buying from a live organization and want a good choice stock from which to choose. While I believe in buying freely despite the cry of hard times, I am not ignorant of the change that is now in progress and the imperativeness of careful buying, which does not mean 'no buying.'

Catering to the People

"A large proportion of our trade is done with the people who live in the surrounding country. In this connection there is one difficulty or one particular reason why we have to do everything we can to cater to these people in order to encourage their trade. The towns in this section of Ontario are very close together. In a great many cases it is just as easy for a farmer to go to one town as to the other. On the other hand, the school is in our town and we seek to take advantage of this fact. In the first place, we have built a driving shed at the back of the store to accommodate the farmers' horses and rigs. We have stocked a supply of school books, scribblers and school supplies. In this way we have succeeded in bringing the children to us for their requirements. In many cases it has resulted in a charge account, which brings the parents to us when they come to town. Our next object is to follow this advantage with service and equipment so that people will find it pleasant to deal with us. This service has led us to stock chinaware, crockery, books and a small amount of silverware which enables us to compete with the mail order houses of the large cities.

PERMITTING STOCK TO RUN DOWN MEANS LOST TRADE

"We have heard so much lately about hard times. The very talk about the times, has done much to intensify the effects, but I believe that if the merchants keep an optimistic attitude, a great deal can be done to counteract depressing influences. Some merchants are attempting to play safe by not buying. These men might just as well get out of the business entirely because no one can carry on without the stock, and to let the stock run down means the loss of the trade, in addition to communicating to the customers the same attitude towards buying. I have found that people like to feel that they are buying from a live organization and what a good choice of stock from which to choose. While I believe in buying freely despite the cry of hard times, I am not ignorant of the change that is now in progress and the imperativeness of careful buying which does not mean no buying."

Advertising Through Children

"Since we have not the newspaper advertising we have had to devise other means of reaching both the local and rural people. Most of the children from families outside of the town go home Friday night and bearing this in mind we have had circulars printed from time to time in which we tell of our special lines and our special prices. These we have distributed to the children and have found by the results that they reach the homes. In towns the size of Iroquois the merchants are not immune to the influence of outside advertising, and so advertising has to be done on our part to counteract the influence of the mail order houses and merchants of the larger cities whose advertising reaches our customers.

Operates Ice Cream Parlor

"In the summer time we use the left wing of our store as an ice cream parlor. This besides being a paying department will also attract customers to the store for other things. The whole store is always well lighted and that is an important thing in making a store inviting. The store is heated by a pipeless furnace. This is a distinct advantage since there are no long hot air pipes running through the cellar to heat it up. Our basement is always very cool, an ideal place for storing canned goods and vegetables."

An Orderly Basement

The basement in this store is almost as systematically arranged as the main floor. Everything seems to have its particular place. Bins for vegetables are built along the outside wall where the temperature is low and even. When a case of canned goods or glassware is opened the contents are all taken out and what is not needed for the store is placed in a safe place on a shelf. There is a large store house at the rear of the store for flour, grain and sugar.

CANADIAN SALT CO. HAS PROFITABLE YEAR

The annual statement of the Canadian Salt Company for 1920 shows operating profits of $202,298, as against $236,881, and, after payment of bond interest, business profits tax, and allowing for depreciation and reserve, etc., there were net profits of $98,981, compared with $136,286. Adding the balance brought forward from 1919 of $595,858, there was available for distribution $694,840. Out of this was paid a special dividend of undivided surplus at December 31, 1916, amounting to $400,000, and other dividends of $88,000, leaving a balance forward of $206,840. The $400,000 was distributed to shareholders in March last on the basis of one share for two, thus increasing the capital stock from $800,000 to $1,200,000.

President Thomas Tait states in the report that difficulties in obtaining hydro-electric power and coal during the year and the high price of the latter, contributed to operating difficulties.

POSSIBILITIES OF COFFEE GROWING IN EAST AFRICA

An East African correspondent of Tropical Life has much to say about coffee growing and the possibilities for its development in that country, particularly in the region about Lake Victoria Nyanza.

"The possibilities of the now-called Kenya Colony are splendid," he says. "Take coffee, for instance. Coffee land near the railroad costs £15 an acre, and £25 to break up and bring your coffee into bearing in four and a half years. Some would spend more, some might spend less. Finish your job, however, and take stock. The profit is good, for five-year-old coffee is worth £100 an acre, and will give an average crop of half a ton per annum, worth now about £50. The wild coffee around here interests me. It lacks caffeine, and is on that account supposed to be good for people with weak hearts.

"I wonder no American booster has thought of this and pushed its sale in America instead of their awful substitutes, roasted maize or date-stones, or some such things. I always wonder where those date-stones come from. How are they removed from their natural habitat? Banish the thought! All the same, I prefer to grow and consume my own berries and know exactly where they have been."

Stratford Co-operative Society Is Operating at a Loss

Second Half-yearly Report Shows a Net Loss of $4,056.51 — Lack of Support on Part of Members and Over-buying on Falling Market.

THE second half-yearly report of the Stratford Co-operative Society, Ltd., shows a net loss of $4,056.51. This loss is attributed to the lack of support by its members and to the over-buying on a falling market of a previous manager. The total turnover for the six months period was $32,574.88. Overhead charges amounted to $5,613.79 and the gross profits $1,557.28. Figuring in percentages this shows that the cost of conducting business for the period was 17.32 1-3 per cent. as against a gross margin of profit of only 4.78 2-3 per cent.

The report in part reads as follows, "In the judgment of the Board, under the former management, purchases were made in quantities much in excess of the reasonable and current needs of the society. Indeed since the present manager has been installed, the directors have felt compelled to cancel orders previously, and it is believed unnecessarily, given to the value of $5,438.65. This serious over-buying has unfortunately been followed by a general fall in prices.

Small Volume of Sales

"The second cause to which the loss is attributed is the small volume of sales, in other words the extraordinary lack of loyalty to their own institution shown by the people who own the business. It will be noted that the sales for the six months have been $32,574.88 or an average of $1,252.88 per week. The society has approximately 800 members. The weekly sales therefore only show an average of $1.56 per member, which is absurdly inadequate. It indicates that the society is not receiving anything approaching that loyalty in trading which it had a right to expect from its members when they subscribed to its share capital."

Must Face a Period of Competition

Efficient Methods in Business Are Now Necessary to Win Through —Reports Indicate That Retail Turnover in Smaller Centres Has Recently Been Ahead of Last Year

Editor's Note:—The following is from an address delivered last week before the Kiwanis Club, Toronto, by Horace T. Hunter, vice-president of the MacLean Publishing Company, dealing with business problems and methods of meeting them.

"MY business brings me into contact with several very important lines of merchandising—hardware, grocery, dry goods, drugs, men's wear, stationery, plumbing and steamfitting—and in addition to these the bank manager who acts as a sort of "business father confessor" to all of them. We try to develop the "from Missouri" attitude and although many manufacturers and wholesalers were convinced that the general public had instituted a "buyers' strike" and that business was at a standstill, we made direct inquiries from the retailers themselves. You may be as surprised as I was to learn the result. Retail merchants outside the big centres report that their sales for December, January and February exceeded their sales for the corresponding three months in the previous year; for the most part February business of this year has been ahead of February of last year.

It is important to note and has great significance, that in the smaller centres the retail merchants are keeping up their volume of sales. The following definite statements are convincing:

City or Town.	February Turnover	Stock Carried
Collingwood	2% inc.	same
Paris	6% dec.	12½% less
Peterborough	19½% inc.	5% less
Napanee	3% inc.	25% less
Tillsonburg	1% inc.	5% less
Ingersoll	25% inc.	10% less
Sudbury	same	20% higher
Sherbrooke, P.Q.	3% inc.	same
Mitchell, Ont.	20% less	10% more
North Bay	1% less	same
Hamilton	10% inc.	33% less
London, Ont.	inc.	less
Lindsay	1% inc.	2% less
Moose Jaw, Sask.	same	same
Calgary	same	larger

The above reports are from leading merchants in towns and cities mentioned. In many cases they are from the merchant holding unquestionably first place as far as volume of sales is concerned.

Turnover Not Profits

I am speaking of turnover, not profit. Many lines are being sold at reduced prices, but the fact that goods are being sold indicates that more goods will have to be made to take their place. Manufacturers and wholesalers have, however, had different experiences from those of retailers. Orders for their goods are being placed slowly.

Retailers are ordering to-day only for their immediate needs. A year ago they were buying six months or more in advance, owing to scarcity of goods and slowness of delivery. On a rising market it was good policy to get orders placed before further advance in price took place. To-day conditions are reversed. It has become again a buyers' market.

Every week reductions in prices are announced, therefore the merchant feels that the longer he can hold off buying the better price he is likely to get.

Fewer Brands

Retailers are reducing their stocks by carrying fewer varieties than formerly; instead of carrying three or four brands they are concentrating on one brand.

A Wise Policy

Who will say that this is not a wise policy?

Even the manufacturers and jobbers who are hungry for orders must realize that it is a matter of first importance that retail merchants safeguard their financial position. It is their duty not to overload the retailer, but to help him in every possible way to speed up his turnover.

Basic Conditions Sound

Basic conditions throughout the Dominion are sound. It was not to be expected that we could get through the readjustment without some disturbance. There have, however, been comparatively few failures. We have been very fortunate that there has been no debacle. The readjustment in prices has been gradual. Textiles, boots and shoes, furs, foodstuffs, hides, wool and cotton have followed each other in a fairly orderly procession on the downward grade. Had they all declined at once and in drastic manner, financial institutions would have been embarrassed and we would have had many failures.

Foreign Influences

But it would be a short-sighted policy and one that would invite disaster to examine only conditions in Canada. We cannot evade the effect of foreign competition, much as we would like to do so. European and Asiatic countries are in an impoverished condition and overwhelmed with debts. Lloyd George has stated the only way a country can improve its position is by selling goods to other countries. They must produce an exportable surplus and their exports must exceed their imports. In most of these countries there is no talk of an eight-hour day or a minimum wage. It is the old primitive fight for existence.

The indemnity levied on Germany extends over a period of forty years. By many this is interpreted to mean forty years during which everyone engaged in production in Germany must work longer hours and for less pay than is the custom in other countries with which they are competing.

Keen Competition

What does this mean? In my opinion it means the keenest competition the world has ever known.

Economists the world over are endeavoring to find a method of permitting Germany and other countries to pay their debts and re-establish a decent and healthy mode of living without exposing the creditor countries to this cut-throat competition. They have not yet succeeded.

Business Preparedness

I believe it behooves every business man to prepare for a prolonged period of keen competition. Now, I do not look on this as a gloomy picture, provided we are prepared for it. Mark Twain said everybody talked about the weather, but nobody ever did anything. I believe there are a few things each of us can do to put our respective businesses in shape to meet conditions that lie ahead of us.

Map Out Definite Policy

The first thing I would suggest is—map out a definite policy. Every firm and every individual should get down to brass tacks, should map out in writing a definite policy and fix the responsibility for carrying it out.

Speed Up Turnover

The day of long profits is past. I doubt if any of us will ever again see the day when a merchant could make more money by holding goods than by selling them. The motto for the future will be not big profits, but quick turnover. This, however, is no hardship to the efficient business man; 5 per cent. net profit with twelve turnovers a year is better than 20 per cent. profit with three turnovers in the year. It is safer. It tends to lower costs and this in itself stimulates business.

Labor Saving Devices

The installation of labor-saving machinery is another way of reducing costs. This includes many fixtures or equipment, which, after providing for interest on investment and depreciation, will lower cost of doing business.

The Tax Problem

The Excess Profits Tax and Luxury Tax, heavy income taxes were imposed to satisfy the public clamor. The past few years have demonstrated these taxes have had a boomerang effect. They have increased greatly the price of commodities and have killed off new enterprises and business extensions which would have given employment to many men who to-day find themselves out of work.

B. C. Forbes tells of an instance illustrating this point. Eight hundred sales agents and salesmen from all parts of the United States and Canada had recently gathered in a great convention hall. Several had complained that their territories were completely worked out and they needed new ones. Had this sort of talk been allowed to gather momentum the whole assembly might have been headed towards gloomy depression and despondency, probably with incalculably harmful after effects. Quick as a flash the senior executive leaped to the platform and shouted, "I'm going to stop this convention to get a shoe shine—call in a bootblack."

The dropping of a bombshell could not have produced a greater sensation. It was known that the convention was costing the company at least $250 per minute, yet the whole proceedings were halted in order that one man might get his shoes polished. In came the bootblack and while eight hundred men watched he did his work. It took five minutes. The shoe shine, therefore, cost $1,250.

The man whose shoes had been shined then said, in effect: "Both of the two bootblacks who preceded this fellow failed to earn even the $4 a day guaranteed by the company. The company every week had to make up the deficit. Then came this bootblack. He had no more prospects than the others, no larger territory, no better conditions of any kind; yet this bootblack earns from eleven to seventeen dollars per day. Gentlemen," he shouted, "it is not territory that counts—it is the man."

This is the spirit we need to-day and if it goes hand in hand with other efficient methods of production we need not fear the keen competition that lies ahead.

Advertising Doubly Beneficial

It is a peculiar fact that advertising is curtailed during any period of depression. I believe the reason for this is that business men expect either too much or too little from their advertising. Advertising is particularly valuable at this time because it not only performs the usual function of increasing sales and rendering more efficient all other departments of the organiaztion, but every advertisement calls aloud to the public that here is one firm going on record that it actually expects to do business. During the so-called buyers' strike many wholesale, retail and manufacturing firms called together their sales staffs and tried to inject pep into them and then flatly contradicted themselves by cancelling their advertising and thus saying plainly they really had no expectation of doing business.

In my opinion the firms which have done the most and which are still doing the most to get us through this readjustment period are the firms which have calmly "carried on" with regular advertisements in the trade newspapers, the magazines and general newspapers. There may not be as much business done in their line this year as last year, but it is a fairly safe bet they will get their quota.

Optimism is Essential

These are some of the tangible things we need to-day, but they will be of very little use unless we have also optimism, enthusiasm, courage and perseverance.

Telegraphed Order Did Not Make Contract Binding

Interesting Case at Montreal — Canadian Grocer Market Reports in Suit in Superior Court Over Order for One Hundred Tons of Tapioca

MONTREAL, March 23. — A very interesting case was brought up last week before the Superior Court in this city which might establish a precedent in certain business dealings and which at least is worthy of attention of those who daily carry on business over the telegraph wire or by means of the long distance telephone. The main issue of this suit as brought out in the trial was, "What constitutes a contract?"

Purchasing Tapioca

Gregor M. Frame & Co., of New York, were plaintiffs in a suit against Charles A. Lefebvre, of Montreal, for breach of contract. The contention of the plaintiff was that on the 27th of December, 1918, the defendant made certain quotations on a shipment of tapioca. Two days later the plaintiff wired Mr. Lefebvre accepting the price and asking for shipment of "100" or more. The next day the defendant wired G. M. Frame & Co., saying that they could not ship "100" but would ship 25 tons of seed and 25 tons of pearl, at a price which was slightly higher than the previous quotation. In the meantime the plaintiffs had written a letter to Mr. Lefebvre confirming their previous wire and, as they contended, making the contract binding. After some discussions outside of the court the matter was brought up for judgment last week.

Canadian Grocer Testifies

When the court opened Ernest Prior, of New York City, the senior partner of the firm of G. M. Frame & Co., Ltd., took the stand and testified as to the correspondence and telegrams previously mentioned in this articles. Following this testimony, H. H. Webb, Canadian Grocer representative, took the stand and, producing copies of Canadian Grocer which covered the dates of the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant, testified as to methods of obtaining market conditions and current prices. At first the counsel for the defence claimed that the testimony as given by Canadian Grocer representative and contained in Canadian Grocer was not sufficiently accurate to be admitted as evidence. However, after some discussion, the judge ruled that the evidence from Canadian Grocer representative, based on the market reports as published should be accepted. Z. Hebert, the president of Hudon Hebert & Cie, wholesale grocers, Montreal, and Robert Anderson, broker, also gave evidence. These witnesses claimed that in dealing in rice and tapioca it has been the custom to make sales in bag lots and that quotations given are on that basis.

Bags or Tons?

There was some discussion as to whether the word "100" appearing in the telegram referred to bags or to tons. It seems from the evidence given that the custom has been to quote tapioca on a basis of bag lots. The New York house, however, claimed that they always bought on a basis of tons, since their distribution is on a large scale. A point, however, was brought out by the counsel for the plaintiff that in the answer to the telegraph order the defendant said, "Cannot ship 100 but will ship 25 tons of each," referring to seed and pearl tapioca. In the final issue, however, this did not evidently feature for in the finding of the judge this point of tons or bags was not mentioned.

Contract Not Consummated

After some deliberation the judge ruled that by the telegrams which were exchanged between the two companies the contract was not consummated and no definite or legal obligations were laid upon either party. As a result the action of the plaintiff was dismissed.

What Is a Contract?

From the finding of the judge in the Superior Court of the Province of Quebec it is evident that when such telegrams, as featured in this case, are exchanged between parties doing business that no contract is entered into; that letters in writing and signed by the contracting party must make the contract binding. For this reason it is interesting to watch the course of this action since many such business deals are entered into every day and business men are anxious to know just how binding such contracts are in law. It is just possible that the case may be appealed and re-opened for further investigation.

Food Regulations Now in Effect

Important Facts in Connection With the Selling of Foods, With Which Every Grocer Should Be Acquainted—A Careful Perusal is Advised

REGULATIONS respecting food and drugs, now statutes of Canada, and as recently contained in the Canada Gazette, will be found of vital importance to the retail grocer. Canadian Grocer is publishing the same in this and succeeding issues, and advises its readers to keep the same on file for reference. These regulations are matters of great importance to the trade, and as such should be perused very carefully. They are as follows:

Labelling

(1) Food and Drug products shall be designated by their common names in one or other or both of the official languages.

(2) The common name of the articles above referred to shall appear on the main panel of the main label, with the name and address of the manufacturer, or that of the person or firm for whom the article is manufactured.

(3) When an article is sold as a compound mixture, imitation or substitute, these words shall appear on the main panel of the main label in type of the same size and visibility as the common name.

(4) The term "Blend" applies to a combination of similar substances.

Example—A combination of Java, Mocha and Brazilian coffees is a blend.

(5) A combination of coffee with chicory or roasted grain is not a blend, but a Mixture or Compound. The terms "Compound" and "Mixture" are interchangeable.

(6) In the case of compounds or mixtures when the name of an ingredient of such compound or mixture is used in designating the article, such ingredient must be present in amount at least equal to 51 per cent. by weight of the whole.

Example—A coffee mixture or compound, sold as such, shall contain at least 51 per cent. of actual coffee.

General Instructions to Inspectors

(1) The 25 districts are defined by Order in Council of 27th December, 1918.

(2) The local inspector will limit his activities to the particular district for which he is appointed. He must make himself familiar with the routes of travel therein.

(3) The Senior Inspectors are not limited as to territory, and may be required to operate in any district. In such case, the local Inspector will give every assistance possible.

(4) Every Senior Inspector is also to be regarded as a local Inspector for the district in which he resides. He will only operate outside of this district in case of emergency, or on instructions from the Department.

(5) Every Inspector must make himself thoroughly familiar with the Food and Drugs Act, the Fertilizers Act, and the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act; all revisions or amendments of these, as well as all regulations established under them.

(6) As far as opportunity permits, Inspectors are expected to familiarize themselves with the conditions under which articles covered by these various acts are manufactured, imported and sold at retail in their several districts. They are furnished with business cards which they are to leave with persons interested in, or likely to be interested in, their work; and generally to secure, as far as may be, the sympathetic co-operation of the better class of dealer, etc., wherever they go.

(7) Arrangements have been made by the Deputy Minister to give extended publicity to the work of this branch; and it is expected that inspectors will receive many complaints relative to suspected frauds, or other business. It is the duty of the inspector to investigate, as fully as may be, every complaint made to him. This will be done by correspondence, and wherever necessary, by personal investigation. Whenever the inspector's judgment leads him to believe that cases are well founded and of sufficient importance, he will communicate full details to the General Inspector, and receive further instructions as to procedure.

Districts and Inspectors

Note:—

For purposes of Section 7, the inspectors from districts will communicate as follows:

From Districts 2, 3 and 4, to R. J. Waugh, P.O. Box 206, Halifax, N.S.

For Districts 5, 6 and 7, to J. J. Costigan, 2 Place d'Youville, Montreal.

From Districts 10 and 15, to T. L. Leckié, 317 Queen Street, Ottawa.

From Districts 12, 13 and 14, to H. J. Dager, 278 Jarvis Street, Toronto.

From Districts 16, 18, 19 and 20, to J. B. Cosgrove, Magnus & Main, Winnipeg.

From Districts 21, 22, 23 and 25, to J. A. Rickey, 326 Howe Street, Vancouver.

As in the past, inspectors will, from time to time, receive instructions for systematic collection of named articles. In all such cases, it is expected that they will exercise judgment in their work, and endeavor to secure samples representing the lowest classes of such goods on the market, as these are the products most likely to require action on. It stands to reason that the more intimate their acquaintance with the territory, the more successful they will be in this particular.

In addition to the purchase of samples as above referred to, the inspector is authorized to procure and submit for analysis any samples of Food, Drugs, Fertilizers, which he may have reason to believe are in any respect suspicious, or in any way offered for sale in contravention of the Acts administered by this Department.

(9) It is the inspector's duty to lay information in all cases of reported violation of the Acts administered by this Department. He will be furnished, as far as possible, with the names of local solicitors who may be called in to assist him when cases are defended, or otherwise complicated. In all such cases he will give the Departmental Solicitor every assistance possible.

(10) In the event of fines and costs, it is the duty of the inspector to receive such, and to deposit them to the credit of the Receiver General and send the deposit receipt to the department.

(11) The inspector will keep in touch with local customs officers, and will detain, for examination before release, any importations of such articles as are covered by the Acts and regarding which he has reason to believe that the goods are fraudulent, or are likely to be used for purposes of fraud.

In all such cases he will obtain samples and forward at once for analysis, with full information regarding them, and asking for an immediate report, upon which the importation may be finally disposed of.

(12) It will be well for the inspector to keep in touch with the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association and other organizations of the kind.

(13) Our bulletins, etc., will be supplied, in a reasonable quantity, to each inspector, and he will see that they are distributed to interested parties.

(14) An amendment to the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act provides that this class of article can only be sold legally when the license for the year is paid.

In order that retailers may be properly informed as to the vendability of their goods, a list of registered articles, upon which the license fee has been paid, will be furnished to every inspector early in January of each year; and it will be the duty of the inspector to furnish every dealer in such articles within his District with a copy of this list.

That he may be able to do this, it will be necessary for him to keep a list of all dealers in Patent Medicines.

Tariff of Fees for Analysis

Baking Powders—
Determination of gas production
Single sample	$ 5 00
More than 1 sample, each	3 00
Complete analysis	5 00 to 10 00
Butter and Cheese—
Determination of water, salt and fat
Single sample	$ 3 00
Two samples at one time	5 00
More than two samples, each	2 00
Identification of foreign fats, per sample	5 00
Coffee and Tea—
Examination as to genuineness	3 00 to 5 00
Confectionery—	2 00 to 10 00
Edible Oils—	2 00 to 10 00
Flour—
Examination for bleaching	5 00
Honey—Italics
Examination as to genuineness	5 00 to 10 00
Jams—
Examination as to genuineness	5 00 to 10 00
Lard—
For foreign fats	5 00
Maple Sugar and Syrup—	5 00
Meats—
Examination as to soundness and identity	2 00 to 5 00
Milk—
Determination of Specific Gravity, Water, Fat, and Non-fat Solids
Single sample	$ 5 00
Two samples at the same time	8 00
Bacterial count, in addition to above, double the fee named.
Spices—
Ash, water, soluble ash and microscopic identification of starch	5 00

The fee of ten dollars is fixed as the cost of procuring and analyzing samples, which are found to violate the provisions of this act.

For analysis made for other departments of the Government service, a flat rate of five dollars per sample is fixed.

In all cases not covered by the above schedule, a fee of two dollars is fixed for each separate determination required.

Division of Samples

Baking Powder: When in packages three of the smallest, otherwise one-half pound divided into three parts.

Beer and Malt Liquors: Three quart bottles when possible, otherwise three pint bottles.

Bread: A four-pound loaf divided into three equal portions. Fancy bread rolls, etc., three pounds, divided into three equal portions.

Butter: One and a half pound.

Cheese: One pound divided in three portions.

Cocoa and Chocolate: One pound divided into three portions. If packaged, three small sized packages.

Coffee: One pound divided into three portions.

Cream of Tartar: Same as baking powder.

Drugs: Special instructions in each case.

Farinaceous Foods: Infants and Invalids' Foods: In tins, either three of the smallest size or one pound divided in three portions.

Flour: One and a half pound.

Lard: Same as butter.

Lime and Lemon Juice: One quart divided into three portions or three one pint bottles.

Medical Tinctures: Three bottles of four ounces each, except when special instructions sent.

Milk: Three pint bottles, or three quart bottles.

Mustard and Spices: Same as baking powder.

Preserves and other Canned, Packaged or Potted Goods: Three small tins, packages or pots.

Sugar: One pound divided into three portions.

Tea: One pound divided into three portions.

Vinegar: One quart divided into three portions.

Wines and Alcoholic Liquors: Three pint bottles or three quart bottles.

When a printed wrapper or label encloses or is attached to the original package, this is to be attached to analyst's sample.

Exemption from Misbranding

The following tolerances and variations from the quantity of the contents marked on the package shall be allowed under Section 5 (f), except in cases where it is stated in terms of minimum weight, measure or count.

(1) Discrepancies due exclusively to errors in weighing, measuring, or counting which occur in packing conducted in compliance with good commercial practice.

(2) Discrepancies due exclusively to differences in the capacity of bottles and similar containers resulting solely from unavoidable difficulties in manufacturing such bottles or containers so as to be of uniform capacity: Provided that no greater tolerance shall be allowed in case of bottles or similar containers which, because of their design, cannot be made of approximate uniform capacity than is allowed in case of bottles or similar containers which can be manufactured so as to be of approximate uniform capacity.

(3) Discrepancies in weight or measure, due exclusively to differences in atmospheric conditions in various places, and which unavoidably result from the ordinary and customary exposure of the packages to evaporation or to the absorption of water.

Discrepancies under classes (1) and (2) of this paragraph shall be as often above as below the marked quantity. The reasonableness of discrepancies under class (3) of this paragraph shall be determined on the facts in each case.

Acid Materials in Baking Powder Must Be Harmless

FOOD STANDARDS
Baking Powders

Baking powder is essentially a mixture of bicarbonate of soda with an acid, either free, or in combination as an acid salt, together with starch or other neutral material; and is intended to be used as a leavener in baking; the leavening agent being the carbonic acid gas liberated by interaction of the acid component with the bicarbonate of soda under the conditions of baking.

2. The acid materials employed in the manufacture of baking powders shall be, in themselves harmless to health, and the compounds resultant from their interaction with bicarbonate of soda shall also be harmless to health.

3. Baking powder must be capable of yielding ten (10) per cent. of its weight of carbon dioxide, on treatment as prescribed and recommended in Bulletin No. 360 of the Department of Inland Revenue (Laboratory series).

Beverages

1. Fresh fruit juices are the clean unfermented liquid obtained by the first pressing of fresh, ripe fruit, and correspond in name to the fruits from which they are obtained, and contain not more than two (2) per cent. of alcohol by volume. (Equivalent to three and one-half (3.5) per cent. of proof spirit).

2. Apple Juice, Apple Must, Sweet Cider, is the fresh fruit juice obtained from apple, the fruit of Pyrus malua, has a specific gravity (20°C) not less than 1.0415 nor greater than 1.0690; and contains in one hundred (100) cubic centimetres (20°C) not less than six (6) grammes, and not more than twenty (20) grammes of total sugars, in terms of reducing sugars, not less than twenty-four (24) centigrammes nor more than sixty (60) centigrammes of apple ash, which contains not less than fifty (50) per cent. of potassium carbonate.

3. Grape Juice, Grape Must, is the fresh fruit juice obtained from grapes (Vitis species), has a specific gravity (20°C.) not less than 1.0400 and not exceeding 1.1240; and contains in one hundred (100) cubic centimetres (20°C.) not less than seven (7) grammes nor more than twenty-eight (28) grammes of total sugars, in terms of reducing sugars, not less than twenty (20) centigrammes and more than fifty-five (55) centigrammes of grape ash, and not less lesss than than fifteen (15) milligrammes than fifteen (15) milligrammes of phosphoric acid (P2O5).

4. Lemon Juice is the fresh fruit juice obtained from lemon, the fruit of Citrus limonum Risso, has a specific gravity (20° C.) not less than 1.030 and not greater than 1.040; and contains not less than ten (10) per cent. of solids and not less than seven (7) per cent. of citric acid.

5. Lime Juice, Lime Fruit Juice, is the freshly expressed juice of the ripe fruit of Citrus (various species); and has a specific gravity of 20°C., not less than 1.030 and not greater than 1.040, and contains not less than eight (8) per cent. of solids and not less than seven (7) per cent. of free citric acid. Its optical activity (rotary power to polarized light) lies between the limits of 0.5° and 1.0° of the Soleil-Ventzke scale, when observed in a column of 200 mm length at 20°C.

6. Pear Juice, Pear Must, Sweet Perry, is the fresh fruit juice obtained from pears, the fruit of Pyrus communis or P. sinensis.

Sterilized Fruit Juices

1. Sterilized Fruit Juices are the products obtained by heating fresh fruit juices sufficiently to kill all the organisms present, and correspond in name to the fruits from which they are obtained.

Concentrated Fruit Juices are clean, sound fruit juices from which a considerable portion of the water has been evaporated, and correspond in name to the fruits from which they are obtained.

Sweet Fruit Juices, Sweetened Juices, Fruit Syrups, are the products obtained by adding sugar (sucrose) to fresh fruit juices and correspond in name to the fruits from which they are obtained.

Sterilized Fruit Syrups are the products obtained by the addition of sugar (sucrose) to fresh fruit juices, and heating them sufficiently to kill all the organisms present, and correspond in name to the fruits from which they are obtained.

Fermented Fruit Juices

Wine is the product of normal alcoholic fermentation of the juice of sound ripe grapes, neat, or variously modified, and followed by a proper cellar treatment.

All beverages sold or offered for sale as wine shall be distinctly labeled to show the place of their production; and shall meet the requirements for wine, which are established by law in the place of their production.

Wine made in any part of Canada shall be labeled in such a way as to show the locality in which it has been produced. The specific name of such locality, together with the names of the makers, shall be held to be a legal description of the article.

Note.—The defining of types of Canadian made wines is postponed until sufficient data have been secured.

Cider, Hard Cider, is the product made by the normal alcoholic fermentation of apple juice, and the usual cellar treatment, and contains not more than seven (7) per cent. by volume of alcohol, and in one hundred (100) cubic centimetres (20°C.) of the cider, not less than two (2) grammes nor more than twelve (12) grammes of solids, not more than eight (8) grammes of sugars, in terms of reducing sugars, and not less than twenty (20) centigrams nor more than forty (40) centigrams of cider ash.

Sparkling Cider, Champagne Cider, is cider impregnated with carbonic acid under pressure, either by conducting the after-part of the fermentation in closed quarters part of the fermentation in closed containers or otherwise, with or without the addition of cider or sugar liquor, and contains, in one hundred (100) cubic centimetres (20°C.), not less than (20) centigrams of cider ash.

Canned Peas

Canned peas, unless specifically designated as below, shall be prepared from the harvest of the year in which they are canned, and shall be the unripe peas of the crop of that year.

Ripe peas may be canned, provided that the label shows quite clearly that they are such. This may be done either by labeling them as Canned Ripe Peas, or by use of the word "Soaked."

Mixtures of ripe and unripe (or green) peas shall be plainly labeled in such a way as to show that they are mixtures.

Peas which do not exactly comply with the above regulations shall be deemed to be adulterated under the Act.

Cloves

Cloves are the dried flower buds of Caryophyllus aromaticus L., which contains not more than five (5) per cent. of clove stems; not less than fourteen (14) per cent. of volatile (essential) oil; not more than eight (8) per cent. of total ash; not more than five-tenths (0.5) per cent. of ash insoluble in hydrochloric acid, and not more than ten (10) per cent. of crude fibre.

Cloves whether sold in the unground or in the ground condition must meet the above requirements.

Cloves may be ground in admixture with pimento (allspice) and sold as a mixture; but in such cases the article must be labeled "Cloves with pimento (allspice)" and the percentage of each component must be declared on the label.

Coloring Matters in Food

Provided that only harmless coloring matters are used, the following classes of foods may be artificially colored, without declaration on the label or otherwise, and provided also that the color does not conceal damage or make the article appear better or of greater value than it really is:

Full whole milk cheese, ice cream and ices, confectionery, inclusive of jelly powders, butter, flavoring extract of lemon.

The following articles may be colored with caramel only, without declaration of such coloring: Spirits, non-excisable fermented beverages, vinegar, summer or so-called temperance beverages, sauces.

In all cases except such as are covered by Sections 1 and 11 above, the presence of artificial coloring matter must be declared in easily legible type on the main panel of the main label.

When used in the amounts necessary to produce desirable colors in foods, the following substances are regarded, in the light of present knowledge of their physiological effects as harmless to health, within the meaning of the Food and Drug Act. Should more extended knowledge of the effects upon the health of any of the coloring matters named below establish harmfulness, they would, in such case, come under Section 5 (d) of the Food and Drugs Act, and their presence in foods would constitute misbranding: Caramel, Cochineal, Saffron, Chlorophyll, and innocuous vegetable color extractives.

Coal-Tar Dyes

Also the following coal-tar dyes, which must not contain Arsenic in excess of 10 parts as 2O3 per million, reckoned upon the actual weight of coloring matter, or heavy metals (iron excepted) and must not be used in quantities exceeding two (2) grains per pound (1 part in 3500):

S and J. 107—Amaranth.
S. and J. 56—Ponceau, 3R.
S. and J. 517—Erythrosin.
S. and J. 85—Orange 1.
S. and J. 94—Tartrazine.
S. and J. 4—Napthol Yellow S.
S. and J. 435—Light Green S.F. Yellowish.
S. and J.—692—Indigo Carmine, Bisuphonic Acid.

The numbers quoted above refer to the Systematic Survey of Organic Coloring Matters by Schultz & Julius: translated by A. G. Green, published by Macmillan & Co.

Note.—(1) Certain dyes believed to be sufficient in number and character to meet all necessary requirements so far as food is concerned are recognized as harmless to health, in the amount necessary to give desirable colors to food.

The coal-tar dyes referred to are specifically named above. Of course, it is possible that even these dyes may, through carelessness in manufacture, contain arsenic, lead or other impurities, thus rendering them dangerous in food. For this reason, it is desirable that only such batches should be be available as have been actually tested and certified by the proper authority. Coal tar dyes other than those above named if employed in foods are so used at the risk of the manufacturer of the food, and if the coloring matter used in any food is harmful to health, or if it conceals damage or inferiority, it renders that food misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, whether or not the use of coloring matter is stated on the label.

(2) It is believed that a considerable number of coal-tar dyes other than those named above may be used in foods with impunity. A manufacturer who makes any other dyes than those named as above takes a certain risk in such use, and it is for him to assure himself of the safety of the dye employed by him.

Certain coal-tar dyes are known to be harmful owing to the fact that they specifically exert physiological action of a toxic character, such dyes should, of course, never be used in foods. Any coal-tar dyes may, through carelessness in manufacture and by unintentional introduction of poisonous materials during manufacture, become dangerous to health.

Such dyes as demand, in the process of manufacture, the employment of reagents containing arsenic, lead, etc., are, of course, more likely to retain these poisonous substances.

(3) The Schultz tables, 5th edition, January, 1914, contain 1,001 dyes identified by specific numbers, and concerning which more or less complete information of specific character and method of manufacture is available.

A great many new dyes have been placed on the market since 1914 concerning which our information is imperfect and unsatisfactory.

It is of highest importance that when a dye other than those named above is employed in foods, such dye should be identified, if possible, by reference to the Schultz tables above referred to, and in any case described in such a way that the extremely voluminous literature of this subject may be intelligently investigated.

At very great cost of money and labor, the Department of Agriculture at Washington has fully investigated the character of the dyes listed above and until similar investigation has decided the question concerning other dyes, I would strongly advise, in the interests of public health as well as in the interest of the food manufacturer, who wishes to avoid trouble for himself and the public, that the dyes listed above be strictly adhered to.

I do not think that, in a matter so important to the health of the public as the employment of dyes, the matter of expense should cut any figure at all.

Cream of Tartar

1. Cream of Tartar is essentially an acid salt obtained from the crude tartar deposited during the fermentation of grape juice; and commercial cream of tartar contains at least eighty-eight (88) per cent. of bitartrate of potash.

2. Purified Cream of Tartar (Pot. Ac. Tartras, Purif.) contains not less than ninety-nine (99) per cent. of bitartrate of potash.

Edible Vegetable Oils

1. Olive Oil, Sweet Oil, is entirely a product of the fruit of the olive tree.

Its specific gravity, at 15.5°C., is not less than 0.9140 nor more than 0.9196.

Its specific refractive index, at 15.5°C., is not less than 1.4700 nor more than 1.4718.

Its Maumene number lies between 42 and 52.

Its iodine absorption number (using Hubl solution) lies between 77 per cent. and 94 per cent.

Its saponification number (Koettatorfer number) lies between 185.0 and 195.0.

It does not contain above 3.5 per cent. of free fatty acids.

2. Cotton Seed Oil is the oil obtained from the seeds of cotton plants and subjected to refining processes. It is free from rancidity; has specific gravity at 15.5°C., beteween 0.9216 and 0.9300; has a refractive index (at 25°C.) not less than 1.4700 and not more than 1.4735, and an iodine number not less than 104 nor more than 110 (Hubl solution).

3. Cacao butter, coca butter is the edible fat obtained from sound cacao beans either before or after roasting.

4. Coconut oil, copra oil, is the edible oil obtained from the kernels of the coconut.

5. Cochin oil is coconut oil prepared in Cochin (Malabar).

6. Ceylon oil, is coconut oil prepared in Ceylon.

7. Corn oil, maize oil, is the edible oil obtained from the germ of Indian corn (maize) (Sez Mays L.)

8. Palm kernel oil is the edible oil obtained from the kernels of the fruit of the palm tree (Eloeis guineensis L.)

9. Peanut oil, arachis oil, earthnut oil, is the edible oil obtained from the peanut (Arachis Hypogaea L.)

10. Poppy seed oil is the edible oil obtained from the seeds of the poppy (Papaver somniferum L.)

11. Rape seed oil, colza oil, is the edible oil obtained from the seeds of the rape plant (Bransica Compestris).

12. Soy bean oil, soja oil, is the soluble oil obtained from the seeds of the soy bean plant (Dolichos Soja L., Soja, Hispida, Sieb et Zucc., Soga Japonica, Savilk, Blycine, hispida, Maxim, Glycine Soja L.)

13. Sesame oil, Gingili oil, teel oil, benne oil, is the edible oil obtained from the seed of the sesame plant (Sesaamum indicum, De Candelle L., Radiatum Schum and Thonn).

14. Sunflower oil is the edible oil obtained from the seeds of the sunflower. (Helianthus annuus L.)

15. Salad oil. Any of the above may be sold as salad oil; but when offered as salad oil, the specific name of the oil must be declared on the label in type of the same size as the word "Salad."

16. Mixtures of these with Olive Oil must be so declared on the label.

Solvents in Flavoring Extracts Shall Be On the Label

1. A flavoring extract, intended for the purpose of flavoring food, is a solution of correct strength, as hereinafter defined, of sapid and odorous principles derived from an aromatic plant or parts of a plant, with or without its natural coloring matters; and conforms in name to the plant used in its preparation.

2. The usual solvents employed in the preparation of flavoring extracts are ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine. In the event of any other solvents than ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine being used, such solvents shall be harmless to health, and their names shall be plainly stated on the label.

3. Solutions of natural or synthetic preparations such as vanillin, coumarin, benzaldehyde, methyl salicylate or other sapid and odorous compounds, more or less resembling substances found in plants, or absolutely indentical with these, if harmless to health, may be sold for flavoring purposes, if properly labelled, so as to make it quite clear that they are not extracts as above defined.

The word "Artificial" or "Imitation" shall appear on the main label in type as large and conspicuous as that used in any other word on the label.

4. If an extract be fortified or strengthened by having such natural or synthetic preparations as are referred to in the immediately preceding section added to it, the fact of such addition shall be clearly stated on the label, or the word "Compound" or "Mixture" shall be used to describe it.

The word "compound" or "mixture" shall appear on the label in type as large and conspicuous as that used in any other word on the main label.

5. Almond extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of bitter almonds, free from hydrocyanic acid, and contains not less than one per cent. (1%) by volume of oil of bitter almonds.

5a. Oil of bitter almonds, commercial, is the volatile oil obtained from the seed of the bitter almond (Amygdalus Communis L.), the apricot (Prunis armeniaca L.), or the peach (amygdalus persica L.).

6. Anise extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of anise, and contains not less than three per cent. (3%) by volume of oil of anise.

6a. Oil of anise is the volatile oil obtained from the anise seed.

7. Celery seed extract is the flavoring extract prepared from celery seed or the oil of celery seed, or both, and contains not less than three-tenths per cent (0.3%) by volume of oil of celery seed.

7a. Oil of celery seed is the volatile oil obtained from celery seed.

8. Cassia extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of cassia, and contains not less than two per cent (2%) by volume of oil of cassia.

8a. Oil of cassia is the lead-free volatile oil obtained from the leaves or bark of Cinnamomum cassia Bl., and contains not less than seventy-five per cent. (75%) by weight of cinnamic aldehyde.

9. Cinnamon extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of cinnamon, and contains not less than two per cent. (2%) by volume of oil of cinnamon.

9a. Oil of cinnamon is the lead-free volatile oil obtained from the bark of the Ceylon cinnamon (Cinnamomum zelanicum Breyne), and contains not less than sixty-five per cent. (65%) by weight of cinnamic aldehyde and not more than ten per cent. (10%) by weight of eugenol.

10. Clove extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of cloves, and contains not less than two per cent. (2%) by volume of oil of cloves.

10a. Oil of cloves is the lead-free, volatile oil obtained from cloves.

11. Ginger extract is the flavoring extract prepared from ginger, and contains in each one hundred (100) cubic centimetres the alcohol-solubre matters from not less than twenty (20) grams of ginger.

12. Lemon extract is the flavoring extract prepared from the lemon peel, or from oil of lemon, and contains along with more or less of the terpenes of lemon oil, not less than two-tenths (0.2) of one per cent. of citral derived from oil of lemon.

13. Terpene lemon extract is the flavoring extract prepared as above described, and contains not less than five (5) per cent. of oil of lemon, and not less than two-tenths (0.2) of one per cent. of citral, derived from oil of lemon.

14. Nutmeg extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of nutmeg, and contains not less than two per cent. (2%) by volume of oil of nutmeg.

14a. Oil of nutmeg is the volatile oil obtained from nutmegs.

15. Terpene orange extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of orange or from orange peel, or both, and contains not less than five per cent. (5%) by volume of oil of orange.

15a. Oil of orange is the volatile oil obtained, by expression or alcoholic solution, from the fresh peel of the orange (Citrus aurantium L.) and has an optical rotation (25°C.) of not less than 95° in a 100-millimeter tube.

16. Extract of orange is the flavoring extract prepared by shaking oil of orange with dilute alcohol, or by dissolving terpeneless oil of orange in dilute alcohol, and corresponds in flavoring strength to orange extract.

17. Peppermint extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of peppermint, or from peppermint, or both, and contains not less than three per cent. (3%) by volume of oil of peppermint.

17a. Peppermint is the leaves and flowering tops of Mentha piperita L.

17b. Oil of Peppermint is the volatile obtained from peppermint, and contains not less than fifty per cent. (50%) by weight of menthol.

18. Rose extract is the flavoring extract prepared from otto of roses, with or without red rose petals, and contains not less than four-tenth per cent. (0.4%) by volume of otto roses.

18a. Otto of roses is the volatile oil obtained from the petals of Rosa damascena Mill., R. centifolia L., or R. moschata Herrm.

19. Savory extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of savory, or from savory, or both, and contains not less than thirty-five hundredths per cent. (0.35%) by volume of oil of savory.

19a. Oil of savory is the volatile oil obtained from savory.

20. Spearmint extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of spearmint, or from spearmint, or both, and contains not less than three per cent. (3%) by volume of oil of spearmint.

20a. Spearmint is the leaves and flowering tops of Mentha spicata L.

20b. Oil of spearmint is the volatile oil obtained from spearmint.

21. Star anise extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of star anise and contains not less than three per cent. (3%) by volume of oil of star anise.

21a. Oil of star anise is the volatile oil distilled from the fruit of the star anise (Illicium cerum Hook).

22. Sweet basil extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of sweet basil, or from sweet basil, or both, and contains not less than one-tenth per cent. (0.1%) by volume of oil of sweet basil.

22a. Sweet basil, basil, is the leaves and tops of Ocynum basilicum L.

22b. Oil of sweet basil is the volatile oil obtained from basil.

23. Sweet marjoram extract, majoram extract, is the flavoring extract prepared from the oil of marjoram, or from marjoram, or both, and contains not less than one per cent. (1%) by volume of oil of marjoram.

23a. Oil of marjoram is the volatile oil obtained from marjoram.

24. Thyme extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of thyme, or from thyme, or both, and contains not less than two-tenths per cent. (0.2%) by volume of oil of thyme.

24a. Oil of thyme is the volatile oil obtained from thyme.

25. Tonka extract is the flavoring extract prepared from tonka bean, with or without sugar or glycerin, and contains not less than one-tenth per cent. (0.1%) by weight of coumarin extracted from the tonka bean, together with a corresponding proportion of the other soluble matters thereof.

25a. Tonka bean is the seed of Courarouna odorata Aublet (Dipteryx odorata (Aubl.) (Willd.).

26. Vanilla extract is the flavoring extract prepared from vanilla bean with or without sugar or glycerin, and contains in 100 cubic centimetres the soluble matters from not less than five (5) grams of the vanilla bean (the dried, cured fruit of vanilla planifolia).

27. Vanilla extract shall contain no coloring matter other than that supplied by the vanilla bean itself.

28. Artificial and Compound Extracts of Vanilla may contain added colour of harmless character, provided that declaration of such colour be made by the use of the word "coloured" on the main label, in type as large and conspicuous as that used in any other word on the label.

29. Wintergreen extract is the flavoring extract prepared from oil of wintergreen, and contains not less than three per cent. (3%) by volume of oil of wintergreen.

29a. Oil of wintergreen is the volatile oil distilled from the leaves of the Gaultheria procumbene L.

Fruit and Fruit Products Are Defined According to Act

Fruit and Fruit Products

1. Fruits are the clean, sound, edible, fleshy fructifications of plants, distinguished by their sweet, acid and ethereal flavors.

2. Dried fruit is the clean, sound product made by drying matured properly prepared fresh fruit in such a way as to take up no harmful substances; and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

3. Evaporated fruit is dried fruit in whose preparation artificial heat has been employed.

4. Evaporated Apples shall contain not more than 25 per cent. of moisture. (For method see Note 4, Bul. 346).

5. Canned fruit is the sound product made by sterilizing clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit, by heating with or without sugar, and keeping in suitable clean, hermetically sealed containers; and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

6. Preserve is the sound product made from clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit and sugar syrup, with or without spices and vinegar, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

7. Jam, Marmalade, is the sound product made from clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit or fruit pulp and sugar, with or without spices or vinegar, by boiling to a semisolid consistence, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

8. Fruit Butter is the sound product made from fruit juice, and clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fruit, boiled to a semi-solid mass of homogeneous consistence, with or without the addition of sugar and spices or vinegar, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

9. Jelly, Fruit Jelly, is the sound, semi-solid gelatinous product made by boiling clean, sound, properly matured and prepared fresh fruit with water, concentrating the expressed and strained juice, to which sugar is added, and conforms in name to the fruit used in its preparation.

10. When Jam, Marmalade, Fruit Butter or Jelly contains other fruit or fruit juice than that which gives its special name to the article, the fact of the presence of such other fruit shall be stated upon the label, in lettering as large and as distinct as that used in naming the fruit principally present. This requirement does not, however, apply to the use of fruit juice, up to the amount of ten (10) per cent. of the weight of the jam, etc., used instead of water in the manufacture of the jam, etc.

11. When the Sugar in preserve, jam, marmalade, fruit butter or jelly is wholly or partially replaced by glucose, or by any other substitute for sugar, the fact of such substitution shall be stated upon the label in plain lettering.

12. When Jam, Marmalade, etc., are prepared from two or more sorts of fruits, the first-named fruits on the label shall be that which is present in largest amount; thus a jam made from Strawberries and Apples or Apple Pulp or Apple Jelly, shall be labelled as Strawberry and Apple Jam, only if the weight of Strawberries used exceeds the weight of Apples or Apple Pulp or Apple Jelly in the product; where the weight of Apples or Apple Pulp or Apple Jelly exceeds the weight of Strawberries used, the label shall read, "Apple and Strawberry Jam" or "Apple Jam flavored with Strawberries" or otherwise, in such a way as to make clear the fact that Strawberries are not the chief constituent.

13. It has been shown to the satisfaction of this department that processed fruit (that is, fruit which has been sterilized by heat and stored in hermetically-sealed containers of proper material) may be quite as good for use in the manufacture of jams, as fresh fruit, only differing from the fresh fruit by being more or less off colour. The shortness of the fruit season in Canada renders it necessary that the larger part of our fruit be processed as above described, in order to prevent wastage.

In recognition of the above this Department will, until further advice, interpret the addition of harmless coloring matter to jams, made from sound fruit, either processed or fresh, as not "Concealing damage

THE EARLY CLOSING LAW

THE BILL introduced into the Ontario Legislature, amending the present early closing law, in regard to retail stores, does not appear to be in the best interests of the trade. As the law now stands, three-quarters of the persons engaged in a particular class of business, must approve of an early closing measure. The amendment would change this regulation to a bare majority, in order to settle the question. The bill is designed to make compulsory the closing of retail stores at seven o'clock in the evenings other than Saturday and the night before holidays, and at noon one day a week, preferably Wednesday.

A bare majority to pass a measure of this kind in a municipality is not sufficient to render the law in the best interests of the trade. A more general approval of the merchants is necessary, in order to make it the smooth running legislation that it ought to be. It is not fair to the minority that a majority of perhaps only one or two merchants should succeed in enforcing a measure that really has strong disapproval.

While three-quarters majority seems the other extreme, and really too high a percentage, a happy medium might be struck in, say, a two-thirds majority.

DEATH KNELL OF CO-OPERATIVE STORES

CO-OPERATIVE societies are organized by a group of non-business people, who, continually raving at the price charged by retail merchants, band themselves into a society and subscribe a certain sum by selling shares to form the capital with which to operate a retail store. Just how successful—or unsuccessful—these co-operative instructions usually turn out to be is interestingly set forth in the report of the Stratford Co-Operative Society found elsewhere in this issue.

The Stratford Co-Operative Society was founded about one year ago by a group of men composed of members of the local labor union, particularly the railroad section, a class of labor that has been drawing down a larger scale of wages than any other class of labor, certainly far larger than the average retail grocer. The labor union, claiming that the retail grocers were the cause of the high prices, set about to "remedy this evil" by starting a store of their own. They issued stock at $10 per share and a certain amount was subscribed. The first six months' report showed a net loss of something like $250 and the directors promptly "let out" the manager, claiming that it was through his mismanagement that the loss was incurred. Another manager was appointed, and this manager, probably being "egged on" by the directors to increase the turnover, promptly proceeded to do just that by cutting prices (at least so it is said), and we can safely presume so, as the report for the last six months shows a "handsome" gross profit of $1,557.28 on a turnover of $32,574.88. In other words a gross margin of profit of 4.78 2-3 per cent. Certainly this is very illuminating, and the report also shows that the cost of doing business was 17.32 1-3 per cent. which netted the society a loss of $4,956.51 for the six months' period.

The directors attribute this loss to the "extraordinary lack of loyalty to their own institution shown by the people who own the business." In stating this, directors have stated the fact that has been the death knell of practically all the co-operative stores that have ever been organized, at least in Canada.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF FORM

SOME grocers are finding the sale of cut flowers a profitable sideline. Especially is this so, where there are no floral shops or greenhouses.

* * * *

MANY merchants the country over have discovered that when asking for credits or loans that character is a real tangible asset in business which is more to be guarded than cash down.

THE ADVICE being given by experts to the merchant is to watch his markets carefully and continue to operate on a policy of rapid turnover rather than speculative profits.

A GROCER long experienced in the trade declared recently that his windows were his greatest asset. Can you say the same thing? Are you making them produce results six days in the week?

* * * *

THE GROCER who wishes to make his advertising count for anything must forsake the old stereotyped forms that formerly prevailed. The present generation wants snappy ads—ads that tickle the fancy—ads. in short, that have human interest.

* * * *

GROCERS will do well to read carefully in this and succeeding issues, regulations of the Food and Drug Act of the Dominion of Canada. Important rulings are contained therein, as relating to pure foods, what constitutes them, and penalties for infractions of the same.

* * * *

NOW IS the the time for optimism, not pessimism. It is the time to merchandise on facts, not theories. It is the time for every man to realize that he must sell his merchandise at the prices at which he can turn it over to the people. The quicker inventories are liquidated out the quicker will prosperity come back.

CURRENT NEWS OF THE WEEK

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News from Readers for This Page

MARITIMES

The Borden milk plant at Truro, N.S., which has been closed down, has resumed operations.

An interesting announcement is made this week in connection with the grocery business of F. E. Williams, St. John, N.B. Mr. Williams has been for some time the proprietor of the Nova Scotia Sales Co., Ltd., distributors of the Reo cars and trucks in New Brunswick. The grocery store so long operated by him at the corner of Charlotte and Princess Streets in that city is to be closed on the 31st of this month and a new showroom for cars is to take its place.

QUEBEC

I. V. S. Benson has come this month to Montreal from London, England, to take charge of a new department in the firm of Harrison & Crossfield, importers and exporters. This new import department will specialize in tapiocas, spices, mild coffee, cocoa, etc.

W. J. Bush & Co., under the management of Mr. St. Alphonse, are moving their offices in the Beardmore Building on St. Peter Street, Montreal, where they have been for some years to 194 St. Paul Street, Montreal, where their factory is located. In the future the factory and general offices will be located on the same premises.

ONTARIO

J. Wildfong has commenced business at 428 Yonge Street, Toronto.

F. H. Currie has opened a store at 1336 Danforth Avenue, Toronto.

W. C. Strong has opened a business at 260 King Street West, Hamilton.

Jewell and Son have opened a store at 794 Gerrard Street East, Toronto.

Louis Flagman this week is opening a new grocery store at Wallaceburg, Ont.

J. D. Lamb, grocer, St. Thomas, has disposed of his business to W. J. Webster.

Mrs. L. L. Purvis has opened a grocery store at Rockwell and Silverthorn Avenues, Toronto.

J. Wilson has purchased the business at 604 Yonge Street, Toronto, until recently carried on by R. Wingfield.

The Dominion stores have opened a new branch at 402 Parliament Street, Toronto. R. Square is the manager.

The Loblaw stores have opened a new branch at 487 Parliament Street, Toronto. W. G. McRobie is in charge.

The J. D. Moore Co., of St. Marys, Ont., is installing a new ammonia system in connection with their cold storage plant.

J. A. Francis, of Cobourg, Ont., has purchased the bakery business of Robert Adams, at Wallaceburg, Ont.

F. Gibb, of Anderdon, Ont., has joined the sales staff in the grocery store of Charles Harris at Amherstburg.

Commencing April 1 grocers of London, Ont., will close their stores on Saturday evenings at 7.30 o'clock.

Eric Johnston, of Sombra, Ont., has purchased the Whitebread Grocery at Whitebread, Ont., from J. A. Wadsworth.

Arthur Billiet has purchased the Montreal Hotel at Wallaceburg, and when he gets possession on April 1 will remodel part of it and fit it up as a first-class grocery store.

Richardson and Avery, of Thamesville, Ont., have purchased premises which they will remodel and open up as a first-class meat market about April 1.

The P. and M. grocery store at St. Thomas, Ont., has been purchased by A. J. Campbell and Son. Mr. Campbell for some time has been with the firm of J. H. Gould, Ltd., at St. Thomas, Ont.

R. R. Powell, Carleton Place, Ont., has doubled the size of his store by removing the rear partition. It also enables him to show his stock to much better advantage.

G. F. Dalley, who for some time has been assistant manager of the Dominion Canners branch at Blenheim, Ont., has been appointed manager of the plant at Grimsby and is moving to that town shortly.

The city of Toronto has been granted permission by the Ontario Legislature to erect a pure food building on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds to cost $150,000.

A controversy has arisen at Wheatley, Ont., as to whether Thursday or Friday afternoons shall be observed this season as a half holiday. Among those signing a petition in favor of Friday is J. W. Hickson, grocer, and Fysh and Richardson, meat market. It is planned to close at 12.30 from May 1 to September 30.

J. R. Wilson & Co., manufacturers' agents, have opened offices at 27 Wellington E., Toronto, carrying grocery lines. Mr. Wilson, prior to going into business for himself, was with C. Morris & Co., in the C.P.R. building, and during the years of the war served overseas.

A. H. Sainsbury, of Sainsbury Bros., Board of Trade Building, Toronto, has returned from a three months' trip to California where business was combined with pleasure. Sainsbury Bros. are the agents for the California Prune and Apricot Growers, Inc.

The Scandrett grocery at London, Ont., has a most attractive window display this week of ham and bacon. The background of the display is purple crepe with white strips arranged at close intervals. On the white strips are large numbers of Easter lilies. Advertising helps are skilfully interspersed with samples and packages of the ham and bacon and large cards attractively printed in colors give the prices in figures six inches high. The display is a most tempting one and has been a real business getter for the firm.

SEND IN PHOTO OF YOUR WINDOW DISPLAYS

Readers of Canadian Grocer are constantly making special window displays, pictures of which Canadian Grocer would be glad to obtain for the purpose of reproduction. We will pay up to three dollars for each acceptable window sent in, the photograph to be at least six by eight inches. The live merchant is always displaying some line of goods in an effort to stimulate sales, and we want to get these displays from time to time. Windows of housecleaning merchandise, of jams, of fresh fruits, of canned goods, in fact of all products sold in a grocery store, will be appreciated, and subscribers are asked to send them to Canadian Grocer, accompanied by invoices of cost of the same in duplicate. You will be making a feature in your windows of special lines from time to time. Many attractive displays will be made. Let us have a photograph of yours.

DAYLIGHT SAVING WILL BE IN FORCE IN MONTREAL

Montreal, March 21.—From Sunday, May 1, to Sunday, October 2, daylight saving will be in force in the city of Montreal, according to the decision of the Administrative Commission. The city authorities will adopt shortly a formal resolution notifying the general public of the change of time by which it is proposed that timepieces be set one hour ahead during the period mentioned.

The Chambre de Commerce of Montreal have passed a resolution favoring daylight saving, and a committee composed of C. H. Catelli, F. E. Fontaine, Joseph Ethier and A. Prud'homme was appointed to wait upon the civic authorities and bring the recommendation to their notice.

No Tax in Case of Retailer Selling His Own Business

A subscriber to Canadian Grocer writes as follows:

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

Kindly give us all information in connection with the sale of a business. Is there a Government tax levied on this transaction?

Answer.—In the case of a retailer selling his business, there is no tax. In the case of a wholesaler selling his business, there is a sales tax on those assets of the business that are represented by goods for re-selling—for instance, such merchandise stock of a store as is taxable under the Act.

It is a little difficult to give all information in connection with the sale of a business as each business has its own peculiarities and every sale would have its own problems. The vendor of a business should watch particularly that he does not contravene the Bulk Sales Act. And if we had the details of the business you refer to, we could give you further information.

CHARLES HOWELL TO BE GENERAL MANAGER

Takes Charge of the New Kraft-MacLaren Co. with Headquarters in Montreal

Charles H. Howell was in Canada last week from Chicago in the interests of the Kraft-MacLaren Cheese Co., Ltd., which is making preparations to manufacture in Montreal. Mr. Howell spent some time in Montreal and was later in Toronto on his way back to Chicago.

The trade will be interested in knowing that Mr. Howell is the general manager of the new Kraft-MacLaren Cheese Co., Ltd., of Montreal. To a Canadian Grocer representative he stated the firm expected to begin operations in the new plant about May 15. In addition to the manufacture of cream cheese in packages and tins, the new company will make some entirely new lines to the Canadian trade. Among these will be a five-pound carton of different kinds of cheese covered with tinfoil and without rind.

Mr. Howell is not coming to Canada as a stranger. He has a number of relatives here—in Ottawa. He was one of those on the train that was wrecked this side of Chicago two or three weeks ago but luckily was in a coach that was not struck. The car in front was completely demolished. With a brakeman he was among the first to assist in the rescue of the unfortunate travellers who were still alive.

NEARLY TWO-THIRDS RESERVED

Nearly two-thirds the space has been actually reserved or spoken for in the new Pure Food Building for the Canadian National Exhibition grounds, Toronto. A large number of representative foodstuff firms have taken space and enquiries are coming in to the Food Products Association and to Canadian National Exhibition every day. Before the building can be proceeded with the city requires a still further percentage of the space reserved. The executive of the Association held another meeting on Monday last to discuss the situation.

Founder of the William Davies Co. Has Passed Away

The founder of the William Davies Co., Ltd., in the person of William Davies, passed away at his home, 173 Warren Road, Toronto, on Monday afternoon, in his ninetieth year. The late Mr. Davies attained a high place in the business world, and the splendid industry he leaves behind him is a tribute to his ability and integrity.

He was born at Wallingford, near Reading, England, in 1831. He came to Canada in 1854 and set up a small provision business at Queen and Victoria Streets, Toronto. Later he became interested in the exportation of hogs to England and then in the exportation of bacon, which formed the foundation of the present business of the William Davies Co. He contributed largely to bringing about the high standard of hog breeding maintained in Canada, adding greatly to the reputation of Canadian bacon in the Old Land.

Owing to the death of Mr. Davies' two sons who were active in the business, Sir Joseph Flavelle joined the company in 1891 and since then Mr. Davies has not been in close connection with the business.

The late William Davies was a philanthropist on a large scale, and many public institutions as well as organizations in connection with the Baptist Church, of which he was a member, shared his gifts. He was twice married and by his first wife had twelve children, all of whom predeceased him with the exception of Mrs. E. T. Fox, mother of E. C. Fox, general manager of the William Davies Co. He is survived by his second wife.

BIG SHIPMENT OF SOAP TO RUSSIA

Chicago, March 22.—Seventeen thousand pounds of soap were shipped from this city recently, destined for Moscow. Used sparingly, this would suffice to wash the faces and hands of nearly a million Russians. The soap is the gift of the American Red Star League, and is being sent at the earnest solicitation of the Soviet Government, which says that typhus and other epidemic diseases are killing hundreds, chiefly babies, every day.

New Goods

A new line that is coming on the Canadian market in the near future is a five-pound carton of cheese. This will be made by the new MacLaren-Kraft Cheese Company, Limited, of Montreal. The cheese inside the carton is covered with tinfoil, which is marked into half pound pieces, so that weight may be approximated closely by the retailer when cutting it. There is no rind to this cheese. It is packed in wooden cases. Different kinds will be put up such as pasteurized Canadian cheese and Swiss cheese.

Grocer Finds Sale of Cut Flowers Replaces Trade Lost in Ice Cream

SELLING cut flowers in the winter and early spring months is one way to balance the business done in summer through the sale of ice cream. At least it is the method James L. Hewson, of Oakville, Ont., has adopted, and Mr. Hewson declares that it has proved very profitable. At the time of a recent visit of a Canadian Grocer representative to Mr. Hewson's store he was showing a fine array of roses, carnations, violets, etc. It was on a Thursday that the Canadian Grocer man called, and Mr. Hewson stated that all would be sold before the following Monday.

"I have handled more flowers this winter than I have ever handled before," remarked Mr. Hewson. "I am naturally very fond of flowers, and the work of taking care of them is a pleasure rather than a labor to me. Besides they show a gratifying profit, any time devoted to their care is time well spent. I always keep some flowers in the window, and the display means everything in the way of selling them. I provide a great many flowers for social affairs, and I have found too, that flowers attract business to the store, very often meaning the purchase of other goods. I sell a lot of ice-cream here in the summer months, and the sale of cut flowers in the winter months replaces to a considerable extent, what is naturally lost in revenue as a result of the lack of demand for ice cream."

Mr. Hewson maintains a steady supply of flowers the winter through, getting fresh shipments at frequent intervals from nearby greenhouses.

NEWS FROM WESTERN CANADA

WESTERN

Mr. Preston's grocery store at Hammond, B.C., was robbed recently.

The organization of a branch of the Retail Merchants' Association in Vancouver goes on apace under the direction of H. T. Stephenson, who is the prime mover.

The Malpass and Wilson Co., Nanaimo, B.C., at present dealing in dry goods, boots and shoes, hardware, groceries, etc., has recently incorporated a company for $25,000 as Malpass and Wilson Groceteria, Ltd.

George J. Cameron, of the W. L. McKenzie Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, Man., has just returned from a trip out west, where he has been visiting his various branches.

J. R. Kelly, Moose Jaw, has sold his store property on River Street to Merchants' Ltd., for $25,000. A number of changes are to be made in the building.

Deighton's Market, Regina, Sask., has been removed from 1717 Broad Street, to the Old Trading Co. Bldg., on Hamilton Street.

Nelson R. M. A. Re-elect Officers For Current Year

Nelson, B. C., March 22.—The first annual meeting of the Nelson branch of the Retail Merchants' Association was held recently. Officers for the year were named, and the executive committee was named a canvassing committee to urge on all local retailers the advisability of getting into the association.

With the exception of A. T. Walley, who was elected first vice-president, all of last year's officers were re-elected. They were: President, W. J. Meigher; first vice-president, A. T. Walley; second vice-president, R. Andrew; treasurer, L. H. Choquette; honorary secretary, Ross Fleming; secretary, E. F. Gigot. The officers with the exception of E. F. Gigot, form the executive committee.

The matter of advancing the time one hour during the summer months was brought up and disposed of by a resolution advising the city council that the retailers were in favor of advancing clocks one hour from May 1 until October 1 inclusive, providing the scheme was generally favored throughout the dominion. The secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the resolution to the provincial executive of the association.

B. C. Retailers Are In Better Shape Than in 1913

R. D. Dinning, manager of the Vancouver branch of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, stated, in conversation with Canadian Grocer, that the credit condition throughout the province is good.

The retailers, according to this authority are carrying considerably less on their books than was the case in 1913. In fact, the jobbers are finding collections in much better shape than during the last period of depression.

Mr. Dinning, stating his own opinion, claimed that the present improved credit situation was due to the reserve of buying power shown by the amount of Victory bonds absorbed by this province.

Regina Merchants Approve of Tax On Turnover

The Retail Merchants' Association, of Regina, placed itself on record as approving of the principle of a tax on the turnover of all business and professional men, not to exceed one per cent. of the total turnover.

The motion was to the effect that all individuals or corporations desirous of taking up a business or profession in Canada should be required to take out a license from the office of the Collector of Inland Revenue, at a nominal figure, that every licensee should be required to keep an account of the amount of business done by him, and that at the end of each month he should be required to remit such a percentage of his profits as the government should see fit, this not to exceed one per cent. and that no exemption be granted from the tax.

Summerland Fruit Union Declare 6 Per Cent. Dividend

Summerland, B.C., March 22.—The seventh annual meeting of the Summerland Fruit Union was held recently. Capt. J. T. Mutrie, president; Walter J. McDowall, general manager, and C. L. Lowe, sales manager of the Okanagan United Growers, were present.

The financial statement and report of directors was received, and the recommendation of a dividend of 6 per cent. on paid-up capital was adopted.

The matter of raising the needed capital for working purposes was discussed at length, and finally a plan providing for the appropriation of 5 per cent. on the net crop proceeds each year was agreed on. This levy is estimated to produce about $10,000 per annum.

The directors elected for the year 1921 were E. R. Simpson, W. H. Hayes, G. Thornber, P. G. Dodwell, C. P. Evans, A. McLachlan, and W. S. Young (Naramata). The first four were the retiring directors, all being re-elected. The last three were elected to vacancies on the board.

Swift Current Merchants Form R. M. A. Branch

Swift Current, March 22.—A branch of the Retail Merchants' Association has recently been organized here. The old organization was made the basis of the ne worganization. The meeting was well attended, with George Bowers in the chair. G. W. Anderson, organizer for Southern Saskatchewan, was present. New officers elected are: president, L. F. McLaughlin; first vice-president, A. J. Wigmore; second vice-president, Jack Wood; treasurer, A. E. Longmore, and honorary secretary, W. W. Cooper.

The secretary will later be appointed by the executive, which will be enlarged by a representative from each line of business, being selected to act as chairman of his particular group.

Provincial Organizer Anderson pointed out the advantages of the Provincial association and also of the greater Dominion organization.

They have in their Provincial head office departments dealing with freight and express, accounting, collection and insurance. They also have a solicitor whose offices are at the disposal of members up to a certain amount of service. Mr. Anderson showed where the association saves a great deal annually to its members in fire insurance through its re-insurance scheme.

JAPAN'S PEANUT INDUSTRY

Exports of peanuts from Japan amounted to 13,173,524 pounds in 1913, 18,775,855 in 1917, 18,854,997 in 1918, and 14,586,845 pounds in 1919. Exports of peanut oil in the United States were 2,784,684 gallons in 1917 and 4,539,151 in 1918. This oil is largely obtained from foreign peanuts, mostly Chinese. The 1920 harvest is estimated as 10 per cent. greater than that of 1919.

Vancouver Co-operative Society, Limited, Is in Difficulties

Collapse of the Vancouver Store Is Explained by Placing the Responsibility on Scattered Membership, With Resultant High Cost of Delivery and Heavy Overhead Costs

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER (Special).—Demanding $1,700, which was owing, the United Grain Growers forced a receivership against the Vancouver Co-operative Society, Ltd. The liabilities of the Vancouver Society are said to be about $6,000 and it is thought that the assets will cover this amount.

The outside "co-op." stores at South Hill, Mount Pleasant, North Vancouver and Port Moody are expected to sever their connection with the central office and keep going.

Dr. Curry, an ardent apostle of the co-operative movement, explains the collapse of the Vancouver store by saying that the scattered membership, with resultant high cost of delivery, and the overhead cost of the central organization are responsible. The central office did the missionary work for the outside branches.

Opponents of the co-operative stores state that many people who ran bills with struggling local storekeepers allowed their accounts to run far in arrears while paying cash to the co-operative stores. Also it is stated that the remote possibility of collecting dividends does not compensate the housewife for foregoing the attractive cash and carry prices. She expects to buy cheaper from the "co-op." and will go where the service is best and the price lowest in spite of her membership expenditure of $5.

Canadian Grocer interviewed several delegates to the United Farmers' convention and it would appear that in British Columbia, as elsewhere, while some co-operatives are going under, there are always people, who have not had the experience, willing to pay for some.

"Business Improvement Is Ahead"

A Grocery Brokerage House in Western Canada Shows Aggressive, Optimistic Attitude in Regard to Business Conditions—1921 the "Go-Get-It" Year

WINNIPEG.—A Western Canada firm of grocery brokers in Winnipeg has sent out a circular letter in regard to business conditions that has caused wide comment on account of its aggressive and optimistic tone. It is entitled "Business Improvement" and reads in part as follows:

"In spite of a new revolution in Russia, critical conditions in Poland and Roumania, Austria starving, Germany frankly adopting a course which can only lead to a new crisis, and a new administration just taking the reins in the United States—a business improvement is ahead.

"In fact the advance guard of same has arrived and already the general trade has awakened from the depression of the past few months, and are putting their houses in order for the coming increase in business. The lines that have taken the greatest slump and have shown the greatest inactivity will be the first to resume conditions bordering on normal.

1921—The "Go-Get-It" Year

"There are too many pessimists in business. The men who are complaining that everything is going to the dogs have got the wrong idea altogether. Every merchant who can look back over a career of any length must know that there is nothing particularly abnormal about the state of affairs that we have been passing through. The good old rule of supply and demand is still on the job and working right now. In fact, all things considered, the inevitable period of trade depression is being weathered much better than might reasonably have been expected.

"Business, in short, has come down out of the clouds and has its feet on the ground. Consequently, there will be no panic, nor even any serious trouble. The epidemic of public extravagance did not last long enough to be followed by any lengthy period of hard times. The buying capacity of Western Canada has not been impaired.

"Fortune awaits the man who puts brains and energy into the quest. The future is the time when business skill, foresight and courage are being put to the test. The reckless and inexperienced may suffer, but the prudent and capable have no need to fear. In addition to distributing food products—we also distribute a 100 per cent. brand of optimism."

MACDONALD CHALLENGE TROPHY NOW IN CALGARY

The Macdonald challenge trophy was presented to the Alberta branch of the R.C.C.C. by W. C. Macdonald, Regd., Inc. Montreal, to stimulate the fraternal feeling between the various curling clubs in that province. It is representative of the double rink championship of the province. Since it was donated in February it has been won and played for by many of the outside rinks. It is now held in the city of Calgary, and the claim is made that they are going to hold it throughout the coming summer as apparently the ice is at an end for the season.

THE FORD MILK MAID

(Luco in the Manchester Guardian)

(Henry Ford, the motor magnate, in an interview with a representative of the New York Tribune, predicted that the day would come when cows would be done away with. The cow, he declared, was the crudest machinery in the world, adding: "It is a simple matter to take the same cereals that cows eat and to make them into milk which is superior to the natural article, not subject to tuberculosis, and much cleaner.")

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?
"I'm going a-milking, sir," she said.

"But it isn't polite to tell fairy tales—
What have you done with your stool and your pails?"

"Forgive me, old bean, you're a bit out of date,"
The maiden replied as she opened the gate.

"Well, why do you carry a spanner, my dear,
And an outfit that looks like a plumber's gear?

"The milkmaids that Herrick and other sang
Never resembled a break-down gang."

"Dear me," said the maiden, "you do leave me bored;
Have you never heard tell of the great
Mr. Ford?

"You know how his infinite zeal and resource
Improved on that ancient contrivance, the horse?

"Well, he's done the same thing for the dairyman now—
And I'm off to milk Henry's mechanical cow.

"Don't stand there and jaw about buckets and stools—
If you want to come with me, just carry the tools."

Manufacturers' Agents are Salesmen

Function of Manufacturers' Agents is to Sell Goods on Behalf of the Concerns They Represent—Few Stock Goods or Finance Shipments, But Merely Act as Selling Force and Transactions Are Fulfilled by Jobbers

"THE function of manufacturers' agents is to sell goods," remarked a leading representative of manufactured lines to Canadian Grocer the other day, when discussing the work that is actually done by the agents of manufacturers. "We do not interfere with the work of jobbers. We sell through the jobbers. That is, we take the orders, but the goods are delivered, in most instances, by the jobber from whom the retailer buys his stock. Of course, the average jobber could not cover the ground with his sales staff, and that is where the manufacturers' agents come in. They sell from one end of the country to the other, and cover the trades in a much more thoroughly organized way than ever could the limited number of salesmen who work for the wholesalers. The latter are free to perform the same duties that they have always done in the way of distribution, and the manufacturers' agent is an aid rather than an interference to them. Of course, there are some retailers to whom we sell, but they must be exceptionally large retailers, and only those who can buy in very large consignments. There are very few merchants who buy in this way, so that we are practically correct in asserting that our business is carried on through the wholesale trade."

Financing of Shipments

"Who does the financing of these shipments?" Canadian Grocer asked.

"The financing is done by the jobber, the arrangement being one entirely between the jobber and the manufacturer. We do no financing. We sell. The jobber must arrange about the shipment, the clearance of goods from the customs in the case of lines that are brought in from other countries, and see to it that they are delivered to the purchasers."

"Do you not carry nor warehouse any stock whatever?" the agent was next asked.

An Emergency Stock

"We do carry a certain amount of stock, but it is what we call an emergency stock. We carry it for our manufacturers, and have it merely to supply jobbers who happen to have run out of supplies while waiting for fresh shipments to arrive. It is merely, as I have stated, an emergency stock, and is held for manufacturers. We are not wholesalers, and when a manufacturer's agent buys stock and places it in a warehouse he is no longer exclusively a manufacturer's agent, but is also doing a wholesale trade. We secure the selling agency of various products from the manufacturer, and agree to represent him, giving him the services of our selling organization. We go out and sell the trade, but the business of delivery and the matter of payments are the duties of the jobber."

Both Wholesaler and Agent

One firm of manufacturers' agents, however, in discussing this question of carrying stocks with Canadian Grocer, declared that it was their policy to stock certain lines, and their customers had the option of buying direct from the manufacturer, or in a wholesale way through them. Representing certain foodstuffs exclusively in this country they sold both the wholesale and retail trade. In selling the former the goods were shipped direct from the factory, and the financing and the clearance of customs were looked after by the jobber Retailers who bought direct also looked after the financing of shipments, but where purchases were made from warehouse stocks the purchase was merely a wholesale transaction, and the firm making the sale looked after the matter of financing, clearance and delivery.

However, in the real sense of the term a manufacturer's agent does not stock goods. He is merely a part of the selling force of the manufacturer.

Manufacturers' Agents Optimistic Report Increasing Activity in Trade

MANUFACTURERS' agents report a decided improvement in business in the current month. Interviewing a number of them this week a representative of Canadian Grocer was decidedly impressed with the optimistic strain that is uppermost. "We are glad to state that during the past two weeks we have found a decided improvement in general business," remarked one man who carries on extensively a manufacturers' agent business. "Many of our buyers are making inquiries and placing substantial orders for importation from Great Britain and Europe. We have had strongly demonstrated the value of established lines on the market during this trying time. Lines which have held up their quality, and have been obtainable during the war, have been in greater demand than ever. Even with many cheaper and competitive lines offered at cut prices, the trade has demanded lines whose reputation they can rely upon.

"We feel more optimistic to-day than we have felt in some time. The outlook for a record breaking fall business is before us. Our increase on forward sales in lines which we have been booking, has been phenomenal. In one line of which we sold two carloads last year, we have already booked three carloads. Both of these represent the very finest quality of goods.

"Our experience goes to show that this market has demonstrated quality in their food products more than ever, and we believe that more and more quality goods will be demanded."

"Business is certainly picking up," spoke another manufacturers' agent, when approached by Canadian Grocer. "We have noticed a wonderful improvement in the current month, and are confident that the future will show a steady increase. There is a much better feeling among the trade, and less tendency to hold off from purchasing supplies. Our salesmen are all in an optimistic mood and believe that business from now on will display an activity that will be very gratifying. Orders this month have exceeded those of the two preceding months of this year, to an extent that indicates a change of attitude on the part of buyers generally, and we anticipate continued improvement from now on."

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY ELECT NEW OFFICERS

New Westminster, B.C., March 22.—The New Westminster and District Co-operative Society was organized recently in the Labor Temple as an independent unit. New officers were elected and the local co-operative store was purchased outright on a cash basis. The local society will now conduct the co-operative retail business undertaking on its own responsibility.

The officers were elected as follows: President, D. MacDonald; vice-president, T. Smith; secretary-treasurer, F. Brown; chairman of organization, W. A. Bowcott; chairman of educational committee, Mrs. T. A. Barnard; chairman of auditing committee, W. Adams; chairman of social committee, Mrs. H. Edmonds. Steps were taken to secure incorporation.

NEW MANAGER BATTLE CREEK TOASTED CORN FLAKE CO.

Frank Gordon assumes the management of the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., London, Ont., his duties beginning April 1. Mr. Gordon succeeds R. K. McIntosh, who has been manager for a number of years.

Intensive Displays Beat Chain Stores

The Merchant's Individuality is His Most Valuable Asset—Show Goods That the "Chains" Do Not Carry and People Will be Attracted to Your Store

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

HERE is a recent report on what a certain grocer is doing:

A first-class grocer in Ontario has revolutionized his method of display from groceries to fresh fruits and vegetables. His reason for so doing is because, as he sees it, there are so many chain grocery stores that exhibit mostly canned and bottled goods that the individual grocer must, if he wants to attract trade, present something different to the public eye. Therefore, he makes an attractive display of fruits and vegetables in two large windows, and when trade is thus drawn into his store, people find he has a first-class line of other groceries to meet their respective needs. He reports that his business has increased rapidly since the change. He has established a very fine automobile trade. He has requested me to give him numerous display pieces as he can—and I know he will—use them all to good advantage.

That is so precisely in line not only with my observation, as hitherto reported in these columns, but with what the chain managers themselves report, that it comes in pat at this time. The facts are these:

Chain store units are run by managers. Those men are not of a high order on the average—they cannot be or they would not occupy such positions. The units are run on the basis of utmost economy of operation, the manager being always the sole intelligence and often practically the entire force. For this reason, chains avoid fresh fruits and vegetables aside from the staples—oranges and lemons—because the force has no time to care properly for such goods, and they realize fully that perishables improperly handled and raggedly displayed are a source of loss and a detriment to trade.

Here, then, is the preferred opportunity for the individual grocery—just as this grocer has demonstrated. Chains have no individuality—this merchant's individuality is his most valuable asset, even as it is yours if you make it so. So by showing goods attractively that the chain does not show at all, he gets people into his store. Once inside, they find that he has everything the chains have as well as numerous essentials to modern living that the chains have not. Then merchants' personality—character of store and service—get in their work, and they prosper and build business plus good-will.

Character the Chief Asset

That character is our chief asset, all of us know; but how many of us do anything to bring that asset to the direct attention of people not now our customers? How many of us realize that we must pump new blood into our clientele every day, or it will wither up and blow away, leaving us in the discard? And how to pump in the necessary new blood without making needful effort to draw into our stores people who do not know anything much about us?

The most valuable portion of our store is our windows. They cost us more than any other space. Let us use them—consistently, diligently, persistently—not spasmodically, by fits and starts. Then, if we have the other goods that we should have, we shall build our trade.

It costs more for a full-service store to operate than for a unit of a chain. This because the service costs more. Therefore, the individual must and can get more for his goods—but not too much more! Just because your expense is, say, 4 per cent. more than that of the chain, will not justify you in trying to get 20 to 40 per cent. more for the same grade of goods as the chain sells. If that sounds like exaggeration, listen to this:

The chief owner of a chain of seventy stores recently told me that his investigations revealed that certain peas, for example, sold by his stores for 13 cents were sold by individual grocers for 18 cents and what he sells for 15 cents are sold for 25 cents the can. This because such grocers buy without the slightest knowledge of the contents of the cans, under jobbers' private labels or other brands which they locally control or which are locally established in popular demand.

Excessive Difference is Boomerang

The difference between 13 and 18 cents is 27.77 per cent. plus. The difference between 15 and 25 cents is 40 per cent. Such excessive differences do not always occur, but enough of them spread wider than these to make these not unrepresentative, and such glaring variations are not only unjustifiable by any process of reasoning, but are suicidal.

If you were to retail these peas for 14 cents, your price would be 7.14 per cent. higher. Is that not enough in many cases to cover your extra cost and expense? It is. But if in particular cases it be not, then consider 15 cents. That gives you 13 1-3 per cent. more, and, all things considered, this is enough for any efficient grocer. Let me add that he who is not both efficient and diligen is beyond help or hope anyway!

If you retail for 16 cents what th chain unit sells for 15, you have 6.25 p cent. more. If you sell for 17, yo variation is 11.76, and if for 18, it 16.66 per cent. more. If you sell f 18, two for 35, your difference is 14 2 per cent.

True, as you say, "the chain buys quantities, futures at first hands, bu as low as the jobber does;" but these a not always advantages. Often pric decline after the chain has bought, a it loses earnings that way. But, at bes it has only one turn a season or a yea You can work on a much narrower ma gin and win out big on twelve or mo turns.

You have to learn several things: n to buy by label without knowing ea season, what is under the label. Not buy futures nor quantities in excess what you can be sure of selling out thirty days or less. Thus you will g away from customers' dependence some brand instead of on your judgmen You will control your business—and y can thus control it and only thus—b cause your customers will learn that y know what you are selling.

Consider Solomon's Wisdom

Many centuries ago Solomon sai "There is that scattereth and yet i creaseth, and there is that withholde more than is meet but it tendeth poverty." That means if you price yo merchandise right, it will move and y will "increase" in riches; if you pri it too high, thus "withholding more th is meet" (or suitable), you will not se your goods and will head for the di card. And Solomon is as good a gui now as ever before!

You must and you can get a modera percentage more than the chain sto Your customers, who prefer to deal yo way, will gladly pay this differenc More is not justified and, as the hous wife eats the contents of the can—n the label—be sure she knows what s is getting. So do not get too much—d not rest in the easy confidence that t seller is giving you what is best for yo See what is inside the can—KNOW— and go ahead with your eyes open.

On this basis you can do as this ma does—grow in volume and earnin despite the chain stores.

The other side is serious, more so tha you realize. Here is an instance:

There is a large producer of fruit wh

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THERE are few price changes recorded in the markets, and these are generally of a minor nature. The situation continues to show an improvement and many of the most important commodities have a firmer tone with tendencies to swing upward. Buying, however, although showing a better movement is still confined to the hand-to-mouth basis.

During the week under review many developments of interest have occurred in the raw sugar markets. As we went to press last week the Cuban Sugar Finance Committee advanced raws to 5¼ cents c.i.f. Large transactions have transpired at full price. Porto Ricos, Phillippines and full duty-paying sugars sold at full parity of 6.27c. During the week there appears to be an increased demand in the United Kingdom and raws have advanced 7½d. per cwt. and refined 3d. per cwt. All American refiners advanced their prices to 8¼ cents New York basis.

The advance expected by the trade on Canadian refined sugar did not materialize, but the market continues very strong in view of the above conditions on the raws.

The tea market continues in a strong position; this is particularly marked on all grades of Ceylon which have shown another advance in primary markets. Indias, however, are somewhat easier, especially on the coarser leaf, of which a very limited quantity is used in Canada.

Cereals generally are holding fairly steady except rolled oats, which have a firmer tendency with indications for a slight advance.

Canned vegetables are holding a strong position and quotations are somewhat higher, particularly on the Montreal market. Canned fruits and jams, although showing a better movement, show a great deal of irregularity in prices among wholesalers.

Shelled French walnuts are very scarce and show no immediate prospects for improvement as importers are not bringing in any large quantities. Prices also in primary markets are higher. Pecan nuts are in a strong position in view of the shortage of the past crop and prices are again moved upward.

Beans have indications for an easier position but quotations generally are unchanged. Rices in primary markets have a firmer tendency and there are indications that prices will be slightly advanced.

In the provision markets the most interesting item at present is the position of eggs. Prices are now lower than they have been since 1916, and with the poor outlook for export business there is a possibility of prices reaching a considerably lower level.

Live hogs are higher with a slight increase in quotations on smoked hams and bacon. Lard and shortening, however, are ruling comparatively easy.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 23.—There are very few changes in the grocery market this week. The sugar market is very strong with higher prices on raws and some speculation as to higher prices on refined. Canned peas are scarce and an advance is quoted by local wholesalers. There is a marked improvement in the demand for spices with a more active market resulting. Rice and tapioca are still in an unsettled condition. There is no change in the coffee or tea market. Coffee is very strong at the present time. Valencia raisins are higher in price and a firmer market is evident for dried apples. There are a number of higher prices in the vegetable market. Onions are higher this week and celery is advanced in price. Apples alone are changed in the fruit market with higher prices asked in view of the small supplies. Fresh strawberries are arriving in larger quantities. Rolled oats are very firm.

Coffee Market Firm

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The coffee market is very firm but there are no changes in spot prices at the present time. The local importers are doing all that can be done to keep the price stable and while the market is firm it is not likely that there will be a change in price, at least in the near future.

Canned Peas Scarce

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—Further changes are recorded this week on canned goods. Canned peas are getting very scarce and an advance of 5 cents is recorded. Standard peas are quoted at from $1.80 to $1.90. Early June peas are quoted at $2 per case. The assortment of these is limited in local warehouses. Canned tomatoes are also advanced five cents on 2½s which are quoted at $1.60 to $1.70.

Raisins Quoted Higher

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS—The whole market on dried fruits is very firm this week, Valencia raisins particularly. Spot stocks are very low and New York is reported to have very little to offer. Prices quoted here, although not advanced are very strong and the cost of replacement has increased three cents per pound in the last ten days. Dried apples are stronger in price and the supplies of cheaper grades that have been on the market are almost gone. The work of the amalgamated companies in holding up the price is beginning to be felt. A supply of Smyrna figs has arrived in Montreal and is now offered on the market.

Higher Prices on Apples

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The orange market remains unchanged this week with a good demand. California blood oranges are offered at $3.75 per half box. Apples are becoming scarce and higher prices are quoted.

Baldwins are now selling at from $8.50 to $9.50 per barrel and Ben Davis at from $7 to $7.50 per barrel. There is an excellent demand for fruit which on account of the season is almost limited to oranges and grapefruit. Some imported strawberries are on the market but the prices are high. The first car of strawberries arrived in Montreal early this week.

Spices in Better Demand

Montreal.

SPICES—The spice market continues to show improvement in the movement of stocks with a better demand throughout the country. Prices on some lines were reduced as quoted in Canadian Grocer last week and in other lines have a firmer tendency. The better movement of spices has resulted in an adjustment of prices on account of the wholesalers being able to buy on the primary market. From now on through the spring a better movement of spices may be expected with a more active market.

Sugar is Very Strong

Montreal.

SUGAR—The sugar market is very firm indeed this week. In fact, there is much discussion as to the probability of higher prices being quoted on refined sugar in the very near future. The Cuban Commission are doing their utmost to force the price of raws up and they have succeeded fairly well. Raw sugar is now costing the Canadian refiners 5¼ cents in Cuba. The initial price laid down by this commission was 4¾ cents. The price of raws has been steadily advancing and there has been no change as yet in the price of refined. From these facts it is easily seen that the sugar market is in a very firm state at the present time.

Some Vegetables Higher

Montreal.

VEGETABLES—A bigger demand for vegetables this week has resulted in higher prices being quoted on nearly all the imported lines. A very notable feature of the vegetable market is the advance in price in onions. For some time there has been little or no demand for onions and they have been selling at very low prices. This week there is an advance of 25 and 50 cents on yellow and red onions. The biggest advance is on yellow onions which are now quoted at $2 a case and is significant of the relatively bigger demand for this class of onion. Red onions are up 25 cents per hundredweight. Spanish onions are a little cheaper, quoted at $5.25 per case. New tomatoes are advanced $1 per crate and are selling at $9.50. The quality of this imported stock is much improved during the week and a better grade is now offered to the trade. California celery is advanced $1.50 per crate and is now quoted at $11. The potato market remains unchanged and quotations remain at the low figure which has held for some time.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 23.—The advance on refined sugar that was expected generally by the trade has not yet materialized, the sugar market continuing to rule strong with a possibility for an advance. Cereals are steady under a quiet demand. Rolled oats have a firmer tendency. Teas and coffees continue in a strong position with prices on teas in primary markets again advanced. Shelled walnuts continue light and there is no immediate relief expected. Some small shipments of walnuts are expected but these were practically all sold before they arrived. Pecans are firmer and higher. Wholesalers' quotations on jams are very irregular, but jams appear to be moving more freely during the past week. Candied peels are lower. Raisins are firm. Madagascar beans are quoted at lower prices, and the bean market generally has an easier feeling.

Madagascar Beans Lower

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is a good active demand for beans, but the market is showing a slightly easier tendency. Madagascar limas are offered at 5¾ cents per pound, which is a considerable reduction. Quotations on Ontario beans are unchanged.

Cereals Are Quiet

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The demand for cereals is a quiet one and has been especially so during the past week. This perhaps is accounted for by the fact that the spring season arriving has a tendency to reduce the consumption. About the only feature of interest is the situation on rolled oats, manufacturers claiming that the present quotation does not cover the cost of raw material and manufacturing. One manufacturer stated that his mill has not been operating for several months and has made more money by remaining closed. Under these conditions the trade can naturally expect firmer prices on rolled oats.

Jam Prices Irregular

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Jam prices continue to show a great deal of irregularity. Strawberry and raspberry 4s are quoted at 75 to 80 cents and 16 ounce jars are offered at $3.60 per dozen. Canned vegetables are steady to firm under an active demand. Canned fruits are dull and little interest is shown in this line, either from a trade or consumer standpoint.

Peels Are Easier

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Peels are easier and lower and in some quarters even a lower price is predicted. Lemon is quoted at 42 cents, orange at 44 cents and citron at 72 cents. Prunes are showing more activity and prices are ruling on a fairly steady basis. Raisins are firm and as stocks are not large it is felt in some quarters that there is likely to be a shortage before the new crop arrives in view of the fact that the United States are also short. Currants are steady to firm.

Honey Market Dull

Toronto.

HONEY.—The honey market is extremely dull. There is practically no demand at present either in a retail or a wholesale way. One dealer gives his opinion for this condition as being the result of too high prices last fall, and consumers generally refuse to pay the prices. Then again at the present time since prices are lower maple syrup and some fresh fruits are making their appearance. There still appears to be quite a quantity of honey in the country that can be purchased at lower prices and there are indications the quotations will even be lower before this past season's crop is moved off.

Shelled Nuts Hold Strong

Toronto.

NUTS.—Shelled walnuts on spot are very scarce and it is doubtful whether a half dozen cases could be picked up on the street. Some shipments are expected to arrive within a few days which will relieve the situation to some extent, but importers are not looking for any great immediate improvement, as no one appears to be buying in any big volume. The condition in primary markets is a strong one, with prices somewhat advanced. Shelled almonds are firm under a fairly strong demand. Peanuts are easier. Pecans are strong at the high price of $1.30 per pound, and an advance over this figure is not unlikely as primary markets are higher. Brazils are easier and lower.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, March 23.—There are a few changes in grocery lines this week. The sugar market is very firm with indications of a moderate advance. The rice market continues in an unsettled condition. There is a much better movement in canned goods. Some brands of marmalade advanced during the week. Dried fruits have shown a decided improvement due largely to reduced prices. Currants are very scarce. Rolled oats market is firmer with every indication of an advance in price. Japan ginger is reported very scarce. French walnuts are firmer and spot stocks are very low. Cocoanuts from the West Indies are arriving on this market. The demand for vegetables shows an improvement.

Coffee Market Quiet

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—There is a big difference in prices quoted on coffees. This is due largely to a quantity of poor beans now offered which do not come up to the standard of quality generally. This market is quiet with very little interest being shown by buyers. An upward tendency is expected early in the spring. Some local firms have made a reduction in prices this week.

Canned Goods in Demand

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The demand for canned vegetables as well as for Canadian and California canned fruit has shown a decided improvement. Canned fish is reported more or less quiet and with Lent practically over the spring demand has not yet been felt. Lower grades of salmon remain very weak. Reports state that the fish canneries at the coast are not figuring on packing any large quantities of pinks or chums this coming year.

Flour Prices Steady

Winnipeg.

FLOUR.—There is no change in the flour situation this week. The demand is only fair. No. 1 Manitoba flour in cotton rags is quoted at $10.85 per barrel. Jute bags, $10.65.

Pineapples Arrive

Winnipeg.

FRUITS.—There is very little change in the fruit market this week and fruit dealers state that business has shown an improvement. Cocoanuts are arriving from the West Indies and are quoted at $1.50 per dozen. Pineapples are arriving by express and are quoted at about $15.00 per case. Louisiana strawberries are expected on this market during the week. Bananas are quoted at 13 cents per lb. Oranges and grapefruit are in good demand. Oranges are quoted at $4.50 to $7.00 per case and grapefruit at $6.50 to $7.25.

EUROPE DRINKS LESS COFFEE

The position of the United States and Europe as coffee consumers is reversed as compared with pre-war times and the consumption this year will show that the United States will have drunk 55 per cent. of the world's total, instead of only 40 per cent. as formerly.

This statement was made in an address before the American Statistical Association at the Machinery Club, New York, recently, summarizing an exhaustive investigation into "The Market for Coffee," which was made by J. C. Luitweiler of the research department, American International Corporation.

YOUR MONEY AND YOUR LIFE

The other day when I reached home
I said unto my wife,
"I know you will be happy dear,
I've just insured my life.
And so, if I should meet my death
To-morrow, let us say,
A check for fifty thousand
Will be yours that very day."
I knew 'twould make her happy,
So I took her by the hand
And waited for her answer—
And she said, "Won't that be grand?"

—Mervin Lane, in "New York Evening Sun."

CANADIAN TRADERS TAKE RISK

Ottawa.—Signature of a trade treaty between Great Britain and Russia does not, it is stated, affect the position of the Dominion government, so far as commercial relations with the Soviet republic are concerned. The stand taken by the Dominion government, as heretofore, is that any Canadian who wishes to trade with Russia may do so, but at his own risk.

By-products from the Soya Bean

By S. G. Bendon

EVERYBODY knows and has heard of the soya bean that is grown in Manchuria. Scientists who ave been working on the analysis of is bean state that there are many -products to be obtained from the me, and these have grown in numbers will be seen by the chart below ken from the Farmers' Bulletin No. 73, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

These various products are hardly believable, yet such is the case, and in this present every-day life we are beginning to realize the caloric value of foods and also the vitamines, and the public is being looked after in a way they hardly realize, and are having pointed out to them the special value of certain food products put up in various forms.

Powdered milk obtained from the soya bean and other vegetable oils is a very fine product, and in time to come will be a great competitor to the natural cow's milk. This powdered milk is already being extensively used and some day we will wake up and find that we can secure milk that will not go sour over night, and will have the same food value, if not better, than the milk we get from the cow.

employs a lot of men. The rise in freight rates and decline in general markets made it impossible for this man to operate on the old scale of wages; but when he sought to cut his employees 25 cents a day, they showed him by actual demonstration that their groceries were costing just what they had cost at the peak. He called a meeting of the local grocers and laid the matter before them. It was a fact—a fact they had hardly realized—that they had not reacted with the declining market, but he showed them that if they did not, they must inevitably lose out. He said he would feel compelled to put in supplies for his men and distribute them at cost, if the grocers did not wake up. He showed them that if he did not, the work would stop, pay would cease altogether. The men would move away, and the grocers would then lose even more.

Recognition of Conditions Pays

The grocers woke up. Prices were readjusted. Work has continued and the community prospers — grocers along with the rest.

But it is not the business of the chain unit in your neighborhood thus to wake you up to right figures, right selling, intelligent displays that win trade and build confidence. No; it is perfectly willing to let you run along and lose out. In fact, nobody but yourself can save your bacon. The story of the Ontario grocer, plus what I have told you of the chain store and the right way to meet it, hint at the way. Now it is up to you.

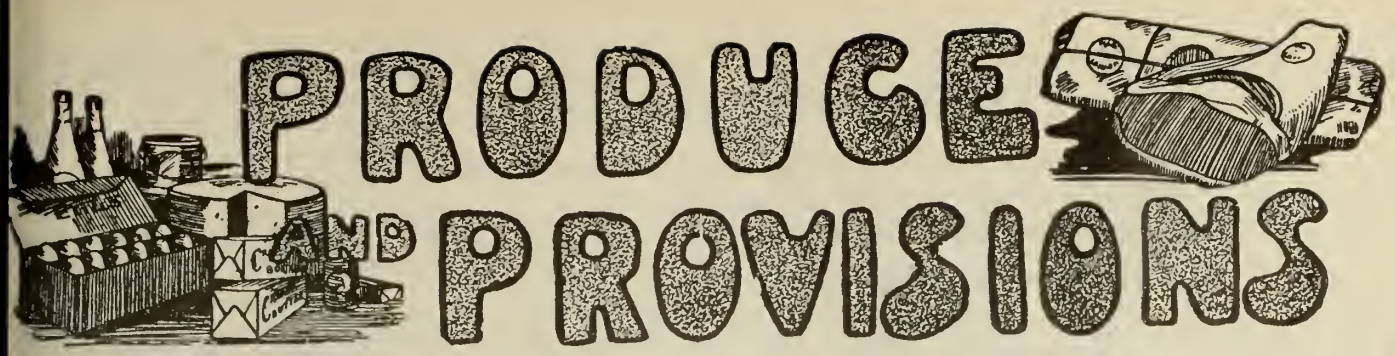
When jam, jelly, marmalade, etc., contain any other ingredient than one fruit (with not more than 10 per cent. of other fruit juice, as provided in section 12) and sugar, the word "Pure" or "Genuine" is forbidden to be used as descriptive of such jam, jelly, etc. For example, a jam made from apples, strawberries and sugar may be named Fruit Jam or Blended Jam with or without the words "apple" or "strawberry;" (but if one fruit is named then all the fruits present must be named, in conformity with section 12), but in no case may the words, "Pure" or "Genuine" be used in this class of jams.

The next instalment of these regulations will appear next week.



Bacon Is a Profitable Line— Eliminating Waste in Slicing

B. F. Walsh, Oakville, Ont., Sells Ends of Bacon at Low Figure Per Pound and Makes Price of Best Slices Offset the Loss—A Reputation for Bacon Helps Other Sales.

"I NEVER have any loss on my bacon business," remarked B. H. Walsh, grocer in Oakville, Ont., to representative of Canadian Grocer the her day. "On an average I sell twelve cks and twelve sides each week, and the winter months my sales of cooked ms are about four each week. Of urse, in the summer months I sell a eat deal more cooked meats, not only n but other lines as well."

Has a Fine New Slicer

About a year ago Mr. Walsh had inalled in his store a fine new slicer. e same stands in a prominent place the store, and Mr. Walsh declares at undoubtedly it has helped a great al in stimulating his bacon sales. "I ndle only a first-class bacon, and only e kind. It has a reputation for qual-, and my customers are well pleased th it. I think it is better to concente on the sale of one bacon rather an handle a number of lines, and I beve that in paying a big price for a gh quality bacon, it is good business. y customers do not object to paying a h price for bacon when they are assred of its high standard. I am payg several cents more for the bacon I ll than I could buy other lines for, but e price is not the important factor."

No Loss in Bacon Trade

Many grocers complain of loss in disposing of ends of bacon sides, but such is not Mr. Walsh's experience. He does not follow the custom of working in the smaller, broken slices with the good ones, but sells the ends in one piece, in a fairly good size. These he sells at 30 cents per pound, and has a number of customers for them. The balance of the bacon is sold at a sufficient price to offset any loss incurred by disposing of the ends at a low figure. This is Mr. Walsh's way of eliminating waste in his bacon trade, and he states that it works out very satisfactorily. Thus only bacon of a high-grade quality is sold, and it is sliced in such an attractive way that it cannot fail to give satisfaction.

Helps Sales of Other Lines

A reputation is established for bacon, and not only are bacon sales stimulated, but sales of other lines are helped. People who come very often to buy only bacon are induced to purchase other goods, and frequently permanent customers are obtained in this way. Bacon can be made a very profitable line, according to Mr. Walsh's contention, and he has proved it by making it so in his trade.

Disposes of Accumulated Stock Of Eggs By Window Display

Saturday's Receipts of Eggs Were Usually Sold to Packers on Monday Until This Firm in Stratford, Ont., Tried a Window Display, Selling 30 Dozen Eggs on a Saturday

MERCHANTS who are so located that their business to a large extent is built up with farm ade have to handle their business difrently than their brother merchants o are situated in the larger centres and draw their trade from the urban population. These merchants are called upon to accept farm produce such as butter and eggs from their farmer customers whether they require such supplies or not. The result is that large stocks of such produce are accumulated for which there is no outlet except to sell the surplus to some packing house. Often it is necessary to sell the surplus supply of eggs at the same price that was paid to the farmer. Sometimes, however, the merchant does make one cent per dozen, but taking year in and year out, with the losses through breakage and dropping of the market, the merchant is in luck if he breaks even.

Sending Eggs to Packers

Such is the reasoning of the Barnsdale Store, Stratford, Ont. For several years past, week in and week out, they would have a surplus of some thirty cases of eggs each week which were turned over to a packing house, occasionally making a profit of one cent a dozen, but more often selling at the same price that was allowed to their customers.

Recently it occurred to Mr. Booth, the manager, that these thirty odd cases of eggs that were turned over each week to the packing houses could be put to better advantage to the business. On a certain week-end one window was neatly trimmed with eggs alone and a card stating that the eggs were received direct from the farm, and all were guaranteed strictly fresh, was placed in a prominent position in the window.

Sold the Entire Supply

At this particular time the firm was paying 34 cents per dozen for eggs so a price card was also placed on the eggs naming 37 cents as the selling price. The result was that on Saturday night practically all their supply of eggs was cleaned up, at a small profit, instead of having thirty cases to turn over to the packing house on Monday morning at no profit at all.

"People were coming here from all over the town with their baskets for eggs," said Mr. Booth, "and rarely was a purchase made of eggs only. Many people bought a list of goods who were not in the habit of buying regularly from us, and practically every sale of eggs meant the sale of another article. It was a wonderful experiment; for years past we had gotten into the rut of selling our surplus supply of eggs to the packing houses and getting no benefit either in advertising or profit. This new plan gives us a small profit but the best feature is the advertisement that costs us nothing."

Fine Variety of Fish Sells In Large Quantities For Good Friday

Good Friday Trade the Heaviest of the Year in the Fish Business—Everybody, Irrespective of Race or Creed Eats Fish on This Day

By D. B. DRYSDALE

GOOD FRIDAY trade is always the heaviest of the year in the fish business in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. In fact it is taken for granted by most wholesalers that everybody, irrespective of race, color or creed, makes it a point to eat fish on this day. According to records this was not always the case, and it is only since the business has been advertised enough to make it known to everybody that it is possible to secure both fresh and frozen fish at this time of the year that wholesalers have needed to make extra preparations as to stocking up and extra help for shipping purposes.

There has never been a greater quantity or better variety of fish available for the Good Friday trade than there is this year.

Large orders were placed for fresh halibut from the Pacific coast and for fresh caught haddock and steak cod from the Atlantic over a month ago to look after this week's trade.

Now the prices on fresh caught haddock and steak cod are fluctuating all the time, and while it may only be a difference of a few cents, nevertheless they are constantly changing. Consequently, when an order is received it may be possible for the wholesaler to give all details as to when he can ship, etc., but not the price on these two lines, for the simple reason that these fish are often on the floor of the warehouse before the price can be figured.

Scarcity of Fresh Halibut

Owing to the bad weather experienced on the Atlantic lately there has been somewhat of a scarcity in these two lines. Fresh caught halibut is being offered at practically the same price as frozen. This may seem a little strange, but when it is taken into consideration the cost of keeping the fish in cold storage for months at a time it is really more profitable for the producer to sell his catch while in its fresh state.

Winter caught whitefish is offered at a price of eleven cents in case lots, and is moving very freely. Owing to the mild winter fishing has been kept up right along in the Northwest territories, with the result that Northwest and winter caught whitefish are very plentiful.

EGGS LOWEST SINCE 1916

Comparative prices on eggs show that eggs are now lower than at any time at this season of the year since the year 1916, when they sold to the trade at 28 cents per dozen.

Smoked hams and bacon, however, show little change during the past three years, but in 1917 and in previous years, comparative prices show that they were considerably lower.

The following table shows the comparative prices on eggs, bacon and hams—Toronto basis—during the last week in March of each year since 1915:

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 23.—The outstanding feature of the produce market this week is the increased demand for meats with the close of the Lenten season and the consequent trength of the market. Hogs are quoted higher, and although here is a very noticeable increase in the demand for smoked meats he only change in the prices quoted is a slight advance in the price n the light weight hams, which are in the greatest demand. Bigger fferings of butter and eggs have resulted in a weaker feeling in oth markets. The supply of eggs is increasing and still lower rices are looked for. The cheese market is very firm by reason of he small spot stocks. There is only a very light offering of fresh illed poultry to meet the demand for Easter, and prices are strong with some higher quotations recorded. The lard market remains n its unsettled condition but there are no changes in quotations. here is a noticeable falling off in the demand for fish. Cooked and arrelled meats are unchanged.

Butter Market Easier

BUTTER.—On account of the fine open eather that has prevailed throughout he country an easier feeling has devel- ed in the market for butter and espe- ally so for undergrade creamery as the ulk of the receipts this week consists f this class of stock. Coupled with this the fact that during the week the re- ipts of butter have greatly increased ver those of last week and are even reater than the receipts of the corre- onding week in the previous year. Al- ough there is an easier feeling in the utter market there is no actual change the price for the finest creamery, ow- g to the fact that stocks of such on ot are light and will no doubt all be anted before the new make commences come forward in quantities sufficient meet the demand of the trade. Prices s quoted below hold this week.

Lower Prices On Eggs

Montreal.

EGGS.—A weak feeling has continued to characterize the local egg situation during the week and prices closed at from 4 to 5 cents per dozen lower than a week ago, which is attributed to the heavy receipts for this period of the year, owing to the fact that production throughout the country was never known to be so large so early in the season. The tone of the market is weak and lower prices are anticipated. Some dealers say that they will not put any into the coolers over 25 cents per dozen. Prices closed this week with quotations as low as 40 cents per dozen. Retail prices, however, seem to hold high and as high as 60 cents per dozen is being asked for strictly fresh eggs.

FRESH MEATS.—The effect of the approaching Easter season and the consequent increase in the demand for fresh meats is further evidenced this week in an increase in the quotations made on live hogs. The advance is from 25 cents to 50 cents per cwt. The market steadily strengthened during last week and the early part of this week until a quotation of $16 per cwt. was reached. The beef market shows more strength for the same reason but it is not as marked as the advance on hogs.

Small Offerings Of Poultry

Montreal.

POULTRY.—Although a bigger demand may be expected for poultry within the few days around the Easter season there is no evidence of a bigger supply offered on the market. The offerings of poultry are very light, particularly of fresh killed poultry. As a result it may be expected that prices will be very strong in view of the demand and the small offerings. Storage stocks will have to meet practically all the demand this season and prices as quoted on this market vary considerably.

Smoked Meats in Demand

Montreal.

SMOKED MEAT.—A good trade has been done in hams and bacon this week and prospects for next week's business are even better on account of the Easter season and the passing of Lent. In consequence the market has been fairly active with a firm undertone. The demand has been principally for small hams ranging from 8 to 10 pounds and supplies of such were none too large in some cases. An advance of 2 cents per pound has resulted in some instances and sales were made at from 35 to 37 cents per pound. As the offerings of the heavier grades are ample to meet requirements, prices ruled unchanged this week. The movement of bacon has been large and prices are maintained at from 51 to 53 cents per pound for Windsor selected boneless and breakfast grades are selling at from 38 to 44 cents per pound.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 23.—Business in the produce and provision markets for the Easter trade is shaping up well and indications point to it being equally as good as in other years. Smoked hams have been especially active and prices are slightly higher. A few minor price changes are noted on bacon and barrel meats. Although the butter market is quiet, values are ruling strong and will probably continue so until grass butter arrives. Cheese market is strong with slightly higher prices in some quarters. Eggs are easier and lower. Lard market is easy and prices unchanged. Shortening quotations are lower with the situation an easy one. Live hogs are unsettled under light receipts with packers endeavoring to bring down prices. Some fresh pork cuts are higher. Spring lambs are in a strong demand for the Easter trade but the quantities offeed are very limited. Fresh poultry are rather scarce and the greater portion of the demand is being filled from storage supplies.

Butter Quiet But Strong

Toronto.

BUTTER—The butter market is fairly quiet and little speculative buying is manifest. Dealers are not buying any quantity except for immediate requirements. Quotations, however, are holding strong. No. 1 creamery is quoted at 60 to 64 cents per pound. Imported butter such as American, New Zealand, Danish and Argentine are offered on this market, but these butters generally grade No. 2. Quotations on No. 2 grade range from 53 cents to 56 cents per pound.

Eggs Are Easier and Lower

Toronto.

EGGS—The egg market is easier and prices are further reduced. As to future market conditions opinions differ. Some dealers state that the prices will have to reach considerably lower levels than at present, while others state that when the Easter demand is over the market will be on a steadier basis as at that time storage operations will commence in earnest. Prospects for export, however, are not very bright, which is altogether different from last year when price: ranged from 45 to 48 cents per dozen for storage purposes. At present prices for Canadian eggs in the United Kingdom is 39 cents c.i.f., which is equal to 28 cents Canadian seaboard. When the cost of packing, shrinkage and transportation is considered there is little likelihood of much export business unless values to the producer are considerably less than at the present time.

Pork Cuts Quoted Higher

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS—Live hog receipts at the Union Stock Yards were very light during the week and as a result packers were unable to get prices down to a lower basis. The market is in an unsettled condition with packers continuing to endeavor to reduce prices. In view of the higher prices on hogs the past two weeks, pork cuts are up one to two cents per pound. Beef, calves and mutton are holding fairly steady. Spring lambs are in strong demand for the Easter trade, but the offerings are very limited.

Fish Market Active

Toronto.

FISH—Fish dealers report an active demand for all varieties of fish for Good Friday business, and the Lenten season has every indication of closing with business as good as in other years in spite of the unfavorable weather which has prevailed practically throughout the winter season. Fresh caught halibut is arriving freely and is quoted at 23 cents to 24 cents per pound. Other quotations are holding steady and unchanged.

DAVIES

Pork and Beans

With Tomato Sauce

Dealers will be glad to know that we are again able to offer them our high grade Canned Pork and Beans, and the same will be obtainable with Tomato Sauce in sizes 1's, 2's and 3's, with a limited quantity of size 2's with plain sauce. These Beans are quite in keeping with our former high grade standard, which met with such a favorable reception last Fall.

It is unfortunate that, owing to our inability to secure suitable containers, just at present we cannot supply size 1½. This is particularly regrettable, since the 16-ounce tin is the one which comes in for the greatest demand.

The prices for Davies Pork and Beans, 1's, 2's and 3's, are very reasonable, and we solicit your enquiries for prices and particulars.

How to Fill in Your Income Tax Report

That vexing question answered.

That difficult problem solved.

Every point you need to know about your Income Tax report carefully analyzed and reported on fully.

Now all you've got to do is to sit down for a few minutes and read an article in next week's issue of CANADIAN GROCER.

G. G. Yorke, on the staff of Canadian Grocer, helped retail grocers last year to fill out more than sixty Income Tax forms. He is an expert and knows the meaning and the answer and information expected. Every question you need to know will be answered, so that Grocers who know the amount of stock carried and their total sales and their expenses will be able to figure what tax should be paid.

You have been in doubt about what expenses you could include in this report. A year ago Mr. Yorke found many merchants did not include everything to which they were entitled. They paid taxes on income which was not really income, and they lost money. This article, if you read it, will not only save that money for you, but will pay for the subscription to Canadian Grocer many times over.

A practical article in every way—one that you can put to work right in your business. This is just one of the features of the next issue of Canadian Grocer that will make it worth the price of a year's subscription to you.

Why not save yourself all the trouble and worry that you had one year ago? Sit down and read this article, and prove for yourself the practical value of this income-tax article written by an expert, one who has been through the job himself. Watch for it in next week's issue.

Replace Potatoes by Oriole Rice

Few grocers care to stock up potatoes.

Potatoes are perishable and the profit made on them barely offsets the loss.

Why not urge your customers to use "Oriole" Rice as a substitute for potatoes?

Rice is cheaper and much more nutritious than potatoes and will keep indefinitely—there is no loss.

NO EXPORT BUSINESS FOR EGGS

The outlook for exporting of eggs to the United Kingdom is not very bright at present which is altogether different from conditions last year. The best price obtainable in the United Kingdom at present is 39 cents c.i.f. the United Kingdom which is equivalent to 28 cents Canadian seaboard. When costs of candling, packing, transportation, etc., are considered it will be seen that there is not much prospect of any business being done unless prices in Canada to the producer are much lower than today. Some shippers state that eggs will need to be reduced to at least 25 cents per dozen at country points before export business is at all profitable.

RAISINS LIKELY TO BE SCARCE

Raisins in primary markets have been practically cleaned up since the first of the year. Stocks in Canada are not large owing to buyers cutting down their purchases on the last season's crop. Then again, United States buyers have been operating on the Canadian market, purchasing all available supplies. Heavy shipments have already been re-shipped to the United States, which, taken out of the small Canadian, supplies leaves stocks here at very low ebb, with indications for a shortage before the new crop arrives.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

MANY opportunities are offered through the advertising columns of CANADIAN GROCER. Every week some original ideas are contained in the advertisements that may open the way to you for bigger profits.

This Company is in no way connected with any Sales Book organization or combine.

Our position is entirely independent of any other firm, and selling prices are based only on cost of production.

Our prices are the lowest on the market for a quality product, and at present are reduced 25% to 35% below March 1st prices.

By operating independently, we are in position to deal with our customers and friends on a basis of pricing that will satisfy us both, and we trust our independent position will be appreciated as being in favor of the buyers.

Yours very truly,

Behind every Borden Milk Product there stands a sixty-five year old "high standard quality" reputation.

It is this old established prestige, earned through strict adherence to the Gail Borden exacting standard of purity and quality, that has won the confidence of the buying public in every milk product bearing the name Borden's and has made them so easy to sell.

Then, too, Borden's intensive national advertising is constantly at work telling Canadians (many of them customers in your locality) about the convenience and wholesomeness of Borden Milk Products and showing them in concrete ways why they are more economical.

Good profits are assured when you sell Borden's lines—so feature them in your displays—it pays.

You Cannot Taste Color

FROM our Inland waters 7,000 tons of white fish is taken annually and sold fresh or frozen. It could not sell better if it were Red or Pink, yet it has not the dainty flavor of Pink Salmon, nor can it be served in so many agreeable ways.

Take a can of Cascade and serve as under and you will enjoy it.

Salmon Turnovers

Make a light dough as for shortcake. Take one can of salmon and remove liquid and bones, one can of green peas. Roll out a disk of dough about six inches across. Fill with one tablespoonful of salmon, one tablespoonful of peas, a little salt and pepper, bits of butter. Moisten the edges with cold water, turn over, and press together with a fork. Bake in moderate oven until delicate brown.

Show this one to the ladies. They are always interested in good food well served. And keep a good stock of Cascade on hand, it's the Best.

No effort is required in selling KLIM because most women are now familiar with KLIM and its many advantages. It has become a standard household necessity and an article for which every grocer finds a ready sale.

KLIM comes in three sizes—half pound, one pound and ten pound tins, a size for every requirement.

Make a counter display of the three sizes and you will be surprised how rapidly KLIM will move.

PAUL FINDLAY, a retired grocer of thirty-six years' experience, has journeyed 50,000 miles, meeting grocers in all parts of the United States and Canada. As our Retail Merchandiser, his advice is nationally respected.

How to Retail Fruit Efficiently

"Efficiently"

That's Why it is Worth Reading

WHEN Sol Westerfeld heard Paul Findlay, our retail merchandiser, tell grocers how to retail fruits efficiently, he was enthusiastic in praise. "An unselfish talk," he declared.

And probably that's why hundreds of grocers have written us for a copy of his brass-tacks talk.

So we've printed it in the form of this booklet, giving his blackboard figures and his plain talk, without frills or boosts. This helpful book is free. Just ask the C. F. G. E.—today.

What Findlay Tells You

Such interesting questions answered:
What is the commonest mistake most retailers make?
Why are seven of every ten retailers insolvent without knowing it?
What does the average retailer earn per year?
Why does it sometimes pay to lose on certain commodities?
Why do you lose by over-pricing other commodities?
Valuable hints given of the way successful grocers run fruit business to pay well. Topics included: How to buy; how to display; what is margin; what is profit; what is turnover; and other important subjects.

This is just one of the ways we help grocers who "ask the C. F. G. E." And there are many other ways, as well.

How We Help You—

For instance, we send men from town to town every month to help retailers make profit-winning fruit displays in their windows. Such displays are the life of a fruit business.

Aren't you thinking of making your displays do more work for you? Write for our free sets of Sunkist cards, "strings" and banners for your counters and windows. You'll find it worth while.

Or perhaps you are planning to advertise in local papers or neighborhood movies. We'll gladly send you free "cuts"—you can use them also on price-lists and letterheads—and free Sunkist lantern-slides with your name in striking colors.

—Why We Do It

The C. F. G. E. is a co-operative agency. Years ago it was formed by thousands of California orange and lemon growers to sell their fruit at actual cost. And now a fraction of a penny per dozen is given by these growers to create a fund for helping merchants handle these fruits at a safe profit. Wise co-operation—nothing else.

To bring you more profit—and to lessen your selling costs—our Dealer Service Department works always for your benefit. And we're ready to help you as much as you'll allow—so it's entirely up to you! Call on us any time. Write us today or mail the coupon.

Clerk B has made a cash sale for $1.00

The indication at the top of an up-to-date National Cash Register gives publicity to every transaction. The merchant, the clerk, and the customer see this record.

This prevents mistakes in price and in making change. It removes temptation.

The record shown in the indication is printed on a strip of paper which is locked up inside the register. This record also is printed on a receipt for the customer.

The amounts indicated and printed are added into totals which show, at a glance, (1) the total business handled by each clerk, and (2) the total of each kind of transaction.

This assures the merchant that every sale is handled accurately. It also assures him of accurate records which give him control of his business.

This is the indication. "Ca" shows it was a cash sale. "B" is the clerk's initial. "1.00" is the price.

Charge sales are indicated by "Ch," received on account by "Rc," and paid out transactions by "Pd."

The same indication shows on both front and back of the register.

We make cash registers for every line of business

Everybody Likes Tetley's

IN a country where the estimated tea consumption is in the neighborhood of 5 pounds per person, you have tea drinkers who know good tea. They drink enough of it to know good tea, too!

And it is here that Tetley's is daily growing more popular, and the demand for both Tetley's Sunflower Tea and Golden Tips is steadily increasing. We are meeting this demand adequately by keeping a big supply of Tetley's Tea on hand all the time, so that we can fill your orders promptly.

The excellent cup quality of Tetley's is the result of a blending knowledge that has been gained over a period of 100 years. The clear deep color, and full-bodied fragrance are unexcelled.

Your order will be given immediate attention.

Brands of Quality

VICHY WATER CANNED GOODS

The products imported from France which we offer to the retail trade of Canada enjoy a universal reputation which should make their sale easy, because products of uniform quality give the most satisfaction to the client both from the standpoint of quality and price.

Petits Pois "Soleil."—The favorite brand of Canadians for nearly a quarter of a century, needs no further recommendation, for nearly everybody knows and appreciate these delicious green peas, fresh, tender, juicy.
Qualities: Sur-Extra Fins, Extra-Fins, Tres Fins, Fins, Mi-Fins, Moyens Nos. 1, 2, 3.

Mushrooms Feyret & Pinsan.—L. Bon Preignac-Bordeaux, France. A choice brand, a delicious vegetable highly appreciated and which holds a place of honor on the best served tables.
Qualities: Champignons Gallipedes, Choix, 1er Choix, Extra, Sur-Extra.

Pate de Foie Gras Feyret & Pinsan.—This constitutes one of the choicest brands of Pate de Foie Gras "cuisines" ready to serve that delight the connoisseurs, and the sale of which attracts to the merchant the cream of the clientele. It is a most popular brand.

Eau de Vichy des Sources Chateau-Robert of St. Yorre.—Natural, sterilized, cold, and highly carbonated, this water has been approved by the Academie de Medicine de Paris and indicated for the home treatment of diseases of the liver, stomach, kidneys, intestines; also in Diabetes, Gravel, Gout, Rheumatism.

Vichy Lemon Lemonade: "La Savoureuse."—The most pleasant of Vichy lemonades, containing the Natural Carbonic and Gas from the springs of Chateau-Robert at St. Yorre, and no artificial products whatever.

The above goods are of superior quality and do not cost any more than ordinary goods.

Well-to-do people prefer Red Rose because, although it costs a little more per pound than other teas, its extra flavor and quality are worth the difference.

Economical people prefer Red Rose because it goes farther, being chiefly Assam and therefore extra strong.

Blooded - Stock

If you were buying a horse and he was just a horse you would have to take for granted the things the owner said, and then wait for experience to show if he had spoken the truth.

But if you bought a horse of blooded-stock that had a pedigree, you would not need to take the man's word for it. The pedigree would show his ancestry and race and give you an idea of the animal's capacity for speed and endurance.

It's the same in buying advertising space. Some publications sell "just a horse" and you have to take their circulation statement with a pinch of salt.

The Canadian Grocer is blooded-stock. An A. B. C. statement is the pedigree that tells you what to expect in the way of speed and endurance.

Keen's Oxford BLUE

THE widespread fame of this All-British Blue is tangible evidence of that quality which made the name "Keen's" the merit mark of a Blue that's always up to expectations.

Are you fully stocked to meet the Spring Demand. The housewife is ready to buy "NOW."

Advance in Sugar is Now in Effect

Increase of 50 Cents Per Hundred on the Refined is Not a Surprise—An Additional Jump is Not Unlikely in the Next Ten Days—A Review of the Situation

ANNOUNCEMENT of 50 cents per hundred advance on refined sugar which took effect on Thursday last, bringing the price to $11.00 per hundred, Montreal basis, was not a surprise to the trade, as an increase has been generally expected for some time past. Another advance of probably a like amount is not unlikely, and will possibly take effect within the next ten days.

In reviewing the raw sugar market since the first of the year, one finds Cuban raws on the first of January quoted at 4¾ cents per pound c. & f., or 5.39 cents duty paid, New York. The market was weak, and prices were steadily declining well into the middle of February when they reached the low level of 3½ cents c. & f., or 4.52 cents duty paid, New York. At this time rumors were afloat of the formation of a sugar finance committee to handle the balance of the season's Cuban crop. This had the effect of stimulating sales and strengthening the market, and heavy transactions transpired both to Europe, United States and Canada at 4¾ cents c. & f., or 5.77 cents, duty paid.

Heavy Buying in Canada

The sugar finance committee was finally appointed at the end of February, and under this stimulus heavy buying continued at prices around 4¾ and 4⅞ cents c. & f. About March 10, the sugar committee set the price of Cuban raws at 5 cents c. & f. One week later the commission advanced the price to 5¼ cents c. & f., which figures duty paid 6.27 New York basis, at which figure the market still holds firm, with a fairly active buying movement.

In comparing prices on raw and refined sugar in Canada for the last week in March of each year since 1916, one is inclined to ask why is there such a big increase in the spread between the cost of raws on the New York market and the wholesale price of Canadian refined in the year 1921 as compared with the spread in the years 1916 to 1920?

Advance in Freight Rates.

The answer, perhaps, is obvious. The greatest part of this increase is accounted for by the fact that since July, 1920, freight rates have advanced 40 per cent. and, although labor was high during the years 1916 to 1918, it was in the year 1919 that labor reached the peak. In March, 1920, raw sugar was quoted on the New York market at 13.54 cents per pound, and at the same date refined sugar in Canada was quoted at $16.50 per hundred. At this time sugar prices in Canada were under the control of the Board of Commerce, and it was shortly after this date that the refiners made application to the board to be permitted to advance the price of sugar, claiming that they were operating at a loss due to the increasing cost of raws and operating expenses. In July of the same year freight rates were advanced 40 per cent., which, together with the increased cost of labor and the exchange, practically takes care of the increase in the spread between the cost of raws and refined since the year 1916.

COMPARISON OF SUGAR PRICES 1916-1920

IT is interesting to note the comparison in the price of raw sugar and the wholesale price of refined sugar in Canada. The following table gives the price of Cuban raw sugar on basis of duty paid New York during the last week in the month of March of each year, together with the wholesale price of granulated sugar in Canada for the same period, Montreal basis:

1916		1917		1918
Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.	Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.	Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.
5.77	7.35	5.52	7.85	6.005	8.40
1919		1920		1921
Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.	Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.	Raw Per lb.	Refined Per lb.

Alternative Views on Turnover Tax

Finance Minister Wants Views of Retail Merchants—Intelligent Consideration Needed—One Class of Merchants Prefers Turnover Tax in Its Broadest Application While Others Propose Adjustments

Written for Canadian Grocer by Austin Campbell, of The Financial Post

THOSE who keep touch on the pulse of trade observe two distinct lines of thought among retailers on the question of the Turnover Tax.

Some stand emphatically for the scheme in its broadest application—these are in the minority. Others, while advocating the tax in theory, question its blanket application and propose adjustments. The matter is vital—it must receive the intelligent thought of all merchants. Its far-reaching effects, its potentiality for benefit and its possibilities for harm imperatively demand that it be studied in detail by every man, who, by its enactment, will become virtually a "collector of Government revenue and temporary custodian of public funds."

The problem intimately concerns every merchant, big and little, in Canada. The huge departmental store and the little "corner grocery" alike will be affected. Only in so far as each merchant studies the incidence of this proposed method of taxation to his own particular business—and places the fruit and conclusions of such study before the Minister of Finance — can an efficient, working system be evolved and a tax applied that will be effective and equitable.

The Merchant's Responsibility

Political matters are too often ignored —at least so far as individual action is concerned — this question is going to touch every merchant intimately. Under the first—an industry wide application of the system—every merchant will have to keep his books in perfect order and submit to regular inspection; he will have to figure the percentage amount of the tax into his overhead and distribute the same, through his selling price, over the range of his goods. The question before the tax department to-day is, "What do the retailers think?" Sir Henry Drayton is frankly willing to be shown; it is up to us as merchants and business men to produce the facts.

The Retailer Collects

More specifically the questions, from the retail standpoint, are, shall the retailer collect and pay the tax? or shall it be collected by the manufacturer or wholesaler? Herein the wholesaler joins the retailer by asserting that the most effective and economical method is to collect the tax from the manufacturer.

If, therefore, as its supporters claim, in the Turnover Tax lies the solution of the national fiscal policy, then, from the retailer's viewpoint, the solution of the Turnover Tax lies in collecting it at "the source."

While some retailers express a willingness to do the full work of collecting, a strong concordance of opinion favors the other plan. In all the letters which have reached Canadian Grocer, none sought exemption from payment, though the majority advocated the finding of a plan which would relieve the retailer and the Government from the hazard and expense of collection. A composite expression of these views may be summed up as follows:

"Let the manufacturer and wholesaler add to their invoices a high enough percentage to meet the requirements of Government revenue and we will gladly pay it. To impose an army of collectors and assessors over the large number of widely distributed retail stores in Canada would be folly. The evasion which occurred under the operation of the Luxury Tax, and the deliberate falsification of returns by some merchants, is undeniable evidence of the impracticability of any retail collecting system. We approve of the Turnover Tax —the consumer must pay it, but the tax must be collected at the source."

This is not holding the umbrella over one class while exposing another. The contention is based on practical reasons —economy of collection and economy of price. It would be almost impossible, some authorities claim, to spread a small tax equally over a wide range of merchandise. Either certain goods must be sold below cost and others overloaded with charges to equalize the loss, or the price of all goods — notably the small cheap articles—must be increased more than the actual amount of the tax. Both conditions bear unfavorably on the ultimate consumer.

The Manufacturer Collects

The second plan seems to be the only proposition that can be heartily endorsed by the retail trade. It has in fact the support of many manufacturers, and the unofficial approbation of the experts in the taxation department of the Federal Government. It allows for the exemption of certain specific commodities, such as all unmanufactured foods, and calls for a larger rate of percentage when passing from the hands of the producer, either to the retail consumer or to the retail trade. Broadly speaking, though with adaptations to particular circumstances, the scheme rests on the following conditions:

(1) All Canadian raw material products as originally derived from farm, fisheries, forest and mine, shall be exempt.
(2) A tax shall be collected at the first process from raw material to consumable product and at each subsequent sale for re-manufacture and upon final sale either to retail consumer or retail dealer.
(3) All importations shall bear tax.
(4) No wholesale or retail sale for consumption shall be taxable.

It is evident at once that a vast amount of Government work will thus be eliminated. The task of collecting and checking returns over all the retail stores in Canada would be saved. Granted that the law practically compels the retailer to keep books, and that Government systems already cover the country to collect Income and Business Profits Tax, these offer no adequate reasons why an expensive and burdensome system need be continued if a simpler and more economical method can be employed.

If an adequate revenue can be raised by a reasonable tax at a few sources, it would obviously be folly to impose on the country a wide system of collection. That this can be done by a moderate extension of the present Sales Tax is obvious, inasmuch as it has been previously shown in these columns that, of an estimated requirement from a Turnover Tax of $150,000,000, the Sales Tax is at present providing approximately $100,000,000.

Apply It Gradually

Retailers have accordingly a sound basis for their contentions and are supported therein by the members of the wholesale trade in Canada, who, though recognizing the difficulties, are: "Of the opinion that such Sales Tax could be easiest collected at the fountain head, namely, from manufacturers, and on importations."

The adoption of this plan would permit, if required, a gradual extension of the Sales Tax, until its application was

C.M.A. MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS RE TAXATION

After making a study of various forms of taxation a committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has made the following recommendations to the Dominion Government:

"First: That the Business Profits War Tax Act shall not be re-enacted.

"Second: That the Income War Tax Act as regards corporations shall be repealed.

"Third: That the Sales Tax now in effect in Canada be amended and extended sufficiently to provide the necessary revenue."

producing the required revenue. Retailers have long and bitter memory of the suddenly imposed Luxury Tax, and the confusion resulting from the many revisions and ever-changing exemptions which that hastily conceived measure required.

Sound, conservative business judgment argues that progress should be made slowly and safely in a measure so widely affecting the country. Business can ill withstand any more jolts or disruptions. Radical changes should be undertaken with caution and when, as in the application of this tax, such changes can be brought about gradually.

There never was a question that had only one viewpoint. The retailer comes in for some criticisms and suggestions from those who believe that a Turnover Tax should be applied broadly.

These men point out that the retailer has apparently overlooked the fact that by paying the tax in advance, on his invoices to the manufacturer or through the wholesaler, he is tying up an additional amount of his capital. This they claim would be a serious matter for many small dealers and might even eliminate a number of them. The fact has to be admitted, even though the extra amount would not in any probability exceed 5 per cent., and might easily be less.

Obviously therefore, to protect themselves, retailers must not only prepare to carry this additional capital charge, but they must not neglect to include it as a direct cost of commodities and figure their profit percentage accordingly. This warning will not be needed by the more methodical and established merchants, though, until the Government required that proper records be maintained, it was a sad but actual fact that few retailers were accurately aware of their total costs of operation.

Seizing upon this idea, the critics further support their claims by asserting that most retail merchants protested when compelled to keep a set of books, but that their doing so resulted in greater satisfaction and profits to themselves. The point is well taken, but the inference that limiting this new tax to the manufacturers would cause the retailers to neglect bookkeeping is unsound. The law still exists and must be complied with, and inasmuch as the application of the tax to the retailer would necessitate even more book work, the latter, who very often does all this work himself, may well be pardoned if he seeks to avoid the extra labor.

Considering all the above viewpoints it is clear that the conference at the end of this month will have to make a decision from out of a multitude of varying counsel. The unsatisfactory experience with the Luxury Tax and the great expense of collecting the Business Profits Tax will, however, have a strong influence with the Finance Department, urging them to adopt whatever system promises a maximum of revenue from a minimum number of sources.

Seek to Define Correctly The Term "Manufacturer"

Conference of Retail Merchants, Wholesalers And Manufacturers is Held—Present And Proposed Taxation Schemes Are Discussed

TORONTO, March 30.—(Special.)—The joint conference of the Retail Merchants' Association with the Canadian Manufacturers, the Wholesale Grocers' and the Credit Men's Associations, convened in Toronto to-day.

According to the agenda, it is proposed to discuss the definition of the terms: "manufacturer," "wholesaler" and "retailer" as used in the administration of the Special War Revenue Act, 1915, and amendments (tax on sales). The present and proposed forms of Dominion Government taxation will be considered, and finally it is hoped to suggest the best methods to adopt to increase the sale of Canadian made goods so as to overcome the adverse trade balance between Canada and other countries and to provide more work for Canadians.

What Is a Manufacturer?

The exact definition of a manufacturer as distinguished from a wholesaler or a retailer, would, at first thought, occasion little difficulty. Inasmuch, however, as on this definition must rest the taxable liability of many small merchants, such as tailors, tinsmiths, florists, the question requires an exact statement. Under the present definition as set forth by the Finance Department, a manufacturer is one who fabricates anything for sale, and is consequently subject to the sales and manufacturer's tax.

At the advice of their association officials, many of the smaller merchants of the classes as above named, who are primarily retailers, have neglected to make returns of such tax obligations, preferring to await the outcome of the legal actions now in process to test the validity of so wide a classification.

Conference Will Help

It is confidently believed that a conference composed of men of these three branches of industry who have had detailed experience with the varying conditions affecting commerce can be trusted to intelligently decide these intricate classifications. Upon this decision the Finance Department can base the application of the proposed turnover tax with the assurance that it will be received favorably by the business community and will not apply unfairly upon certain branches of trade. Obviously, an individual or small firm who, through a single unit store, sells to the ultimate consumer the products often prepared in the back of the shop, is to all practical intents and purposes a retailer and not a manufacturer. This is one of the problems to be solved by the conference.

Sells From 10 to 12 Cases of Oranges Weekly From Centre Display Table

SELLING from ten to twelve cases of oranges every week during the season that they are most plentiful is the record of Griffith Bros., Weston, Ont. Griffith Bros. sell large quantities of citrus fruits every week, including oranges, grapefruit and lemons. Display is the secret of their heavy sales in these lines. In fact, customers coming into Griffith Bros.' store cannot fail to see before them large quantities of these fruits. In the centre of the store is a large table, specially made to show fruits to advantage.

This table has compartments underneath in which are placed fruits, but in the sections on the top of the table there are always piles of oranges. Mr. Griffith told a representative of Canadian Grocer that he practically sold the same size of an orange all the time. His sales averaged as stated above, but sometimes they totalled more than the dozen cases. His fruit sales are a special feature, but he believes that the display table is the biggest factor in stimulating turnover in oranges, grapefruit and lemons.

"A nice display of oranges will sell them every time," he stated, "and keeping them constantly before the people they buy them as they do staple lines."

The table is an attractive store fixture as well as serving the useful purpose that it does. Entering the door, one walks right into it, and even though customers had no thought of purchasing oranges or grapefruit, they are invited to do so by the display that stares them in the face. The table accounts for sales all the time.

Making Your Income Tax Returns

The Absolute Necessity of Filling in These Papers, Makes it Essential That Every Merchant Should Thoroughly Understand the Procedure—Instructions How to Go About It

Written by G. G. YORKE, of Canadian Grocer staff

IT is important that all should understand there can be no evasion of the income tax law. The income tax papers must be filled in. The tax commissioners have their instructions. It is the desire of Canadian Grocer to aid its readers in their difficulties in this matter. A detailed explanation of the papers to be filled in at this time is therefore interesting.

Obtain three copies of Form T1, fill in on page 1 complete answers to each question except item 6 on list, which a merchant in business on his own account need not fill unless he trades under some name or sign not his own christian and surname.

Now turn to page 4 of returns sheet. You have the option of making a statement of your trading account on your own account sheets or of filling in this page. Whichever way you do it, use the greatest care and regard for accuracy. It is far better to pay a few dollars tax than be pulled up short and fined for making a careless, slipshod or false return.

Total value of merchandise sold during year.

Inventory of stock at cost at beginning of business year.

Add cost of all goods bought for resale, including freight and express charges.

Total.

Total value merchandise in stock at end of business year. Subtract.

Extend this last total to outer column and again subtract, as it will show your gross profits for year 1920. Enter every other kind of income derived from your business, such as cream agency or insurance commission.

Total gross profits.

A knowledge of your total expenses for the following items is absolutely essential. Dig up and total this information:

Wages actually paid to employees, not to proprietor.

Rent of store, stable or garage.

Advertising, depreciation on delivery outfit at 10 per cent.

Horse feed, horse shoeing.

Gasoline, oil and tires for truck.

Cartage when paid to outside firm or teamster.

Telephones, including long-distance calls.

Office supplies, such as books, counter check books, bill heads, files, etc., and postage stamps.

Interest on borrowed capital used in business.

Bank charges and exchange on cheques.

Heating store, lighting store, also water (if any).

Taxes on business premises (not on dwelling).

Business tax. Motor truck license.

Insurance on stock, fixtures, horses, rigs or motor truck.

Depreciation to store equipment and utensils, at 10 per cent.

Cost of wrapping paper, bags and twine, also ice.

Freight and express (outward charges only).

Take a sheet of foolscap paper and make a complete list of the above items. Scrutinize your files and books. Get out the exact cost of each item. Total up the whole expenses cost and subtract from gross profits; this will leave net trading profits for year 1920 and when making the return to your tax commissioner see that a copy of the expenses sheet is securely fastened to the official return sheet, also keep a copy yourself.

Turn Back to Page Two

Leaving page 4 for a few minutes we will turn back to page 2, taking the questions by their own serial number:

No. 1. Many merchants to-day have adopted the sensible plan of paying themselves a wage or salary each month, and paying back into the till for their own groceries, meats, etc. So if you draw a wage from out your business enter total amount here, also any gratuities or pension. If none, say "none."

No. 2. Mark "none" here. This query is for doctors and professional men, not merchants.

No. 3. As you have already shown all your income from commissions on page 4, mark this item "See page 4."

No. 4. Enter here net amount of your trading profits from page 4, which includes the commissions from cream agency, etc.

No. 4. (a) Give actual value of goods drawn from out store and for which you have not paid back cash into the till. See your answer to item No. 1 on this page of return.

No. 5. Enter here the total rent you have collected from your tenants, without deductions, and give location of the properties. If you have none mark "none."

No. 6. Enter the amount of interest or dividends received from investments or stock of Canadian companies. If none, say so, but should you have any and have the share certificates deposited with bank for a loan, deduct carrying charges.

(2) Follow the same course as above in this sub-section. Pay attention to footnote to this item.

No. 7. If you hold any mortgages, notes or debenture bonds or have interest accruing at bank on savings account enter it here.

No. 8. Few merchants hold such positions. There is really no profit and seldom any pay, but should you be deriving any monetary benefits enter here.

No. 9. Income from war bonds, less carrying charges. Make separate entry of 1919 issue, less carrying charges. The latter are not exempt from this tax.

No. 10. Enter here any other source of income, such as "rum running," "bootlegging" or "special license inspector's fees" or any other unlikely occupation for a respectable merchant.

No. 11. Total the column.

Filling Page Three

No. 12. As you have made out a complete list of all your business and trading expenses, it is unnecessary to do more than write "See page 4," or "attached sheet."

No. 13. You have already entered in your expenses account the interest charges on borrowed trading capital, so this item deals only with charges you pay on mortgages on property you own and have rented to a third party, or should you own and not rent your business premises and have money borrowed thereon. Pay attention to footnote to this item.

No. 14. Enter amount of taxes you pay on property you own and have rented to a third party.

(a) Premiums paid for insurance on property you own and have rented to others.

(b) Repairs to your property which you rent to others, but give location and names of persons who received payment for work done.

No. 15. You did not deduct anything for bad debts on page 4 or on attached sheet, so enter here the actual amount you have written off and of which you have ceased to expect payment.

No. 16. It is impossible to get claims accepted for loss on your stock of saleable goods or the house you occupy, but you can claim depreciation on property you own, and have rented to others, i.e. for fair wear and tear, say 5 per cent. on brick and 7½ per cent. on frame properties.

No. 17. Show net income from war bonds which are exempt from income tax, also under No. 8, on page 2, if any.

No. 18. Contributions to patriotic purposes or in cases where you are contributing towards support of a relative unable to keep himself, or his family, state the case fully and give names, which will be verified by the commissioner of taxation.

No. 19. Total the column.

Assets and Liabilities

When you made up your books at the end of your business year, you quite naturally made a record sheet of these items before opening your books for the new year.

Assets (You Own)

1920 stock on hand.
Cash and balance at bank.
Retail accounts on your books.
Customers' notes you hold.
Value of real estate, buildings.
Value of real estate (land).
Trucks, rigs or tools.
Office furniture and fixtures.
Horses.
Other investments and bonds.

Liabilities (You Owe)

Total of your trading debt.
Notes you have to meet.
Loans on property.
Loans for business only.
Unpaid interest.
Other business debts.
Total both columns.

The last, is the question of what you have to pay to the inspector, if anything. You will enter in space for gross income from foot of page 2 the total of that column and, directly below, the total from page 3, then subtract, which will give the net income.

Your Taxable Income

Now subtract $1,000 if you are unmarried or $2,000 if you are married. This gives the taxable part of your net income, but there is yet to be deducted the normal tax of 4 per cent. on interest on your Victory bonds which are not of 1919 issue. You are also instructed to deduct $200 for each of your children under 18 years.

After deducting every one of above items you will pay to inspetcor 4 per cent. on the net amount, up to and including $5,000. Net incomes over $5,000 are subject to super or surtax graduating from 1 per cent. for the first thousand to 65 per cent. on incomes of one million.

It may be best to enclose a cheque for the full amount due to the department. Otherwise there will be interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the unpaid balance.

I have endeavored to make the answers to the various questions so plain that every reader can by careful reading and a little thought fully understand. However, to my old friends in the grocery business whom I helped over the fence last year I would express my regrets that we cannot meet like we then did.

Food Regulations Now in Effect

Important Facts in Connection With the Selling of Foods, With Which Every Grocer Should Be Acquainted—A Careful Perusal is Advised

Glucose Products

1. Starch Sugar (corn sugar, grape sugar) is the solid product made by hydrolyzing starch, or a starch containing substance, until the greater part of the starch is converted into dextrose.

2. Anhydrous Starch Sugar contains not less than ninety-five (95) per cent. of dextrose and not more than eight-tenths (0.8) per cent. of ash.

3. Hydrous Starch Sugar (brewers' sugar, climax sugar, acme sugar, etc.), contains from seventy to eighty (70 to 80) per cent. of dextrose and not more than (2.0) per cent. of ash. When sold under any name which implies a definite percentage of dextrose it must contain at least the stated percentage of that component.

4. Glucose (mixing glucose, confectioners' glucose) is a thick syrupy, nearly colorless, product made by incompletely hydrolyzing starch or starch-containing substance. It varies in density, and is usually sold upon the basis of density.

Upon this basis the maximum of water present is as follows:

For 41° B.	(1.40) at 100 Fah.	22 per cent.
42	(1.41)	20
43	(1.425)	18
44	(1.44)	17

It contains not more than two (2.0) per cent. of ash.

5. Corn Syrup is a mixture of glucose with a sugar syrup (sugar cane syrup, golden syrup, sorghum syrup, maple syrup, sugar syrup, molasses, refiners' syrup, treacle, etc.), with or without the addition of harmless flavoring substances, and contains not more than thirty-five (35) per cent. of water, and not more than three (3) per cent. of ash.

Grain Products

1. Grain is the fully matured, clean, sound, airdry seed of wheat, maize, rice, oats, rye, buckwheat, barley, sorghum, millet or pelt.

2. Meal is the clean, sound product made by grinding grain.

3. Flour is the fine, clean, sound product made by bolting wheat meal, and contains not more than thirteen and one-half (13.5) per cent. of moisture, not less than one and twenty-five one hundredths (1.25) per cent. of organic nitrogen, nor more than two (2) parts per million of nitrite reacting nitrogen, not more than one (1) per cent. of ash, and not more than fifty one-hundredths (0.50) per cent. of fibre.

4. Bleached flour is flour which has undergone processing for the purpose of making it lighter in colour. The residual nitrite reacting nitrogen must not exceed five (5) parts per million. The presence of more than two (2) parts per million of nitrite reacting nitrogen in flour shall be held to be proof of its having been bleached by oxides of nitrogen.

5. Graham Flour is unbolted wheat meal.

6. (a) Ground Gluten is the clean, sound product made from wheat flour, by removal of starch and contains not more than ten per cent. (10) of moisture, and, calculated on the water-free basis, not less than fourteen and two tenths (14.2) per cent. of nitrogen; not more than fifteen (15) per cent. of nitrogen free extract (using protein factor 5.7) and not more than five and five-tenths (.5) per cent. of starch, as determined by the diastase method.

(b) Gluten Flour is the clean, sound product made from wheat flour by the removal of a large part of the starch, and contains not more than ten (10) per cent. of moisture, and, calculated on the water-free basis, not less than seven and one-tenth (7.1) per cent. of nitrogen, not more than fifty-six per cent. (56) of nitrogen free extract (using the protein factor 5.7) and not more than forty-four per cent. (44) of starch, as determined by the diastase method.

(c) Diabetic foods offered for sale as breads, biscuits, cakes or otherwise, must contain not more than half as much glycognic carbohydrates as the normal food of the same class. Any statement on the label or in advertisement which gives the impression that any single food, in unlimited quantity, is suitable for the diabetic patient, shall be held to be false and misleading.

7. Maize Meal, Corn Meal, Indian Meal is meal made from sound maize grain, and contains not more than fourteen (14) per cent. of moisture, not less than one and twelve one-hundredths (1.12) per cent. of organic nitrogen, and not more than one and six-tenths, (1.6) per cent. of ash.

9. Rice is the hulled, or hulled and polished grain of Oryza Sativa.

9. Rice flour is the clean, sound product made by bolting rice meal, and contains not more than fifteen (15) per cent. of moisture, not less than one (1) per cent. or organic nitrogen, and not more than one (1) per cent. of ash.

10. Oatmeal is meal made from hulled oats and contains not more than twelve (12) per cent. of moisture, not more than one and eight-tenths (1.8) per cent. of crude fibre, not less than two (2.00) per cent. of organic nitrogen, and not more than two and two-tenths (2.2) per cent. of ash.

11. Rye Flour is the fine, clean sound product made by bolting rye meal, and contains not more than thirteen and one-half (13.5) per cent. of moisture, not less than one and thirty-six one-hundredths (1.36) per cent. of organic nitrogen, and not more than one and twenty-five one hundredths (1.25) per cent. of ash.

12. Buckwheat flour is bolted buckwheat meal, and contains not more than twelve (12) per cent. of moisture not less than one and twenty-eight one-hundredths (1.28) per cent. of organic nitrogen, and not more than one and seventy-five one-hundredths (1.75) per cent. of ash.

13. Corn starch is the starch obtained from maize or Indian Corn, (Zea Mais) and contains not less than eighty-four (84) per cent. of actual starch, and not more than thirteen (13) per cent. of water, and not more than one (1) per cent. of ash, and not more than two (2) per cent. of substances other than starch and water.

Note 1.—Protoids as employed in the foregoing definitions means the product of multiplying organic nitrogen by 6.35.

Note 2.—Nitrites reacting nitrogen is stated as sadium nitrite (No. 2) which for the purposes of this definition is identical with nitrogen.

Note 3.—The Griess—Ilosvay method of determining nitrite nitrogen, described in Sutton's Volumetric Analysis, 8th Edition, p. 488 (J. & A. Churchill, London) is made official.

Honey

Honey is entirely the product of the work of bees operating upon the Nectar of Flowers, and other saccharine exudations of plants; and contains not more than twenty-five (25) per cent. of water; not more than eight (8) per cent. of Sucrose (Cane Sugar); not more than twenty-five hundredths (0.25) of one per cent. of ash; and not less than sixty (60) per cent. of invert sugar.

Maple Products

Maple Sugar shall be entirely the solid product resulting from the evaporation of maple sap, or of maple syrup, and contains not more than ten (10) per cent. of water; and yield not less than six-tenths (0.6) of one per cent. of ash, reckoned on the dry matter of the sugar when incinerated in such a way as to assure the earths being present as salts and not as oxides, and not less than twelve one-hundredths (0.12) of one per cent. of ash, insoluble in water, employed as described in Bulletin 228 and yielding a lead number not less than one and seven-tenths (1.7) when worked by the Canadian method, nor less than one and two-tenths (1.2) when worked by the Winton method.

Minute traces of substances such as gelatine, albumen, insinglass, etc., which may have been employed as refining or clarifying agents in manufacture, shall not be regarded as adulterants.

Maple Syrup

Maple Syrup shall be syrup made by the evaporation of maple sap, or by the solution of maple concrete in water, and contain not more than thirty-five (35) per cent. of water and an imperial gallon of maple syrup, measured at ordinary temperature of the air, shall weigh not less than thirteen pounds, three ounces. The dry substances of maple sugar shall meet all the above stands for maple sugar.

Meat and Meat Products

1. Meat, flesh, is any clean, sound dressed and properly prepared edible part of animals in good health at the time of slaughter, and if it bears a name descriptive of its kind, composition, or origin, it corresponds thereto. The term "animals" as herein used, includes not only mammals, but fish, fowls, crustaceans, molluscs, and all other animals used as food.

2. Fresh meat is meat from animals recently slaughtered and properly cooled until delivered to the consumer.

3. Cold storage meat is meat from animals recently slaughtered and preserved by refrigeration until delivered to the consumer.

4. Salted, pickled, and smoked meats are unmixed meats preserved by salt, sugar, vinegar, spices, or other harmless substances, or smoke, singly or in combination, whether in bulk or in suitable containers.

Note.—Suitable containers for keeping moist food products such as syrups, honcy, condensed milk, soups, meat extracts, manufactured meats and undried fruits and vegetables, and wrappers in contact with food products, contain on their surfaces in contact with the food product, no lead, antimony, arsenic, zinc, or copper or any compounds thereof or any other poisonous or injurious substances. If the containers are made of tin plate, they are outside soldered, or if soldered inside, the solder used shall consist of pure tin only; and the plate in no place contains less than one-hundred and thirteen (113) milligrams of tin on a piece five (5) centimeters square or one and eight-tenths (1.8) grains on a piece two (2) inches square.

This is equivalent to two (2) pounds of tin per base box; but it must be noted that the regulation requires not only a minimum weight of tin per base box, but that this tin shall be evenly distributed over the surfaces of the plate.

The inner coating of the containers is free from pin holes, blisters and cracks.

If the tin plate is lacquered, the lacquer completely covers the tinned surface within the container and yields to the contents of the container no lead, antimony, arsenic, zinc, or copper, or any compounds thereof, or any other poisonous or injurious substance.

5. Oysters.—Water must not be added directly either as such, or in the form of ice, to shucked oysters.

Manufactured Meats

1. Manufactured meats are meats not included in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of Section A, whether simple or mixed, whole or comminuted in bulk, or in suitable containers, with or without the addition of salt, sugar, vinegar, spices, or other harmless substances, smoke, oils, or rendered fat. If they bear names descriptive of kind, composition or origin, they correspond thereto, and when bearing such descriptive names, if force or flavoring meats are used, the kind and quantity thereof are made known.

2. Sausage, sausage meat, is a comminuted meat from swine or neat cattle, or a mixture of such meats, either fresh, salted, pickled or smoked, with added salt and spices and with or without the addition of edible animal fats, cereals, blood and sugar, or subsequent smoking. It contains no larger amount of water than the meats from which it is prepared contain, when in their fresh condition, and this must not exceed sixty (60) per cent. and not more than five (5) per cent. of its weight of cereals, and if it bears a name descriptive of kind, composition or origin, it corresponds to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., are clean and sound and impart to the content no other substances than salt. Sausage shall not contain any added coloring matter.

3. Blood sausage is sausage to which has been added clean fresh blood from neat cattle or swine in good health at the time of slaughter.

4. Canned meat is the cooked meat of fowls, neat cattle or swine preserved in hermetically sealed packages, and fulfills the conditions defined by the Meat and Canned Foods Act of 1907.

5. Corned or cured meat is meat cured or pickled with dry salt or in brine, with or without the addition of sugar or other harmless substances.

6. Patted meat is comminuted and cooked meat from those parts of the animal ordinarily used for food in the fresh state, with or without salt and spices, and enclosed in suitable containers hermetically sealed.

Cereals, when present, must not exceed five (5) per cent. by weight, unless declared.

7. Meat Loaf is a mixture of comminuted cooked meat, with or without spices, cereals, milk and eggs, and pressed into a loaf. If it bears a descriptive name, it corresponds thereto.

8. Mince, mince meat is a mixture of chopped suet, apple and other fruit, salt and spices, with sugar, syrup or molasses, and with or without vinegar, fresh, concentrated or fermented fruit juices, or spirituous liquors, or cooked comminuted meat.

Meat Extracts, Meat Peptones, Gelatin, Etc.

1. Meat extract is the product obtained by extracting fresh meat with water and concentrating the liquid portion by evaporation after the removal of the fat, and contains not less than seventy-five (75) per cent. of total solids, of which not over twenty-seven (27) per cent. is ash, and not over twelve (12) per cent. is sodium chloride (calculated from the total chlorine present), not over six-tenths (0.6) per cent. is fat and not less than eight (8) per cent. is nitrogen. The nitrogenous compounds contain not less than forty (40) per cent. of meat bases and not less than ten (10) per cent. of kreatin and kreatinin.

2. Fluid meat extract is identical with meat extract except that it is concentrated to a lower degree and contains not more than seventy-five (75) per cent. and not less than fifty (50) per cent. of total solids.

3. Bone extract or stock is the product obtained by extracting clean, fresh, trimmed bones of animals in good health at the time of slaughter, with boiling water and concentrating the liquid portion by evaporation, after removal of the fat, and contains not less than seventy-five (75) per cent. of total solids.

4. Fluid bone extract is identical with bone extract except it is concentrated to a lower degree and contains not more than seventy-five (75) and not less than fifty (50) per cent. of total solids.

5. Meat juice is the fluid portion of muscle fibre, obtained by pressure or otherwise and may be concentrated by evaporation at a temperature below the coagulating point of the soluble proteids. The solids contain not more than fifteen (15) per cent. of ash, not more than two and five-tenths (2.5) per cent. of sodium chloride (calculated from the total chlorine present) not more than four (4) nor less than two (2) per cent. of phosphoric acid (P2O5) not less than twelve (12) per cent. of nitrogen. The nitrogenous bodies contains not less than thirty-five (35) per cent. of coagulable proteins and not more than forty (40) per cent. of meat bases.

6. Peptones are products prepared by the digestion of proteid material by means of enzymes or otherwise, and contain not less than ninety (90) per cent. of proteoses and peptones.

7. Gelatin (edible gelatin) is the purified, dried, inodorous product of the hydrolysis, by treatment with boiling water, of certain tissues, as skin, ligaments, and bones, from sound animals, and contains not more than two (2) per cent. of ash, not less than fifteen (15) per cent. of nitrogen.

Lard

1. Lard is the rendered fat from hogs in good health at the time of slaughter, is clean, free from rancidity and contains necessarily incorporated in the process of rendering, not more than one (1) per cent. of substances other than fatty acids and fat.

2. Leaf Lard is lard rendered at moderately high temperature from the internal fat of the abdomen of the hog, excluding that adherent to the intestines, and has an iodine number not greater than sixty-five (65) and contains not more than one (1) per cent. of substances other than fatty acids and fat.

3. Compound Lard: Lard Compound, etc., is a mixture of animal and vegetable fats and oils. It must be free from rancidity, be made from sound and pure materials, and contain not more than one (1) per cent. of substances other than fatty acids and fat, and at least fifty-one (51) per cent. of actual lard shall be present in the article.

4. Neither Lard, Leaf Lard nor Compound Lard shall contain any added coloring matter.

Metallic Impurities in Food and Drugs

Arsenic (Arsenious acid) as 2 O 3 shall not be present in herein named articles in excess of the following amounts:

Citric Acid	1 part per million
Tartaric Acid	1 part per million
Cream of Tartar	2 parts per million
Bi-Carbonate of Soda	2 parts per million
Phosphoric Acid	5 parts per million
Phosphate of Lime	5 parts per million
Phosphate of Soda	5 parts per million
Boric (Boracic) Acid	4 parts per million
Baking Powders	2 parts per million
Coal Tar Colors	10 parts per million used in food or drugs.

Sales of Green Goods are Immense

How One Firm Built Up a Wonderful Business From a Small Beginning—Methods Used in Increasing Turnover—Another Man Has Novel Idea in Hour Sales

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

FOLLOWING my story of last week, this of another merchant seems to fit in, as showing that no special advantage attaches at the start of most successful grocers—they just plunge in, work in conditions as they find them and WIN because they do work "head, heart and hand!"

This firm has the most wonderful food store I know anywhere. It has been built from the beginning on the under-selling idea. It is told that, in the beginning, when the brothers who constitute the firm were working themselves with their sleeves rolled up, they used to sell vast quantities of standard soap at cost, get 5 cents for each empty box and regard that as their profit. I have not analyzed how that would work out in percentage, but it shows on what plan the business was founded.

They are immensely wealthy now, having acquired a big block of downtown property some three years ago, behind which, across the alley, they have built the model food handling building, half block deep, one block long, in which they operate. I was told that their frontage holdings were much larger than they now occupy, and that they are taking over the rest as leases expire. Though the business has developed into various lines of merchandise besides foods, foods make up the main hold yet and perishables are accorded preferred place always.

How big is the green goods business? I have figures that show that sales ran from $8,500 to $15,000 PER DAY in 1917, when prices were high and everybody buying supplies to hoard; and from $6,000 to $11,000 per day in 1918, when conditions were more nearly normal and the Food Administration had begun to function.

Some Wonderful Sales

Some of the sales figures are illuminating. Once they ripened six cars of bananas and priced them at 19 cents the dozen when their neighbors had to pay 25 cents for their supplies. It is not surprising, therefore, that they sold 400 bunches on that Saturday. Three or four years ago they sold them at 15 cents the Saturday before Easter and disposed of a carload in one day.

Their record sale on oranges is 550 boxes in one day; and sales of 400 boxes are not uncommon. Sales will average around 300 boxes oranges a week.

Some other schemes used are hour sales. These are run through different departments, so timed as not to conflict with each other. These are real leader sales, and the idea is to play even or lose a little money to give the people real bargains. Thus lemons which cost actually 14 cents are sold at two dozen for 25 cents, and 288's oranges have been sold for 9 cents, just returning flat cost. Often 50 cases will move in an hour.

They have a potato sale every Wednesday morning. For this sale they put up 4,000 pecks in advance for their cash-and-carry department and 1,000 more for the delivery end of the business. They do a large telephone business, all phone orders being delivered C.O.D. The 4,000 pecks do not end the quantity—that is just a fair reserve. Two men are busy all the time replenishing packages of vegetables as reserves are depleted.

Only Sound Vegetables, Cleaned, Are Sold

One thing is notable. Not a vegetable is sent out that is not thoroughly washed. It is not merely free from the clinging earth, but is ready for immediate immersion in the cooking water, if you like! Thus a woman who gets a bag of carrots or turnips from this store does not have to sweep out her kitchen when she opens the package. Get the idea?

Do you see any special advantage those "boys" had when they started? A little shack of a store, the smallest stock, three stalwart hustlers inside rushing out goods for cash, determined they would get theirs whether the getting was good or not—that is about the gist of this tale.

If others, why not you?

Well, there is a little cash man in the West, who does similar things. His store is only about 22 by 45. In that space he sells around $125,000 a year, with one man during the week and three others—including two women—on Saturdays. His business is cash-and-carry, so he has certain kinds of problems to solve.

For example, he is naturally busy only in the afternoons. Inasmuch as "wimmin folks" have to market and carry their goods home, they like to do their housework in the forenoon and be free from cares in the afternoon, and then they crowd my friend's store. So he has instituted hour sales. They work fine, evening out his day's work. One thing he has observed that may be useful to you also, that Monday sales have a special advantage.

On Mondays the women are busy washing. If he has any special hour sales that forenoon, the customers are men, sent in by their wives to pick up the special offering. "But a man usually won't stop when he has bought the bargain. He seems to sort of feel ashamed just to buy the special and walk out. So he looks around and picks up many other things. That is one great advantage about Monday hour sales!"

See? This Western boy does not need such an awful lot of coaching himself. He has his eyes open to observe things, and the man who observes and acts with diligence on his observations is hard to crimp up.

Sales Ability Works Anywhere

Grocers are prone to think that a "smart man" who operates in some other town may "get away with it" but that "there ain't no chanst in this dead burg f'r nobody t' do nothin'!" I wonder if such men have ever heard the refrain: "It isn't your town—it's you?" For sure as shootin' it is!

Recently a man sat in a meeting of merchants. The speaker dilated on what a difference might be made in sales of lemons by pricing them at 39, 29 and 19 cents the dozen instead of the orthodox "two f'r nickel" or "three f'r ten."

That man has a large store, in which he does $200,000 a year on the credit-service plan, in addition to $80,000 last year in his self-serve basement store. His 300's lemons were 40 cents the dozen upstairs and 30 cents downstairs. It being a Friday night, he got to thinking how opportune it might be to experiment the very next day. So he did it.

He felt that to make a change upstairs would not be a good test, because then all clerks would call customers' attention to the change in price; but down in the self-serve basement there would be no human element except that of the self-serving buyer. So he changed the sign from 30 to 29 cents next morning downstairs.

Sales normally would have been between eight and nine dozen, but they were 27 dozen that Saturday. The turnover was increased by 300 per cent. Did it pay? Do you need to ask or have me tell you? Does it pay to sell 27 dozen rather than nine dozen — of a semi-perishable commodity that it is well to clean up on Saturday night? But look at the figures!

Say the cost was 22 cents. Then the gross margin on a 30-cent price was 8 cents. Figure nine dozen and the gross earnings that day would be 72 cents. Now take off a cent to 29 cents, allowing a gross of 7 cents the dozen. Figure that on 27 dozen and what do you get? You get $1.89—that's all!

MISPLACED JUSTICE

THE conviction, recently, of a retail merchant who had in his possession some thirty bags of flour, which upon being weighed, were found to contain a less weight than that marked upon the bags, again brings home the injustice of the Act which places the onus upon the retailer for having a short-weight article in his possession or offering for sale such an article.

It is true that the merchant can make a counter-charge against the manufacturer and in practically every case get recompense in a monetary way, but this does not relieve him from the responsibility in the eyes of the public, nor does it retrieve the stain upon his reputation for selling a short-weight article.

In receiving a shipment of goods, merchants cannot weigh every single package; if they did it would simply add another cost to the article, as merchants would be compelled to hire extra help for that purpose. They are, therefore, placed in such a position that they must take the manufacturers' word that packages contain a certain weight, and if weighed by the Food Inspector and found to be short of the required amount, in justice to all concerned the Act should be amended to place the full responsibility upon the manufacturer or packer.

In another instance a retail merchant was convicted and fined for selling butter under weight. In this case the magistrate dismissed the case, and in so doing said: "The man who originally packed this butter is liable, and to fine the retailer would be a persecution." This case, however, was appealed by the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the judge before whom it was tried found that according to the Act the merchant must be convicted. The judge, in giving his decision, said that he agreed with the magistrate in his sympathy for the merchant who had short-weight butter innocently in his possession, but that the Act gave him no discretion and by it he must find the merchant guilty. Another case of misplaced justice.

FOOD CONTROL DOES NOT HELP BUSINESS

AN evidence that government control does not eliminate the troubles of business is manifest in Newfoundland where the control of sugar is still in force. The Food Control Board took charge of the sugar supply in Newfoundland in May, 1920, and placed the wholesale price of sugar at 28¾ cents per pound. Their reason given for so doing was to the effect that one of the sugar importers had contracted for large quantities of sugar at 34 cents per pound and unless control was put on, the public would be compelled to pay around 40 cents per pound.

Newfoundland purchases part of its sugar supply from the United States and some from Canada. Sugar at that time was selling in the United States around 16 cents per pound. To this price must be added duty, $1.65 per hundred; freight and insurance, $1.50, and exchange, which at that time was around 12 per cent., making sugar laid down in Newfoundland at around 21 or 22 cents per pound. In Canada at the beginning of May, 1920, granulated sugar was selling at $19.00, Montreal basis, which could be laid down in Newfoundland at a lower price than named by the Food Control. At the present time the Food Control has named the wholesale price of sugar at 23¾ cents per pound in spite of the fact that refined sugar can be imported into Newfoundland at around 12 cents per pound.

Government control of foodstuffs during the war period and for war purposes was no doubt a good thing, principally because it diverted goods to the quarters most needed. Outside of war purposes, however, government control of foodstuffs is nothing short of Government interference—it interferes with the functioning of the law of supply and demand, the real safety valve against depressed stocks.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

DO NOT overlook the possibilities of selling extras. When you sell crackers the customer may like jam or cheese to go with them. The customer will increase orders when you can show that it is to her advantage to do so.

* * *

MERCHANTS who have marked down their prices, in keeping with declining markets, declare that their volume of turnover has not decreased to any perceptible extent. Careful watching of stocks, too, has resulted in losses being reduced to a minimum.

SELLING, merchants now realize, is going to be a harder job this year than it was last. Orders are not coming in on a silver platter, but many men in the grocery business have shown in the past three months that the people will buy if given the chance.

* * *

EVEN DURING normal times there are few stores that can afford to overlook the value of the price-card. Right now, when cost is a vital factor and the stimulation of business is the principal object in view, no store that is featuring even the slightest of reductions should fail to make use of this powerful leverage, for it will react in a manner out of all proportion to the time and trouble expended.

CURRENT NEWS OF THE WEEK

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News from Readers for This Page

QUEBEC

The Kennedy Manufacturing Co., Montreal, have appointed the Continental Sales Co., Toronto, as their Ontario selling agents.

In the issue of Canadian Grocer of February 4 an item stated that W. J. Lafave, representing the W. G. Patrick & Co., Limited, in Montreal, is calling on the retail grocery trade. This should have read that W. J. Lafave is calling on the wholesale grocery trade in that city.

ONTARIO

R. E. Reid, London, Ont., has sold to Chas. W. Desand.

D. J. Lamb, St. Thomas, Ont., has sold to W. J. Webster.

C. R. Ead, London, Ont., has sold to J. J. Williams.

Gammie Dorsyth has opened a grocery store at Port Credit, Ont.

Gilbert Way, Toronto, has sold to Thos. Crossman.

Hay Bros., Ottawa, Ont., have purchased the business of W. A. Gamble.

R. J. Purcell is managing the new grocery store at 964 St. Clair Avenue, Toronto.

R. Lashbrook, formerly of Clinton, Ont., has opened a store at 354 Silverthorn Avenue, Toronto.

G. A. Baster has opened a grocery store at Kingston Road and Woodbine Avenue, Toronto.

Duke and Alexander have acquired the business at Weston, Ont., formerly owned by C. H. Coombs.

D. Harper has purchased the business at 296 Kingston Road, Toronto, formerly owned by Mrs. Colbous.

H. M. Shaw, Perth, Ont., suffered loss by fire last week, when his grocery store was considerably damaged.

W. A. Chadwick, Chadwick & Wright, manufacturers' agents, Toronto, was in Montreal this week on a business trip.

G. S. Robison, representing the Genesee Pure Food Co., with headquarters in Toronto, has left for a two months' business trip to the Maritime Provinces.

W. G. Hutchinson has purchased the grocery business on Dennison Avenue, Weston, Ont., recently owned by Lee Bros.

John Gibbs, the oldest resident of Parkhill, Ont., passed away last week at the age of 86 years. He had lived in Parkhill 59 years and conducted a dry-goods and grocery business. He is survived by his widow and one son, Charles Gibbs.

F. C. Greer, for many years manager of the produce department of the Canadian Packing Co., Ltd., passed away at his residence in Dovercourt Road, Toronto, after a short illness. Death was due to pneumonia. He is survived by his wife, two sons and a sister.

Several stores were recently entered in Lindsay, Ont., also in Omemee. Elliott's, Baker's and Fisher's grocery stores were burglarized in Lindsay, and the stores of T. J. Parsons, grocer, E. Bradley, grocer, and T. C. Quory, general merchant, in Omemee, were also entered.

The death occurred in Sudbury, Ont., of John Price, of Price & Busby, grocers and butchers. He passed away last week, following an illness of some weeks. He was born in Renfrew county sixty years ago and located in Copper Cliff in 1889, opening a general store. In 1905, A. R. McDonald took over his business, Mr. Price retiring. In 1914 Price & Busby joined forces in the business as now established. The late Mr. Price served two years as councillor. He was twice married. He is survived by his wife and a large family.

Ottawa Grocers Discuss the Proposed Turnover Tax

Appoint Representative to Wait on Government and Place Before the Cabinet the Views of the Grocers Upon This Very Important Question.

Ottawa, Ont., March 28.—(Special.)—The election of officers for the grocers' section of the Ottawa Retail Merchants' Association resulted in A. E. Kelly being chosen as the new president; T. C. Kennedy, first vice-president; Basil Bambrick, second vice-president; C. J. Allen, secretary; Duncan Bell, treasurer; M. Ade and L. A. Johnson, auditors; Alex. Phillips, A. S. Moreland and Tom Bowman, trustees. Nine members were nominated for the positions of the executive for five seats, and the decision will be voted upon at the next meeting.

Proposed Turnover Tax.

Two new members were added to the roll of the association. G. B. Crabtree, retiring president, said it was up to the members to say what they thought of the new proposed turnover tax that might come into force at the present session. The proposal to charge grocers one per cent. on turnover meant from $300 to $3,000 to the grocers of Ottawa, of whom some 150 were connected with the association. Stewart McClenaghan had been appointed to wait upon the Government to place before the Cabinet the views of the grocers upon this very important question.

Collection Costly

Mr. Duncan Bell thought it would be very costly to collect the suggested tax, while Mr. Collins pointed out that the poor man with his small purchases would be forced to pay a deal more than the large buyer, as the idea was to charge the one per cent. on all orders of $1 or under.

T. C. Kennedy, Alex. Phillips, A. E. Kelly and A. S. Moreland were appointed a committee to go to Toronto in connection with the meeting of wholesalers, manufacturers and retailers, fixed for this week, when the proposed turnover tax will be discussed.

Mr. Moreland wants every member to work to secure a great success at the Pure Food Show for 1921.

The association secretary will be paid $150 per annum, this sum being fixed at the meeting.

THEFT OF CONDENSED MILK CONSIGNED TO KING GEORGE

New York, March 28.—According to Detective Fallon, of Hoboken, 129 cases of condensed milk stolen from a Hoboken pier February 8 were consigned to King George V.

No explanation as to why the royal purchaser should come as far as the United States for a supply of condensed milk was forthcoming.

The theft was made public following the arrest of two men in Harlem's "Little Italy," after detectives are stated to have found a quantity of the stolen milk in the basements of their shops.

"Watching the Other Fellow too Much"

Vancouver Grocer in Addressing Grocers' Section of R.M.A. Tells the Members That Rather Than Try to Beat Their Competitors' Prices, Strive to Excel Them in Service

By staff correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, B.C.—(Special.)—"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings."

With the above happy quotation as a text, Ernest McTaggart, whose retailing policies have often been reported in Canadian Grocer, addressed a recent meeting of the grocers' section, R.M.A., in Vancouver. His remarks so well express the opinion of the up-and-doing retailer generally that they will be found extremely interesting.

"The self-serve and cash and carry idea has caused a great amount of needless anxiety to the 'retail grocer' throughout the whole country," said Mr. McTaggart. "The legitimate retailer has felt at times, I think, disposed to give up, with the idea that only a few short years intervened between himself and ruination. I frankly confess that we have all felt very discouraged at times, but that variety of talk, if indulged in continuously, would put us all on the scrap heap.

"Personally, I am of the opinion that we retailers devote altogether too much of our time to watching the other fellow. If we spent as much time in perfecting our service and building up a 'quality' reputation as we do watching our competitors, we would soon notice a difference.

"Henry Johnson, Jr., tells us very plainly that if we would put in some effort in picking out the good points in our successful competitor's store and incorporate them into our own, rather than being continually complaining about his success (for that is exactly what it amounts to), we would be the wiser for it. I must state that sometimes I am ashamed of my kind, when I see such a number of dirty stores. I offer no apology at all for my attitude on this matter. The easiest thing in the conduct of a retail store is to keep it clean. After visiting a store last week and seeing the rubbish and litter around the place, I solemnly pledged myself to try at least to keep my own store clean. Yet grocers, with stores just as repellent, sit back and wonder why business goes by the door. I am not a prophet, nor the son of one, but I think I can see a great reaction coming in favor of the legitimate retail grocer.

"Only in the last issue of Canadian Grocer there are several articles which point specifically to that end. The public wants the best goods obtainable (and they are the cheapest), and service second to none. The public is willing to pay the necessary price to get them.

"Fellow grocers, let us keep our stores clean and up-to-date; let us keep ourselves alert and well posted. We can bank on this fact, that business, like life, is pretty much what we make it. Rather than try to beat our competitor's prices, let us try to excel him in service."

Will Institute Standard Grading on Niagara Products

Niagara Fruit Growers' Ltd. Will Make a Number of Changes for the Better Handling of Niagara Fruits—Government Has Been Asked to Recognize Standards

THE recently appointed general manager of the Niagara Fruitgrowers, Ltd., Dr. G. C. Creelman, who has been in England for some time as agent-general for Ontario, sails for Canada on April 1. Dr. Creelman will direct the general policy of the new organization. C. D. Carpenter, a grower, and formerly of C. P. Carpenter & Sons, Hamilton, wholesale fruit merchants, will be general sales manager.

The management committee consists of one representative from each of sixteen districts. A standard grading of all products that will be handled by the association will be instituted by the association. For instance, apples will be graded ones and twos, peaches ones and twos, plums, fancy, ones and twos, that is three grades. Strawberries will grade ones and twos, also pears, raspberries, black and red currants.

The Dominion Government has been asked to recognize these standards, and make them permanent. With the exception of apples there never has been any permanent or understood standards. Under the new arrangement there will be offered to the consumer fixed standards of quality which will command a ready sale.

Standard packages for each type of fruit, and cooling chambers for insuring right conditions for shipping, are matters that will be taken up by the association.

Evaporated Apple Packers Form a New Company

At a largely attended meeting of all evaporated apple packers, held at the King Edward Hotel on March 24, arrangements were completed to take over all the evaporated apples, waste and chop from all packers in Canada by the newly formed company, "Canadian Evaporated Apples, Limited."

A holding company has been formed, and a Dominion charter already secured. The company is capitalized at $150,000.

Officers were appointed as follows: R. I. Graham, Belleville, president; W. H. Millman, Toronto, vice-president; W. H. Benson, Picton, managing director; L. K. Shourds, Wellington, and J. L. Buck, Port Rowan, directors. One of the main objects is to put the business in better shape, have the pack more uniform, and to improve on quality. They have named a low price.

All goods will be inspected by the Government before shipments are made and guaranteed up to grade.

PRUNES A LEADER IN OREGON

"The prune industry is one of the great horticultural industries within the state of Oregon," said Governor Olcott recently. "Nearly 40,000 acres of our finest agricultural lands are planted with prune trees. Last year, despite adverse weather conditions, 30,000,000 pounds of prunes were harvested in the state. Of this number but 8,000,000 have been sold. The 22,000,000 pounds unsold represent an enormous asset to Oregon if they can be moved and placed in the hands of consumers. The fact that they are lying idle jeopardizes this enormous industry. The people of the state of Oregon should give widest co-operation to the prune growers to meet the grave situation."

A. S. Nisbet, representing the W. G. Patrick & Company, Limited, Winnipeg, is on a business trip to the province of Saskatchewan.

Maxie for his able and untiring efforts in connection with approaching the Alberta legislature with regard to obtaining better hotel and eating house accommodation for commercial travellers. His mission was successfully carried out and immediate action promised by the Government in the matter.

COCOANUT OIL IS PROVING SPLENDID SUBSTITUTE.

For many years past the world's production of animal fats has been steadily diminishing. Lack of such fats spelled famine in Europe during the war, when great quantities of them were withdrawn from human use to make glycerine for high explosives.

Even now, and on this side of the water, there is an insufficiency of animal fats (as indicated by the price of butter), and to make good the shortage, cocoanut oil is being imported in enormous quantities. During the last year 346,737,913 pounds of this oil were brought into the United States.

The oil is largely used in cooking fat, but also in the manufacture of nut butter, candies, soap and cosmetics. It is said to be an excellent substitute for cod liver oil, being highly digestible and with the advantage of an agreeable flavor. At ordinary temperature, cocoanut oil is a white, butter-like solid.

The raw "meats" are dried in the sun before shipment from the tropical countries where cocoanuts are grown. In this shape the material is called copra. The oil is extracted by powerful hydraulic presses, the yield being 65 to 70 per cent. of the weight of the copra.

Foreign Enquiries For Canadian Foodstuffs

Manufacturers desiring names of foreign buyers as referred to below can secure them by writing Canadian Grocer, University Avenue, Toronto, and giving number of enquiry.

2805. Canned fish. — A Cape Town manufacturers' agency, covering the whole South African field, desire to represent Canadian exporters of canned salmon, sardines, etc. Sample labels and prices f.o.b. Atlantic ports should accompany first letter.

2806. Flour.—The London branch of a firm in Smyrna wish to be placed in direct correspondence with Canadian flour mills able to export.

2807. Wheat. — A well-recommended firm of millers in Colombia desire to be placed in communication with exporters of wheat from Canada. Quotations should be on basis of c.i.f. Cartagena.

PROGRESS

A generation ago, when the dinner dishes were washed and put away (only it was "supper" then), dad ranged alongside the big table with his pipe lit and the morning paper to read, ma opposite with her mending (for ma never had time to read except on Sunday afternoon), the boys and girls filled the corners with their home work, and the little ones played on the floor, dreading when the clock should strike eight. Now, when the clock records that hour, all hands are at the neighboring picture house. That is progress of the world.—Portland Oregonian.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE striking feature of the grocery markets is the advance of 50 cents per hundred on refined sugar. This increase in prices on sugar did not come as a surprise to the trade, and fairly heavy purchases had been made in anticipation of the advance and there are indications that the higher price will be maintained. There are also rumors that a further advance is coming in view of the strong position in the raw sugar market.

The primary markets for practically all commodities show little change, remaining with the firm tone that has been prevailing for the past few weeks. The observance of the Easter holidays has also had a quietening effect upon the markets, and a slow movement prevailed over the week end under review.

Dried fruits are showing a firmer tone. Prunes and apricots at the Coast are higher and raisins and currants have also a stronger tone. Some heavy export business on prunes has transpired during the week, including 7,000,000 pounds of the smaller sizes to Germany and 680,000 pounds of prunes and apricots to Copenhagen, which is the first instance of any such business with that port from California. This resuming of export business on prunes has greatly strengthened the market. Prices on spot are unchanged at present but a slight increase can be expected.

The production of maple syrup in the Province of Quebec is not turning out as large as at first anticipated. Prices, however, are considerably lower than last year.

Teas, coffees and shelled nuts continue to hold a strong position with spot stocks fairly low. Canned goods generally show little change except in Montreal and Toronto, where apparently there is another wave of price-cutting manifest.

Live hogs on the Toronto and Winnipeg markets are easier and lower, but on the Montreal market hogs are holding a strong position with prices somewhat advanced.

Eggs are weak and lower. Butter is fairly firm although there are indications for easier tendencies in the near future. Cheese continues to rule in a strong market and stocks of old cheese are fast becoming depleted while new cheese is not being made as yet in any large volume.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 30.—Without a doubt the most striking feature of the grocery market this week is the advance in the price of sugar to a basis of $11 per cwt., and at that it stands very strong with a hint of further advances. On the other hand molasses is slightly reduced in price by some of the local wholesalers. A price feud in this city on canned goods has resulted, low prices being quoted on canned corn and tomatoes, but these prices will not hold for many days. Some further reductions are quoted on package starches. The cereal market is more quiet but prices are steady. Nuts and dried fruits are firm in price with a good steady demand. There is no change in the tea situation, prices continue fairly steady. The rice market is still in an unsettled condition. There has been a much better movement of spices lately and prices will be more subject to changes in the primary markets. Cream of tartar is a little dearer this week. Washing soda is quoted lower this week. There is less active cereal market with the coming of spring but prices hold steady. The supply of apples is low and higher prices are quoted. Grapefruit is a little lower but oranges are scarce, especially in the larger sizes. Celery is a little easier this week.

Coffee Steady and Firm

Montreal.

COFFEE.—All that can be said about the coffee market is that it is steady with a good demand and a strong primary market backing it up. The coffee dealers here are doing all they can to keep the market on an even basis, in view of the upward tendencies.

Prices Cut on Canned Goods

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is no actual change in the canned goods market this week, but the price rivalry between a number of local wholesalers has resulted in some radical cuts in the price of tomatoes and canned corn. These prices are not at all stable and change almost daily. At date, one wholesaler is selling corn at a lower figure than it has reached in the last six months, but this is not expected to last more than a day or so on account of the stocks on hand. Prices are sure to come back to a higher level and a more steady basis in the very near future. Naturally the canned goods market is very firm with a strong tendency and present prices quoted locally are only artificial and will result in price cutting among local retailers.

Firm Tone to Dried Fruits

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—About all that can be said this week about dried fruits is that there is a good market at a steady basis, and that the tendency in many lines is upward. Dried apples are very firm and raisins are even stronger than they were a week ago, and an advance in price would not be surpising. There has been a big demand for the new stock of dates and figs which are now on the local market.

Grapefruit Lower

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The only price change this week in fruit is a reduction of twenty-five cents on Porto Rico grapefruit. They are now selling at $4.50 per case. The supply of apples offered is getting very low, and quotations on Ben Davis and Baldwins are a little higher. There has been such a demand for oranges that the supplies are running low this week and only Californias of the smaller sizes are offered by a number of local dealers. Naturally the prices on oranges are very firm this week.

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—There is a reduction of seventy-five cents a drum on broken caustic. The 100-pound drums are now selling at $6.50.

Higher Price on Sugar

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Towards the latter part of last week the sugar market strengthened up to an advance of 50 cents per cwt. The price now quoted by all refiners is $11.00 per cwt. for refined granulated. This week the market is very firm with a strong tendency even at the advanced price, and there is some talk of even higher prices being quoted.

Lower Prices on Molasses

Montreal.

MOLASSES.—Strange as it may seem, with the higher prices on raw sugar and on granulated, lower quotations are made this week by local wholesalers on molasses. The decline amounts to two and one-half cents per gallon, and the new price is 77½ cents per gallon. There is no change in price this week on corn syrups, and a good demand continues for both lines.

Maple Syrup Crop Doubtful

Toronto.

MAPLE SYRUP.—The receipts of the new crop of maple syrup have been a little larger this week, but as they have not been sufficient to meet the requirements of the trade, the tone of the market has proved steady. There is a good demand from retail dealers for supplies, and prices stand at $2.25 per gallon in tins, but some quotations are made as high as $2.50 per gallon. It is not expected that the production will be very much larger than it is at the present time on account of weather conditions.

Teas Unchanged

Montreal.

TEA.—There is little or no change this week in the tea market. Prices remain unchanged, and the demand is little improved for the higher grade tea. Little change can be expected in the tea market until such a time as present stocks on hand are cleaned up and the influences of the primary market are felt more directly. At the present time the primary markets are very firm on Ceylon, but on account of the spot stocks of Ceylon, prices remain unchanged here.

Rice Market Still Weak

at sacrifice prices and have affected market conditions here, forcing quotations even lower.

Steady Market for Nuts

Montreal.

NUTS.—There is no change this week in the nut market. There has been a good demand for nuts during the past few months, and the walnut market is very firm with small stocks on hand. Prices on all lines of nuts may be expected to at least be firm with, perhaps, an advance on pecans and walnuts.

Cream of Tartar Higher

Montreal.

SPICES.—There are few changes in the spice market, but there is a very good movement. It is expected that in a short time there will be some changes, but for the present quotations are steady. Slightly higher prices are being asked for French and American cream of tartar. The high test American is now quoted at from 75 to 80 cents per pound, and the French from 65 to 70 cents per pound. Some Starches Cheaper

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—There are further changes this week in package starches. Bee starch, reduced 15 cents on the half case lot and is now quoted at $3.25. The full case lots are reduced 50 cents per case and are quoted at $6.25. Chinese starch is reduced 50 cents per case and is quoted at $5.75. Shepp's cocoanut is reduced 3 cents per pound, and the 1-pound package is now selling at 48 cents.

Florida Celery Easier

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—There is little or no change this week in the vegetable market. There is a good demand for fresh vegetables, and prices have remained steady during the week. Florida celery is a little cheaper, being quoted this week at $4.75 per crate. Red onions, on the other hand, have advanced 75 cents per cwt. in price, and are now quoted at $2.50, with a very fair demand. New tomatoes seem to be more plentiful, but with the better supply the demand has increased and prices have remained firm.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 30.—The markets are featured this week by the advance in quotations on refined sugar, the outcome of the steadily advancing raw sugar market. The market is still strong and a further advance of possibly the same amount is expected to be announced. Many wholesalers, however, are still selling sugar at the old rate. Dried fruits are unchanged locally but primary markets are firmer with higher prices quoted on prunes and apricots. Teas, coffees and shelled nuts continue in a strong position. Rolled oats have a firmer tone. Package goods are unchanged. Fresh vegetables and fruits from the South are arriving freely and an active demand is noted. Potatoes are easy and lower.

Bean Quotations Unchanged

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is less activity in the bean market than there has been for the past couple of months. Just why this falling off in the demand cannot be ascertained. No doubt the heavy shipments of fresh vegetables arriving almost daily from the south may have something to do with it. The fact remains, however, that beans this season are of better quality and lower than they have been for the past two or three years and should continue to command a ready sale for the next month or two.

Cereals Steady and Quiet

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The demand for cereals is rather quiet with the market generally holding at a steady price basis. Rolled oats although showing no price change has a firm undertone. Cornmeal is quoted in one quarter at $3 per bag, which is 25 cents less than the average quotation.

Canned Goods Unchanged

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS. — There is practically no change in the canned goods situation. Jams are still offered at various prices and in some instances far below the manufacturers' list prices. There is a difference of opinion as to the inquiry for jams, some wholesalers report an active demand, while there are others who claim that jams are not selling even at the lower prices. One wholesaler stated that in his opinion this condition was the result of householders being fairly well filled up with preserved fruits and consequently were not buying the manufactured article. However, whatever the reason is, jams are now selling at a lower price than since 1917, when strawberry 4s were quoted at 74 cents each.

Prunes are Higher

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—According to special despatches from the coast, prunes have a decidedly strong tone with prices advanced from one-quarter to one cent per pound. Heavy export orders have also transpired, including 4,000 tons to Germany, mostly of the smaller sizes, 70/80s and 90/100s. This is practically the first export order of any volume that has materialized this season, and has had the effect of greatly strengthening and stimulating the situation. Apricots are also about two cents per pound higher in primary markets. Stocks of currants on spot are not heavy and primary markets are firmer.

Fruits Unchanged

Toronto.

FRUIT.—Strawberries from Louisiana are arriving freely, which is about two weeks earlier than usual. Prices on pints are 25 cents to 28 cents and quarts 55 cents. There is little change in quotations on oranges. The larger sizes range from $5.25 to $6.25 per case and the smaller sizes $4.50 to $5 per case. California lemons are selling at $4.25 to $4.75 per case and Messinas at $4.75 per case. Florida oranges are quoted at $5.50 per case. Canadian barrel apples are moving well at unchanged prices. Boxed apples are also in good demand.

Toronto.

NUTS.—The firm condition of French shelled walnuts continues to be in evidence, and spot stocks show little improvement, although some small shipments arrived during the week. It is also reported that Manchurian walnuts are in a stronger position with prices in primary markets advanced about six cents per pound. Almonds are holding steady. Pecans are strong with tendencies for higher prices. Cocoanut is a trifle lower in primary markets. New Jamaica cocoanuts are quoted at $8 per sack.

Fresh Vegetables in Demand

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Heavy shipments of fresh vegetables from the south are arriving almost daily and have an active demand. Florida tomatoes are easier, now quoted at $8 to $9 per case. New cabbage is lower this week. Texas in bulk are down one-half cent per pound, now selling at four cents per pound, and Florida in hampers is quoted at $2.70, a decline of 30 cents. Spinach is also lower at $2.25 per bushel hamper. Canadian vegetables are slow and show little change in quotations. Potatoes continue dull and easy. Dealers state that potatoes at country points can be purchased at around 40 cents per bag. Freight and handling charges are very high, which bring the price laid down in Toronto at around 70 cents. Dealers' prices to the trade range from 90 cents to $1.10 per bag.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, March 30.—Business continues to show a slight improvement and staple grocery commodities are slowly coming back to a steadier basis. Sugar advanced, and the tone of the sugar market continues strong with the possibility of another advance. Cloves advanced on the primary market and other spices remain steady. The tea market continues with a firm tone. Package cereals have shown no change. Canned vegetables are held firmly by the packers and they have intimated that there will be no reduction in price on the better grades. Prunes are steady on the primary market. Evaporated apples have a firmer tone and are showing a greater activity. Raisins are holding firm and stocks are not large. Jams are much steadier in sympathy with the advance in sugar. Shelled walnuts continue firm while shelled almonds are slightly easier. Louisiana strawberries are on the market. Vegetables are more active.

Coffee Slightly Higher

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—There is very little to report on the coffee market this week. During the week the market took a downward trend but the next day it advanced about one cent a pound. The demand locally is very fair and an increased demand is being looked forward to.

Bean Market Firm

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—The bean market continues steady. Some very fine grades of Western beans are arriving on the market and a good volume of business is being done at the present low prices. The freight on imported beans advanced recently and this no doubt will affect the market to a slight extent. There is no change in the barley situation. Package cereals show no change but the tendency is for easier prices on package oats. Corn flakes remain firm and are expected to maintain present prices throughout the season.

Canned Vegetables Firm

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Canned vegetables are being held firmly by the packers, who have intimated that there will be no reduction in price until the new pack is available. Small quantities of lower grades are on the market at reduced prices. This applies also to canned fruit and reduced quotations are noted. The general lines of salmon such as sockeye, red spring and cohoes remain firm and stocks are limited. Pink salmon is in an uncertain condition due to the fact that if a large export demand comes through the market will show a firmer tone.

Dried Fruit Steady

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUIT.—Prunes are holding steady on the primary market. Peaches are fairly firm. Apricots are weak and lower prices may be looked forward to on the arrival of new shipments, which will be around the last of April. Evaporated apples are firm and it is generally thought that the present prices will be fully maintained due to the small pack last year. Raisins remain firm in the primary markets. Last week large sales have been made of this line at slightly reduced prices by local wholesalers in an effort to reduce their stocks before the warm weather sets in.

Rice Market Firmer

Winnipeg.

RICE.—The rice market is ruling a little firmer. Better grades are slightly higher than a short time ago and it is not expected that there will be any material change in the market during the next few weeks. There is a noted scarcity of Japan rice on the market. Sago remains firm. Tapioca continues weak and lower prices are expected within the next few weeks.

Shelled Almonds Easier

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—Shelled almonds are reported somewhat easier and attractive prices are being quoted, which are practically back to a pre-war basis. Bordeaux shelled walnuts continue firm and indications are that they will remain so for some time. Practically no spot stocks of these nuts are being carried by any of the merchants. Spanish shelled peanuts are also quoted at attractive figures. Shelled brazils are quoted at much lower prices for May to December delivery. Shelled pecans are very hard to obtain and prices continue very high.

FROM ST. JOHN, BY WIRE

St. John, N. B., March 30. — Easter business reported generally active and prices experienced only few changes. All sugars advanced 50 cents per hundred. Eggs are easier at 35 to 40 cents per dozen. Another cut of $3.00 was made on American clear pork. Dairy butter shows an increase in quotations, now offered at 56 to 60 cents per pound. Fruit prices are firmer. California oranges are quoted at $5.50 to $7.00 per case. Bananas are steady at 11 cents per pound.

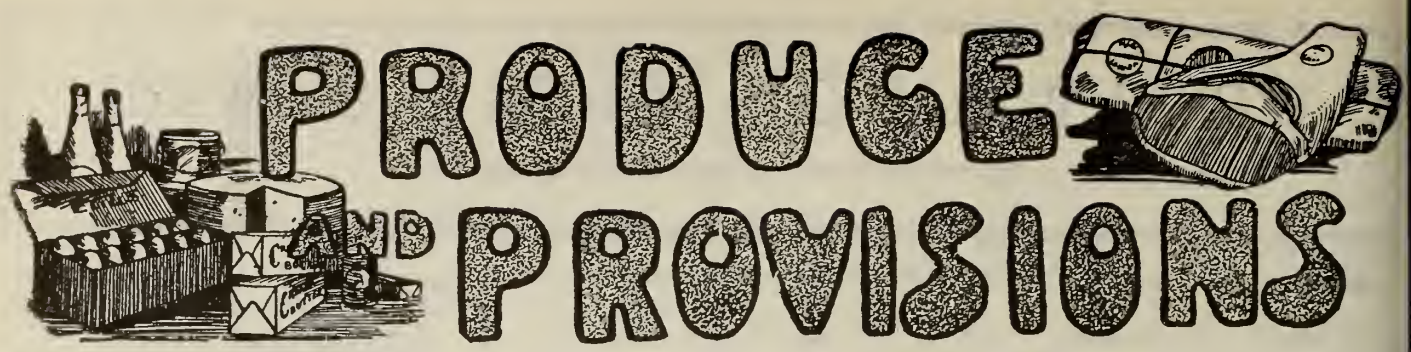
Figure it another way. Play you sell $8 worth of goods at 40 per cent. margin. You make $3.20 gross. Now sell $27 worth at 25 per cent. margin, and what do you make? You make a gross of $6.75. Rapid turnover, enlarged sales pay, even at a lower average margin, and since increases usually result from narrowed margins, maybe you better study these rather diligently.

But for the man who has some "git up and git" in his system there is always inspiration, pointed hints that he can use, in any story of what real men actually have accomplished. And if ever you incline to think that "We don't want to know about such firms as these I have mentioned—they're nothin' but price cutters!" turn around and think this way:

That such men do not succeed just because they are price cutters. Look around at the failures on every hand and you will find the fellows whose record is just one long cutting of prices. No. These men succeed because they are merchandisers. They know just what to do and when to do it to keep their sales running full blast all the time, to keep their men on their toes every minute of the day, to get full value out of their floor space and their help.

And they are successful men! Get that? Successful men are the men you can afford to study ALWAYS. This not always to imitate them; but always and ever to learn from them. Then you can shape the lessons to your own advantage. Try it and see.



A Fresh Meat Department Is a Valuable Adjunct to a Grocery

Management of The Oak Bay Grocery, Victoria, B.C., Believes That Both the Grocery and Meats Departments Gain Immensely by Sharing the Same Store

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 21.—The manager of the Oak Bay Grocery, Victoria, B.C., is one of the coast grocers who thinks that a fresh meat department is a good adjunct to the business, and he stated that both a grocery store and a butcher shop gain immensely by sharing the same store. Each should be run independently, he stated, and each will ring up more sales in a day than either would do on its own.

This grocer lays great stress on window dressing and interior display. A supporting pillar situated near the front of the store is entirely concealed by an artistic display of canned goods.

Speaking of the cash and carry business, which causes as much discussion in Victoria as elsewhere, this merchant said, "There will always be a large number of customers who want service and are ready to pay for it. We permit some of our better known customers a charge account. This is merely a convenience and is not a necessity. The outside terms given to any one are thirty days. These terms are carefully explained at the start and we never hesitate to tell a customer that our rules are strict in this regard."

A Unique Service

Borrowman's, Ltd., 1199 Newport Street, Victoria, B.C., gives a unique service to their customers in the Oak Bay district. They buy fresh caught salmon from the Indian fishermen, and slice and retail it to their customers. A sign that a Canadian Grocer representative saw in this window said: "This fish was swimming yesterday."

Refrigerator Counter Doubles Sales of Meats in This Store

Griffin Bros., in Brampton, Ont., Increase Their Turnover in Bacon and Cooked Meats By the Installation of Modern Equipment—Slicer Also Facilitates Service

"THAT refrigerator counter has just doubled my sales of meats," remarked Wm. Griffin, of Griffin Bros., Brampton, Ont., to a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day, in speaking of his trade in smoked and cooked meats. "Before we installed that counter, our sales of cooked meats were a negligible quantity. It is two years now since we installed it, and sales of both bacon and cooked meats have shown a steady and very gratifying increase."

The counter referred to is not a large one, but one in which there are compartments for meats and produce, with a central compartment for the ice. In Griffin Bros.' store it stands along the rear end, but in such a position as to be sure to attract the customer as she enters the store. "Its advantages of display make it a profitable investment," continued Mr. Griffin. "I very often have two or three pieces of bacon in it. A customer wants a certain one, perhaps not too fat. She looks in the counter, and knows which one she desires. There is no handling of the bacon. The meats are kept in the proper temperature, and at the same time can be attractively displayed."

Griffin Bros. sell two brands of bacon both of which they believe are worthy of recommendation. Sales of bacon in the Griffin store average about eight sides per week, and in the summer months Griffin Bros. dispose of about 75 pounds of cooked meats in the same period.

Facilitates Service.

A modern slicing machine is close to the counter, and Mr. Griffin declares that it has more than paid for itself in the service that it has rendered. "Besides permitting people to have their meats at a desired thickness, it is a great time-saver, and eliminates waste," stated Mr. Griffin. "We sell a lot of cooked meats between five and six o'clock in the evenings, and with the slicer we can serve people much more quickly, slicing up the meats rapidly, evenly and more to the customer's liking. In this way the slicer is worth a great deal to us and has certainly stimulated our sales."

Stocks of Butter, Eggs and Cheese On March First

Ottawa, March 29.—The Internal Trade Division of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics publishes the following report concerning stocks of food in cold storage and in process of cure on March 1, 1921:

The butter in storage on March 1 amounted to 5,671,449 pounds of creamery and 589,702 pounds of dairy.

The oleomargarine in storage amounts to 333,394 pounds, showing a decline of 53.78 per cent. from last year, and of 26.53 per cent. from last month.

2,408,074 Pounds

The cheese in storage amounts to 2,408,074 pounds, a decrease of 78.29 from last year and of 49.93 per cent. from last month.

The eggs in cold storage amount to 73,167 dozen; other than cold storage 182,471 dozen, and 720,082 pounds of frozen. Cold storage stocks of eggs are very low, showing a decrease of 66⅔ per cent. from last year, and 74 1-3 per cent. from last month.

The pork stocks are 11,116,517 pounds of fresh frozen, 2,604,009 pounds fresh unfrozen, 1,743,164 pounds of dry salted, 12,817,773 pounds of sweet pickled, and 8,702,613 pounds in process of cure.

The beef stocks amount to 18,632,536 pounds of fresh frozen, 4,360,363 pounds of fresh unfrozen.

Stocks of mutton and lamb amount to 7,345,170 pounds, of which 7,267,676 pounds are frozen and 77,494 pounds unfrozen.

Total stocks of poultry are 3,410,786 pounds. There is a decrease in poultry stocks of 4.83 per cent. as compared with last year, and of 18.06 per cent. from last month.

Fish stocks total 18,739,057 pounds, an increase of cold storage stocks of 42.96 per cent. from last year.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, March 30.—The feature of the produce market is the strength of the Montreal hog market in view of a weakness in other markets throughout Canada. The big demand for pork and the limited offerings have resulted in an advance of 25 and 50 cents per cwt. Smoked, cooked and barrelled meats are unchanged in price, although there is a big demand for smoked meats. The continuing large offerings of fresh eggs have resulted in a further decline in price. The unusually mild weather is partly responsible for a bigger supply of milk which has increased the production of creamery and dairy butter which has resulted in a weaker market with a decline on creamery. There is no change in the cheese market. Lard is still in an unsettled condition with only a limited demand.

Butter Market Easier

Montreal.

BUTTER.—On account of the continued favorable weather prevailing throughout the country the butter factories in many sections have commenced operations for the season of 1921. The flow of milk is steadily increasing owing to the fact that farmers are not feeding their calves on account of the low prices offered for them as compared with a year ago and in consequence of which quite a little new milk butter has already been made. Prices quoted on this range from 54½ to 56½ cents per pound at country points. Coupled with this is the continued liberal supplies of old make butter, which has a depressing influence on the market, resulting in a decline of 1½ to 2 cents per pound on creamery butter. Slightly lower prices are quoted this week throughout the butter market.

CHEESE.—Although more favorable conditions for new make of cheese are evident throughout the country it has not had any effect on the cheese market as yet and prices are holding firm with a good demand. Unlike butter the cheese market is not so quickly affected by the supplies of milk in the country and stocks in the city are limited and the demand is sufficient to retain what stocks there are for the local trade.

Eggs Drop Five Cents

Montreal.

FRESH EGGS.—Although there has been a very good demand for fresh eggs during the past week the supply from the country has more than met the demand and still lower quotations are recorded. There has been a drop of from 4 to 5 cents per dozen in the past week and quotations now stand at from 36 to 38 cents per dozen in a jobbing way. Some dealers still look for lower prices and it is stated by some that the price will go as low as 25 cents per dozen at country points in Ontario. The wholesale dealers state that they are not yet packing eggs on account of the expectation of still lower prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, March 30.—Live hogs declined during the week with the market continuing unsettled at the lower price basis. Hams and bacon are holding fairly steady. Dressed meats are unchanged. Butter is firm with a scarcity noted on the finest quality. The egg market is weak, with lower prices and indications for further declines. Lard and shortening are easy with a likelihood of slight reductions, according to predictions in some quarters. The cheese situation is unchanged, remaining in a strong position with stocks fast becoming depleted. Receipts of live and fresh killed poultry are small with prices steady to firm.

Butter Market Steady

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market is ruling fairly steady with no change in quotations. There appears to be large quantities of lower grade butter that can be purchased at a range of prices. No. 2 grade is bringing from 53 to 56 cents per pound. No. 1 grade at 60 to 64 cents per pound. The latter price is on fresh made, for which there is a ready demand with a limited supply.

EGGS.—There is evidence that the prices on eggs will continue with a downward trend for some time to come, or at least until they reach a level more in accordance with export prices. Storage operations have not yet commenced to any great extent as packers believe that present prices are not low enough to make the investment profitable in spite of the fact that eggs are now about 15 cents per dozen less than last year during the packing season. As we go to press eggs are quoted by the dealers at 35 cents per dozen and are selling at country points at around 25 cents per dozen.

Live Hogs Drop $1.00

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market when we went to press last week was ruling fairly firm but towards the end of the week packers commenced to offer 75 cents to $1 lower, with the result that a large number of sales were made on that basis. The market continues unsettled at the lower price basis. In spite of the light receipts of cattle, values were easier. A few spring lambs are arriving but the majority are of indifferent quality. Quotations on dressed meats are practically unchanged.

DAVIES

Pork and Beans

With Tomato Sauce

Dealers will be glad to know that we are again able to offer them our high grade Canned Pork and Beans, and the same will be obtainable with Tomato Sauce in sizes 1's, 2's and 3's, with a limited quantity of size 2's with plain sauce. These Beans are quite in keeping with our former high grade standard, which met with such a favorable reception last Fall.

It is unfortunate that, owing to our inability to secure suitable containers, just at present we cannot supply size 1½. This is particularly regrettable, since the 16-ounce tin is the one which comes in for the greatest demand.

The prices for Davies Pork and Beans, 1's, 2's and 3's, are very reasonable, and we solicit your enquiries for prices and particulars.

Other Lines of Davies Canned Foods

Davies Corned Beef, 1's, 2's, and 6's
Davies Roast Beef, 1's, and 2's.
Davies Lunch Tongue, 1's.
Davies Cambridge Sausage, 1's.
Davies Corned Beef Hash, 1's.
Davies' Oxford Sausage, 1's.

Ask our Salesman for our prices, or, if he is not in your vicinity, write us direct. Special attention given to orders by mail.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, March 30.—Creamery butter continues very firm. Cheese is scarce and higher in price. Eggs are dropping and lower prices are expected during the week. Lard and shortening show no change. Live selected hogs are higher. Cooked meats are showing greater activity. Ham and bacon have shown no change during the week but from now on an increased demand is expected. The poultry market is quiet under a light demand. Fish is ruling steady with fair business.

Butter Market Steady

Winnipeg.

BUTTER—The butter market continues very firm and finest creamery prints are quoted at 60 cents per pound. Dairy butter declined in price and is now quoted at 28 to 29 cents.

BUTTER—
Creamery, best table grade		0 60
Dairy, best table grade	0 28	0 29

Cooked Meats Unchanged

Winnipeg.

COOKED MEATS—There is no change in cooked meats this week with the exception of roast shoulders which have advanced 1½ cents per pound and are now quoted at 47½ cents. The demand for cooked meats has been fairly good and it is expected that this line will show a marked improvement from now on.

Hog Prices Advance

Winnipeg.

FRESH MEATS.—There has been a decidedly strong tone in the hog market and selected live hogs have advanced, now quoted at $14.00 per cwt. Trading was very slow on the cattle market which was due to a lack of quality among the offerings and the poor demand for heavy killing steers among the local packers. Best quality steers topped the market at $9.50. Bulk butchered steers sold from $7.50 to $8.50 with a few common selling from $6.00 to $7.25. Heifers were decidedly slow and a few changed hands at prices from $6.00 to $7.50 for the good kind and $5.00 to $6.00 for the common kind. Choice veals were in good demand and sold generally from $10.00 to $11.00. Very few sheep and lambs are offered in the market.

Fresh Shad Arriving

Winnipeg.

FISH.—Business is reported fairly good by the fish dealers. Fresh shad has arrived on the market and is being quoted at 23 cents per lb. Fresh halibut is in good demand and is ranging around 21 cents per pound. Oysters, both bulk and shell, are off the market as the season is practically finished. Boiled crabs are arriving freely and lobsters are quoted at 75 cents per pound.

MACDONALD'S

Do You Buy Good-Will?

THE important part of a sale is not the exchange of values—coinage and commodity. If is the "good-will" that you have gained by the transaction. For if you would sell goods, you must buy good-will.

Since 1858 Macdonald's Tobaccos have held the confidence of Canadian smokers. Unquestionable as to quality, unsurpassed for value, Macdonald's comes to you with a host of friends whose good-will has been won long ago by the tobacco with a heart.

You will find it easy to sell Macdonald's. You will find it easy to buy good-will with Macdonald's. Above all, you will find it immensely profitable to push Macdonald's.

Extraordinary Value on Small Size Navels

Weather conditions in California this year are responsible for a large percentage of small size Oranges. Thus desirable purchases can be made in straight car lots of small sizes. On account of low price per dozen these Oranges are selling the demand has been greatly stimulated. Last week the market advanced under the heavy demand for these sizes. We were fortunate to get three cars out before the market reached its highest last week. These we offer at attractive prices. See our Price-List. We expect to clean out fast. The sizes are: 216—252—288—324.

Remember, these are high color, sweet and seedless, full of juice and flavor, and at this time of the year you get the Navel at its best. Pick your sizes, and send along your order. It will prove profitable.

Your Customers Know

No "talking up" is ever required to sell a customer an Eddy product.

If it's a match order, one of the thirty to forty different brands of Eddy's is certain to satisfy in every particular. Even where the customer doesn't specifically ask for Eddy's you can take it for granted that Eddy's is expected, for with most people, to think of good matches, is to think of Eddy's.

The same holds good where Indurated Fibreware is concerned. These handy, light and durable utensils are made under the self-same standards of manufacture that have made Eddy's Matches famous. They never bulge, leak or fall apart and are ideally suited for household or farm use.

Eddy Products are Made-in-Canada—by Canadians—for Canadians.

SOUTHERN RICES MAY BE HIGHER

The Salinger Brokerage Co. of St. Louis writes: "Rice has had an abnormal readjustment. The price is below pre-war levels. It is doubtful if present prices represent labor cost alone connected with harvesting and milling. The natural market movement, after such a drastic decline, would be to rebound. The tariff bill, which is likely to be enacted at the extra session of Congress, will carry a duty of at least 2c per pound on rice. Therefore there is in prospect, first, a natural advance due; second, an advance due to decreased production; third, an advance due to tariff legislation. In our opinion these advances may total 2c or 3c per pound by September 1."

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

MADE IN CANADA

The Pulling Power In a Million Stores

The store with the pulling power is the store which is equipped to give prompt, efficient, satisfying service.

The store with the pulling power is always equipped with modern, mechanical service-givers—and plenty of them.

The merchant who keeps his customers waiting at the counter is frittering away his big opportunity of exerting pulling power. The difference between Satisfied Customers and Dissatisfied Customers may lie in the lack, perhaps, of only one, extra International Dayton Scale—The greatest of speedy, accurate service-givers in the modern store.

The progressive merchant with a sufficient number of Daytons on his counters is the merchant with the irresistible pulling-power when the heads of a family are choosing their grocer.

The merchant who protects his customer with Dayton Weights, protects at the same time himself. Dayton Weights mean immediate destruction for these old-time foes of store Efficiency: Time Losses, Profit Losses and Good-will Losses.

Why the Customer Chooses the Store With Dayton Service.

1.—PROMPT WEIGHTS — The guarantee against unnecessary waste of time.

2.—ACCURATE WEIGHTS — The guarantee against the mistakes inseparable from the use of the old-time Scale.

3.—VISIBLE WEIGHTS — The guarantee of full value which is backed by 30,000 instantaneous price calculations.

Where Quality Counts

Furniture polish is used on some of the most prized possessions of the housewife: her Piano, her Phonograph, her Buffet, her Mahogany Picture Frames. The Dealer, therefore, assumes a certain responsibility in selling furniture polish. That is why so many Merchants—having investigated O-Cedar and found it all we claim—refuse to recommend any polish in which they cannot place that same reliance.

O-Cedar Polish has never been known to shirk the responsibility placed on it by either dealer or public. It never fails to live up to the expectations of the housewife.

Extensive Advertising is creating a bigger demand than ever.

O-Cedar Products—Mop and Polish—constantly make new friends; never lose old ones.

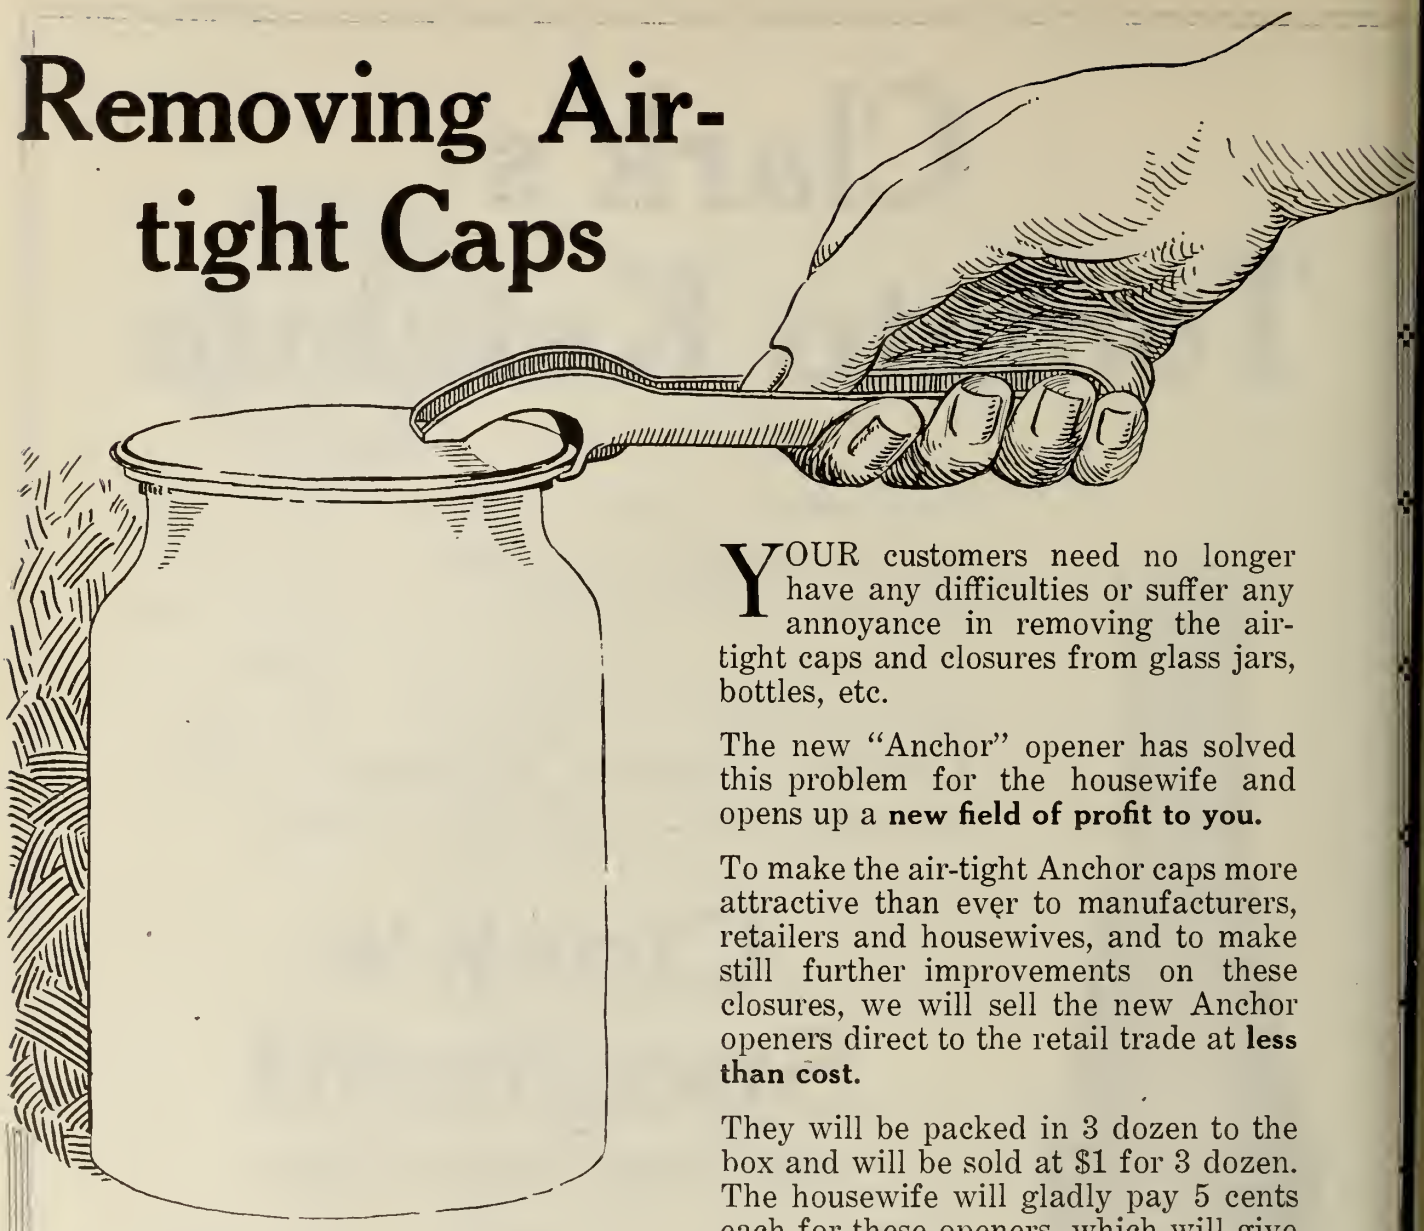
Removing Air-tight Caps



YOUR customers need no longer have any difficulties or suffer any annoyance in removing the air-tight caps and closures from glass jars, bottles, etc.

The new "Anchor" opener has solved this problem for the housewife and opens up a new field of profit to you.

To make the air-tight Anchor caps more attractive than ever to manufacturers, retailers and housewives, and to make still further improvements on these closures, we will sell the new Anchor openers direct to the retail trade at less than cost.

They will be packed in 3 dozen to the box and will be sold at $1 for 3 dozen. The housewife will gladly pay 5 cents each for these openers, which will give you a 44% profit on the selling price.

When you sell a product with a patent Anchor cap you can make a profit not only on that product but an additional 44% profit on the opener.

Displaying the openers on the counter and in your window and drawing your customers' attention to this necessary article will suggest sales on products which are packed with the patented Anchor caps and closures.

Just send in your name and address and $1.00 and we will mail you at once 3 dozen of the new profit-making "Anchor" openers.

Write to-day and be the first merchant in your town to have the new openers.

"QUALITY SELLS, QUANTITY"

LONG experience has demonstrated that "Fray Bentos" has no competition in quality. No effort is required to sell it because its superior quality has created a spontaneous demand.

Leadership and permanence of demand can only be established through quality. Lower prices may sometimes secure a temporary advantage for any commodity but in the end quality is supreme.

"FRAY BENTOS" is different and is incomparably superior to other kinds of canned meats and the prices are sometimes higher and sometimes lower than those of other kinds, but we always endeavor to provide the lowest possible prices, for the highest possible quality.

"FRAY BENTOS" helps any merchant to secure a reputation for selling the "best" instead of the "just as good."

"FRAY BENTOS" is king of Canned Meats.

For the convenience of our customers ample stocks are carried at Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, and at St. John's, Newfoundland.

MAN! MAN! MAN!

Where is that man you need so badly?

Well, no use grouching, is there? Best thing to do is to advertise for the man you want. Use CANADIAN GROCER as the best and cheapest medium. Use dailies if you think they're better. It's up to you.

All we know is that you get to a sifted class when you use CANADIAN GROCER. The replies you will get will be from men now in jobs—not slackers nor idlers, not job-chasers. It will cost you three cents a word first insertion to use CANADIAN GROCER, and you may have to use several issues before the right man puts himself on your hook. Nobody knows in advance just how much you'll have to advertise. But we all know good men are scarce and don't have to look for jobs. You'll have to do some inducing, perhaps, to tempt the man you want to leave his present employer.

But you never can tell who's open for your proposal. Climate, inclination, the boss's bad temper, a fancied slight, desire to get into a new field — all these are explanations of why men change; all these are pegs on which you can hang your hopes.

So send along your advertisement. Better order it to run "until forbid." It will be cheap enough if you find the right man; and anyhow, there's no other cheaper or better way of finding your man.

Three cents a word for the first insertion, two cents a word for each insertion after. Five cents extra per insertion if addressed to Box Number. Payable in advance.

A Real Fish Story

Read This

Pete Filiatrau, the guide and sportsman, knows the haunts of black bass and dore in the Jesus River better than anyone.

The other day he walked through the town of St. Rose, with a full basket of live and kicking black bass, the smallest one a three-pounder. This trophy made him as proud as if he had located an oil gusher.

No one in the place dared challenge him but the mayor of the town, a big portly gentleman, also an enthusiast of the rod.

The mayor asked Pete where he got these beauties. Pete replied, "I'll tell you, Mr. Mayor, but nobody else.

"This morning when I got up, looking over the river, I saw something strange in the branches of the willow trees just above the water's edge at Paulhus Island. It intrigued me very much, but you know Pete is a sport; I immediately jumped in my boat, and when nearing the spot, guess what it was, Mr. Mayor?

"The water had receded a little since yesterday, and upon every bough of the willow trees was perched one or two fishes. I quietly got close by and with a vigorous shake of the branches I filled up this basket.

"Believe me, Mr. Mayor, there were enough Black Bass there to fill a hundred baskets like this."

The Mayor of St. Rose, though he is a big man, is also kind and good-natured. He drew a long breath, his bulging eyes got nearer his nose, and his mustache bristled up to his forehead. "Look here, Pete! Who the devil would believe such a crazy story? Go on with that silly stuff; I know where you got this; at the old and reliable headquarters, 6 to 22 Bonsecours St., Montreal. That's the place to get the best and the most fish for your money."

Take a Tip from This Grocer Who Makes His Windows Sell Red Rose

Mr. George R. Stevenson, of St. Thomas, Ont., is one of those good merchants who believe in making every inch of the display space in their stores work for them every minute of the day. Clever windows are his specialty, and they say in St. Thomas he rarely disappoints the eye.

Recently Mr. Stevenson, who always sells a lot of Red Rose Tea, wanted to stimulate sales, so he did the natural thing—dressed his window as shown in the accompanying cut. T-E-A in this case surely spelled success.

Busy as he is with his store, Mr. Stevenson still finds time for other things, and is president of the St. Thomas Retail Grocers' Association, showing that he is as popular as he is enterprising.

Watch the Losses in Broken Packages

Shipments That Arrive at Grocer's Door in Broken or Damaged Condition Must be Checked Up Closely if Loss is to be Avoided —Claims Should Always be Made on Transportation Companies Promptly

SHIPMENTS of various commodities arriving at the grocer's door in a damaged and otherwise broken condition are a source of more or less concern to the average merchant. Meeting loss thus incurred is not always the easiest thing possible. The placing of the responsibility for the rough handling, the filing of claims and various other details that have to be accounted for, all take a good deal of time, and the delay frequently runs into weeks before the merchant receives an amount sufficient to cover his loss.

Canadian Grocer, interviewing a number of merchants in various parts of the Dominion, in regard to this question, and also that of pilferage, learned, almost without exception, that merchants are continuously experiencing losses of this kind. In some instances there is a tendency to overlook them, passing them up as it were, the complaints being almost general that carrying companies are slow to make amends and in meeting charges of this nature.

Rough Handling at Station

"I have noticed very rough handling of freight at the station," remarked a retail grocer in Western Ontario when spoken to in regard to this matter. "That is one of the worst features," he added. "The railroad is always ready to adjust claims, but take a long time to make the settlement. I have been in business twenty-four years, but my losses in this respect have been nearly always met. I notify the agent at once, get the shipping bill, invoice and waybill. I make out an invoice of my loss and give it to the agent."

"The wholesaler in most cases repudiates any responsibility in the way of shipments arriving in broken condition," a retailer in Prince Edward Island writes Canadian Grocer. "The wholesaler places the entire responsibility on the carrier. The chief difficulty in adjusting these claims is the excessive delay. After filing a claim it is necessary to keep right after the transportation company if a settlement is to be reached. Little attention is paid to small claims, but the merchant's only safeguard is to bill the freight or express companies for all losses of this kind."

Check Up Promptly

"The retailer can avoid much loss," remarked a grocer in Niagara Falls, Ont., "if he is very careful in his checking of all shipments as they come in. I have always made it a point to be extremely cautious in this regard. The small losses go to make up the big ones, and it is in the strict marking, measuring and weighing of all consignments that the grocer can guard his profits. Being prompt in checking goods will frequently save the grocer a good deal, and for any damage that has occurred in transportation the merchant should see to it that his claim is met. My experience has always been one of difficulty in securing the settlement of losses by damage in carrying. The transportation companies are responsible and although slow are usually willing to meet their obligations."

Stolen in Transit

A merchant in Millbrook told Canadian Grocer that on four different occasions last year losses of fairly large amounts were experienced as a result of goods being stolen while in transit. "We always make claims to the railway company or the express company as the case may be, but there is, of course, a great deal of delay," he states. "We take the matter up with the local agent and the claim is adjusted through him, but the delay has more than once extended over six months."

Speaking of petty thieving and pilferage in the store this merchant states that it is chiefly during the Christmas shopping season that losses of this kind are noticed, it being practically impossible to watch everyone in the store at such a busy time.

Watch Your Shipments

A merchant in St. Catharines, Ont., who believes it is a prime essential that the grocer watch with the strictest care all shipments that come to his store, and see to it that they are as ordered, declares that he has no losses of this kind. "We have quite a number of shipments arrive in the course of a year in a damaged state. Checking them up promptly, we make claim at once to the carrying companies, and we find our claims are settled in fairly good time. When a shipment reaches us showing evidence of pilferage, we sign for it in that condition. We then telephone the agent at the railway company or the express company and he comes down at once. He goes over the shipment with us, and sees just what the shortage or damage is. We then file our claim in the regular way. We never charge these losses back to the wholesaler, because he is not to blame. We make our claims and collect them ourselves. We have little if any loss from pilferage in our store by our customers."

Hard to Place Blame

"We find that in the course of a year a good many shipments come to us showing broken and damaged goods," stated a grocer in Calgary, Alta., in answer to the inquiry of Canadian Grocer. "Particularly is this true of eggs," he states. "A good many arrive broken, but it is usually pretty hard to place the blame on the right party, as very often they take out the second filler, and rather than take up the matter we let the matter drop. There is usually a good deal of delay, in our experience, in the way of getting claims settled by the railways or express companies."

A large grocery firm carrying on business in Medicine Hat, Alta., state that they get very satisfactory settlements in the way of claims made on transportation companies for losses incurred because of damaged or broken goods. "In some cases where we find the wholesaler can get the claim adjusted more satisfactorily, we turn it over to him," remarked the manager of this concern. "However, in most cases, we make the claim ourselves."

Joint Conference of Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Retailers Results in the Passing of Important Resolutions—Some of the Advantages to be Gained by a Turnover Tax

By Austen Campbell of Financial Post Staff

DESPITE the many conflicting viewpoints and opposing opinions expressed at the recent joint tax conference of the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, three satisfactory resolutions were prepared and were finally accorded unanimous approval.

Resolved that:—

1. The Business Profits Tax be not re-enacted.
2. The Income Tax, in so far as it applies to corporations, be repealed.
3. The present Sales Tax system be adjusted to produce the required Dominion Government revenue.

The curious anomaly was witnessed of a conference unanimously agreed on the last resolution as worded, but widely divided upon the application and interpretation of such resolution.

Tax Should Be Extended

The cleavage lay between the manufacturers and the retailers, the former claiming that the sales tax should be extended—as is proposed in the United States—so as to be paid and collected by manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers alike. The retailers hold—and they are supported therein by the wholesalers—that the tax should be collected "at the source,"—that is from manufacturers and importers only. The retailers did not thus seek to avoid their tax liability. They frankly proposed that though the tax be collected in the above manner, it be passed on down to them either directly on invoices or in any manner suitable to the manufacturers and importers.

Notwithstanding this interpretation, the manufacturers were unable to embody a "method of application" in their resolution.

Some Fundamental Facts

The final decision as to operation rests then with the Finance Department. Having the necessary statistics of internal trade and commerce available, it is obviously the function of the Government tax experts to decide upon ways and means. There are, however, a number of fundamental facts governing the problem, which, if fully understood, will, it is felt, indicate that the points of disagreement between the various sections of the conference are not serious. The following statement details these facts briefly:

First—It is proposed that the business profits tax be not re-enacted and that the income tax on corporations be repealed.

Figures prepared by competent authorities on conditions in England, United States and Canada indicate that the elimination of the above taxes will remove an average of 20 per cent. from the present prices of commodities. To be conservative then let us accept that a net saving of 5 per cent. on a broad range of all cost of living would be thus effected. This is almost too evident to admit of dispute.

Second—The total percentage impost involved in any sales or turnover tax has never been found to exceed 3¾ per cent. The average in fact has always been shown to be nearer 2½ per cent. Consequently the saving effected by the abolition of the two first above mentioned taxes should permit us to pay the percentage of sales tax charges—and have a comfortable margin over.

Third—The present sales tax, with its minimum impost of 2 per cent., applied as it is on a very small proportion of Canada's commerce, together with the manufacturer's tax, is yielding revenue at the rate of $100,000,000 per year.

Fourth—The revenue required from the present system of taxes, and which would necessarily be expected from any new system of taxation, has been calculated at $200,000,000.

Fifth—The total yield from a broad sales tax at 1 per cent. has been variously estimated at from $180,000,000 to nearly $500,000,000.

From the above facts and figures, the following conclusions are necessary and evident.

Exempt Raw Materials

1. All original raw material products of forest, fishing, agriculture and mine, whether used for consumption by individuals or as raw materials for manufacture, should be exempt from sales tax.

2. The income tax must be applied on all non-sales tax paying companies or individuals to a large enough extent to equalize any competitive disadvantages.

3. The required revenue can be produced either by doubling the present 2 per cent. minimum of the sales tax or by doubling the extent of its application on commerce.

4. Cancelling the present tax system will effect sufficient economy to pay the necessary sales tax impost.

5. The sales tax will permit a general reduction in commodity prices, and will lessen the load on the consuming public.

Obvious Advantages

The above statements are made less to reiterate the business-like value of a sales tax than to provide figures to disprove certain objections that have been honestly raised against the proposition.

Its advantages are obvious:

It will be cheaply and easily collected.

It will yield the required revenue, promptly and regularly.

It will bear equally and in proportion on all the people.

It will emancipate commerce at a crucial time in the nation's industrial health.

It is the final modern system of business taxation.

Sales of Early Fresh Vegetables Are a Feature in This Store

MAKING a feature of early spring vegetables at the week-end is proving profitable for a good many grocers. Dawson & Co., Brampton, Ont., for some time past have sold large quantities of Southern fruits and vegetables in the winter months, and until such time as they can be secured from domestic grocers. For a town the size of Brampton, sales of fruits and vegetables, that is of early varieties now available, in the Dawson store are in fairly large quantities.

"On the Saturday before Easter, our combined sales of lettuce, celery, cauliflower, cucumbers, asparagus and carrots totalled more than one hundred dollars," Mr. Dawson told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. "We sold twenty-one dozen of leaf lettuce," he stated, "as well as a case of head lettuce. Representing a quick turnover, I have found fruits and vegetables profitable. They also make attractive displays, and one window I use almost altogether for fruits and vegetables. I will from now on, at any rate. Display is important in promoting their sale. A display of fresh vegetables in good condition will dispose of them quickly, and very often sell other lines as well. It will bring people into the store and, when in, sales of additional goods frequently result."

Good Quality Broom Corn Becoming Scarcer

Market is Firmer With Some Advances—No Lower Prices on Good Brooms This Year—Information on New Crop Not Available Until October First

"So far as the broom corn situation is concerned it is becoming more apparent all the time that the quantity of first-class corn is limited," stated M. S. Snyder, of the Waterloo Broom & Brush Co., Ltd., Waterloo, Ont., in an interview with Canadian Grocer. "As time goes on the quality of broom corn that will be classed as the best will gradually be poorer, simply because the better grades are constantly picked over, and even though there may be no change in the price of what is considered the best quality, yet the selection becomes poorer, which is in itself equal to an advance in price. Then as to the poorer grades of broom corn there appears to be sufficient of this for all requirements, and prices are holding their own, in fact there has been a gradual firming of the market on all stock of late with actual advances in some cases.

"A great deal of damaged broom corn is still making its appearance on the market. This corn, of course, can be bought at almost any price, but on account of the premium on American funds and the freight it makes it cost a good deal more than it is worth. The quality of this corn is not worth considering as it simply has no life to it, and when made up into a broom it will not stand the wear.

"So far as broom sales are concerned, these have been gradually improving and should continue to improve as the retail merchants and the public become aware of the fact that the class of stock that will make good brooms is limited this year and as a result has remained high in price, and for this reason they cannot expect good quality brooms to be cheaper until we have another crop. What will happen then will depend altogether upon the weather conditions prevailing throughout the broom corn growing districts and also to the amount of acreage put into broom corn this year. We can expect, however, nothing definite that would affect prices on the new crop until at least the first of October."

Trend in Coffee Is Now Towards Higher Levels

"The depreciation of other commodities has naturally caused coffee to be lower and depressed, more so than probably any other line," stated Lawrence C. Christensen, of Hard & Rand, coffee merchants, New York, in an interview with Canadian Grocer. "The tendency of the market, however, is upward. It is purely a matter of finance, not a question of supply and demand, which under normal conditions will regulate prices as Brazil has placed their loan at $30,000,000. Of this amount $20,000,000 is coming from the United States and $10,000,000 from Europe. This will undoubtedly advance Brazilian exchange, which will naturally have its effect upon prices of coffee. Freight rates from Brazil have also advanced from 40 cents per bag to 80 cents per bag. Brazil will in all probability add a surtax on all exports, covering cost of the loan, but of which details have not as yet been given out. It is estimated that the present crop of Santos will reach approximately 9,000,000 bags; Rio about 3,000,000 bags. The estimates on the growing crop, which comes in around the first of July, are about 1,500,000 bags less than last year."

HEAVY OUTPUT OF PEANUT PRODUCTS IN CANTON, CHINA

It is reported that peanut products in Canton amount to two hundred thousand tons annually, out of which 50 per cent. are used for food, 5 per cent. for sugar biscuits, 6 per cent. exported to foreign countries and the 30 per cent. are sold to the mills for oil at half price because of its poor quality. Canton peanuts rank in the first class for oil, Honan peanuts in the second, Chihli peanuts and Shantung products the third. Siam's peanuts are very poor. Only a small quantity of oil can be extracted. Most of the oil pressers in China prefer to use Chinese peanuts. In the year 1913, 4,894 tons of shelled peanuts were exported to foreign countries which amounted to more than $245,000, in 1918 376 tons were exported which amounted to more than $30,000, in 1919 350 tons were exported, amounting to only $31,000.

Tells the Court of Special Discounts

Evidence Proceeds in Case of Attorney-General of Ontario Against the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association and Certain Manufacturers—Hearing is Resumed After Lapse of One Month

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer.

TORONTO, April 7.—The hearing of the action of the Attorney-General of Ontario against the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, alleging a combine, was resumed before Mr. Justice Orde in the non-jury court on Monday of this week. It will be remembered that the case was adjourned a month ago, after practically all the evidence for the plaintiff had been heard. Monday was taken with the evidence of the remaining witnesses for the plaintiff. A number of retail grocers were called who told of receiving a five per cent. discount on purchases of five case lots of E. W. Gillett goods.

W. F. Morley, Toronto, who testified in the previous hearing, was the first witness called this week. He stated in answer to Robert McKay, counsel for the association, when asked as to whether he handled goods through storage warehouses, that he handled goods in a strictly wholesale way. Pressed for a direct answer, he replied that he carried goods in storage warehouses, and that he did not have a warehouse of his own.

"As I understand it, Mr. Morley, even on proprietary articles, you believe the man who buys in large quantities should have a better price than the man who buys in small lots?" Mr. McKay asked.

"Yes, I have a quantity price. Most wholesalers have," Mr. Morley replied.

"Am I overstating it when I say that in a previous hearing you testified that this method of buying would result in the survival of the fittest?"

"You certainly are."

"Just how am I overstating it? Did you not infer that the little retailer would be eliminated?"

"It was in connection with the wholesale trade I was speaking. I did not specifically speak of the retail trade."

"Supposing a number of these small retailers have to go out of business are not the wholesalers going to lose heavily?" Mr. McKay asked.

"It would have some effect, no doubt, on the wholesale trade," Mr. Morley replied.

Just here the witness remarked that the reason he never made application to the association for membership again is that the first time he did he considered it was treated with contempt. He received no answer either in refusal or acceptance.

"Has Good Neighbors"

To Mr. Roebuck, witness stated that his warehouse as well as his office were at 65 Front St. E. It was a storage warehouse for groceries chiefly. Speaking of quantity buying, he said that the association is trying to eliminate the quantity price and have one price to all.

Replying to Mr. McKay, he stated that he handled principally staple lines, but he could fill general orders. "I have good neighbors," he added.

Henry Rowntree, of Wm. Rowntree & Sons, retail grocers, in West Toronto, was the next witness. He stated that they handled Gillett lines, Canada Starch and W. C. Macdonald tobaccos.

Questioned as to prices on Gillett goods, he said:

"I think it is general that all grocers receive a discount on list price."

"Do you receive a rebate?" Mr. Roebuck next asked.

"A rebate—you mean a discount," said his Lordship.

"In the case of Gillett goods we usually get a discount from the wholesale house," witness replied.

The witness was then questioned re a pencil he produced, which he said was one of a certain number delivered with different sized orders of Gillett goods.

"How many pencils do you get at a time?" asked his Lordship.

Witness could not say. He was allowed to leave the box, and instructed to bring certain invoices, credit slips, etc., in the afternoon.

Did Not Care to Give Names

Wilfred Scott, of J. and W. R. Scott, retail grocers, Toronto, was next called.

"In the case of Gillett's goods," he stated, "they are purchased at list price on invoice less discount, from the wholesaler. We received a discount on a number of occasions at the end of the month. I do not remember receiving it in the past year."

"In what form has it come?" he was asked.

"Sometimes it was a credit arrangement and sometimes a cash return."

"What is the amount of a cash discount?" Mr. Roebuck next asked.

"Five per cent."

"When was it you received this?"

"It was in the last three years."

"Who was it gave you the discount?" asked His Lordship. "I don't like to ask it."

Witness stated that he did not wish to divulge the name. It might prejudice his buying.

Mr. Roebuck refused to take the responsibility of the question, but His Lordship insisted that if he chose to start this examination, the question must be answered. He adjourned the court in order to give Mr. Roebuck an opportunity to consult the Attorney-General in regard to the matter.

No Alternative

His Lordship said there was no alternative but to answer it, if his evidence was to stand.

When court resumed in the afternoon of Monday, Mr. Roebuck stated that consulting with the Attorney-General, the latter had instructed him to ascertain the names of the wholesalers allowing the discount referred to by Mr. Scott. Mr. Scott was not immediately called but was heard later.

Milton Corke Testifies

Milton Corke, of the Loblaw Groceteria Co., Toronto, was the next witness. This company has six stores in Toronto. He did the buying for these stores.

Questioned as to the buying of Gillett goods, he stated that he got a five per cent. discount off the invoice price. He had bought Gillett goods from five wholesalers, and received the discounts as stated.

"Have you received reductions in goods bought from wholesalers because you bought Gillett's goods?

Objection was made to this question, but the witness replied that it had never happened, but the suggestion had been made to him.

He mentioned the names James Lumbers, John Sloan, Groceries Limited, and Medland Bros., before the latter were cut off, as wholesalers who had allowed the discount on Gillett lines.

"How about starch? Do you buy it at the list price?"

"No, I buy it at from 8 to 10 per cent. off."

"You have had it from more than one?"

"Yes, from three."

Asked to name them, witness objected to do so. He declared that he had given his word of honor not to do so. His Lordship declared that there was no alternative but to answer. If he refused he must be committed for contempt of court. The witness asked to have until morning to think it over and to consult his lawyer. The Court granted his request, but stated that if the Attorney-General wanted the information he must have it, no matter what his solicitor advised.

Tells the Name

Wilfred Scott, recalled, stated that he had not in the last fifteen months received any rebates. The discount he referred to came through J. C. Knowles, of the Canada Brokerage. He had no agreement nor understanding that he would receive a rebate.

"Do I understand this cash rebate was received from Mr. Knowles, of Canada Brokerage, only?" Mr. McKay asked.

"Yes."

"The incident you have in mind about this discount is all in regard to a transaction with Mr. Knowles and him alone?"

"Yes."

Should Be No Fixed Prices

Thomas Cleaves, retail grocer at 1862 Queen St. E., asked about buying E. W. Gillett goods, stated that he used to get five per cent. discount when he bought five cases. He does not get it now as he buys less. There were several lines a few years ago on which there was a discount of five per cent. but not so now. As to Canada Starch, he did not get a discount, but on purchases of ten case lots he got a slight reduction. Ten years ago when he started in business there were certain well-known lines on which he got five per cent.

"There should be an open market to everything," witness interjected. "There should be no fixed prices. If the man around the corner wants to sell at only a cent profit, that is his business."

H. A. Campbell, retail grocer at 679 St. Clair Avenue W., was called. He buys Gillett goods and in five case lots. He gets a five per cent. discount.

J. F. Dove, 379 Gerrard E., stated that he had had no credit notes from wholesalers on Gillett goods. He had a discount off the invoice price.

Mr. Galbraith, traveller for James Lumbers Co., was called. He sells Gillett goods at the list price, and he added that he could not recall ever having sold under the list price.

"Has your firm ever given rebates on Gillett goods, in the way of credit notes, lower prices on other goods, or such like?"

"Not that I know of."

"Have you anything in your mind as to ever having done this?" His Lordship asked.

"I have no specific case."

Receives as Much as Eight Per Cent. Discount on Some Lines

Milton Cork of Loblaw Groceterias, Tells of Discounts He Receives in Making Certain Purchases—Rountree & Sons, West Toronto, Also Testifies

WHEN the court opened on Tuesday morning Henry Rowntree was again called to the stand. At the Monday sitting he was given time to produce certain invoices. He here produced an invoice from the Canada Brokerage Co., showing purchases of Gillett goods on which he had received a 5 per cent. discount on purchases of five or more cases. He also showed a credit note. Questioned as to the purchase of Canada starch, witness stated that he got a discount on purchases but he could not produce the invoice as he was not aware that it was required.

"Have you bought shredded wheat at a lower price than listed?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

"Can you give us the full particulars as to when, where and from whom you bought these goods, also the quantities?" asked His Lordship. His Lordship would not admit the question unless witness could give all the particulars. The question was therefore ruled out.

"Do you ever find yourself overstocked?" Mr. Hellmuth asked witness in beginning his cross-examination.

"No."

"You never have an overstock or an understock?" Mr. Hellmuth repeated.

"No."

"You always have just the right amount of stock of each line?"

"Yes."

"Are there many merchants like that?"

"I think so."

Takes a Loss

"Can you say that you have no stock on your shelves that you could now buy lower to-day than what you paid for it?"

"Our stock is very light."

"That is not an answer." Mr. Hellmuth pressed his question.

"Yes, I have."

"Then you are in that position of being overstocked?"

"What do you do with these goods bought at a high price? Do you sell them at original price?"

"No, we take a loss."

"You can understand, Mr. Rowntree, that the manufacturer of any given article has from time to time to revise his list?"

"Yes."

"Gillett's, for instance, put out their price list at beginning of year. During the year certain costs decline, and the price is lowered. On the other hand, increases are made as costs advance. There is nothing dishonest about that, is there?"

"No. That is the way it operates," replied Mr. Rowntree.

"The grocer who buys stock after it goes up is entitled to sell it at that price, plus a reasonable profit, isn't he?"

"He can use his own judgment."

"I am not asking you that. I want to know if he is not entitled to this price plus a profit."

"I don't know."

Milton Cork Again Heard

Milton Cork, recalled, was again questioned re the purchase of starch. Since last October he had been allowed discounts on list prices from S. P. Wilson, Medland Bros. and W. F. Morley. It was named on the invoice and deducted in settlement.

"In the case of shredded wheat have you bought it from a wholesaler at less than list price?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I bought some from Morley last summer at a discount of 8 per cent. Prior to June last the discount was 7½ per cent."

"What about corn flakes?"

"I bought corn flakes too from W. F. Morley at less than list price."

"Have you bought other goods?"

"Rolled oats, corn starch and syrups. I bought them from W. F. Morley too, at the same discount."

"What would be the effects on the consumer if you did not get that 8 per cent.?"

"We could not sell as cheap."

"You are very keenly alive as to any unfairness in a selling price to you, are you not? If the department store offers an article lower than you can, it hurts your business?" began Mr. McKay.

Small Grocer Will Survive

"Doesn't it follow that losses in business have to be taken care of?" interjected His Lordship.

"My losses have never interfered with my success in business," rejoined the witness.

Mr. Cork here expressed the opinion that the small grocer would always exist.

"The corner grocery will only persist because people will be willing to pay him higher prices while they know they can purchase cheaper elsewhere. Is that it, Mr. Cork?" Mr. McKay asked.

"Yes."

"The man who buys in large quantities will always get a better price?"

"That is the way it has always happened and always will happen," Mr. Cork responded.

"The man who buys 500 cases should have a better price than the man who buys 100 cases?"

"A wholesaler might question the wisdom of selling that much."

"I was just using those figures as an illustration."

"Service is what the people want, isn't it?"

"They get too much waiting on."

"Don't you think that the man who is giving service should be entitled to as fair a price as the man who is able to buy in larger quantities?"

"No, not necessarily so."

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the association, at the request of Mr. Roebuck went into the box and gave to the court an application form and declaration for membership in the wholesalers' association.

Counsel For Defendants Asks For A Non-Suit But Are Refused

Defendants' Counsel Asks for Dismissal on Grounds of No Evidence of Undue Fixing of Prices on the Part of Wholesale Grocers

THE evidence of the attorney-general having been all completed at noon on Tuesday, when court resumed in the afternoon, Mr. McKay on behalf of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association asked for a non-suit, pointing out that there had been no evidence produced to show that any effort had been made to fix prices on the part of the wholesalers, nor was there any evidence of a combination for the purpose of unduly interfering with trade. His clients, he pointed out, had acted freely and what they had done had been done openly. He declared that they had done nothing in contradiction of the law. He thought that the matter had been settled before the Board of Commerce, and he asked for a dismissal of the case.

Prices Not Unreasonable

Mr. Hellmuth on behalf of his clients, the E. W. Gillett Co., W. C. Macdonald, Reg'd, the Canada Starch Co. and the St. Lawrence Starch Co., also asked for a non-suit. "There is no reason whatever," he said, "why the Gillett Co. should not enter into agreements with wholesalers, providing their prices are reasonable. I have yet to see it proved that their prices were unreasonable or unjust. There has been no undue enhancement of prices. It is obvious that the manufacturer does not consult the wholesaler as to what his prices are going to be. Because some grocers have been able to get an extra 5 per cent. in the way of discounts it does not mean that others are conspiring to hold up prices. The evidence shows that this discount was received from W. F. Morley, and there has been nothing stated here to indicate that Mr. Morley was not overstocked, and perhaps gave special inducements in order to unload."

His Lordship stated that in any event he would have to reserve judgment, even in the matter of a non-suit. On that account it was agreed to hear evidence for the defendants.

Hugh Blain Testifies

Hugh Blain, president of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, was first called for the defendants.

"In dealing with the distribution of goods is the wholesaler a factor?" Mr. McKay asked.

"He is an economic factor. He secures the goods from all parts of the world in such quantities as to be able to distribute them to the retail trade as they require them," Mr. Blain replied.

"What do you say as to the necessity of this system?"

"I do not know a more direct or more economical distribution than through the wholesale trade."

"What do you say about certain manufactured lines being sold through the wholesale trade?"

"These lines are not regular wholesale lines. They could be distributed by the manufacturer, but through the wholesale trade they can be distributed cheaper."

Mr. Blain here spoke of some of the accomplishments of the association, what it has done in the interest of the trade and of the ultimate consumer.

Never Try to Fix Prices

"As an association we have never endeavored to fix any price," he added.

"Have you endeavored to exclude competition?"

"No. I have always maintained that the manufacturer has a right to fix his price, but as an association we have never taken any part in the fixing of prices."

"Have you combined to prevent other wholesalers from purchasing goods?"

"No."

The statement is made that you have unduly limited the facilities for manufacture, storing and dealing in commodities? Have you done this?"

"No."

"What would be the effects of the chain store on the wholesale trade if the former continues to carry on?"

"If the chain store developed to the extent that it eliminated the small country store it would result in a monopoly."

Questioned by K. F. Mackenzie, associated with Mr. Roebuck, as to whether it was not a fact that sugar was not a profitable line, Mr. Blain said:

"Take a dollar's worth of sugar. The retailer gets from 8 to 10 cents out of that dollar and the wholesaler gets 4½ cents. We carry it because our customers have got to have it."

"Those who have been opposed to the Wholesalers' Association have held that the manufacturers had no right to name resale prices, and that the association was responsible for this action," Mr. Blain continued. "It is unfair to the wholesale grocer who has to sell to the retail trade for the manufacturer to sell to the retail trade at the same price as to the wholesaler."

Profits on Net Sales 2.12 Per Cent.

Mr. Blain stated that in his own wholesale business, in the past ten years, the company's profits on net sales had been 2.12 per cent., without allowing interest on capital invested. Allowing interest of 7 per cent. on capital, profits were reduced to decimal 44 or 44-100 of one per cent.

"What would be the result if the large retailer is allowed to buy direct?" Mr. McKay asked Mr. Blain.

"It means simply holding an umbrella over the heads of the large retailers, or, in other words, allowing them to do business at the expense of others."

To Mr. Mackenzie Mr. Blain stated that his firm's cost of doing business was between 10 and 11 per cent. on the annual turnover. Stock was turned about seven times a year.

Says Wholesalers Throw Away Profits

Secretary of a Southern Association Contends That Unfair Competition is a Big Cause of Losses And Not So Much Size of Discounts—Urges Taking Proper Margins

R. J. MACDONALD, secretary of the Georgia Wholesale Grocers' Association, is putting out some pretty hot circulars, which attract attention, says the New York Journal of Commerce, but the one he issues on the subject of the jobber's need for an increased profit "is the climax of frankness, evidently based on the idea that the remedy lies within quite as much as outwardly."

"One of the main reasons," he says, "that so many wholesale grocers find that they are not meeting actual expenses is on account of the uneconomic situation of unfair competition that they have themselves created. If this could be done away with, then the basis of profit on which the business is to-day conducted might be amply sufficient.

"Because practically every wholesale grocer finds that he is unable to make his profits meet his expenses of doing business, the cry is being made by many wholesale grocers throughout the country that they will refuse to handle certain articles unless the percentage margin for resale is very materially advanced. Wholesale grocers' associations throughout the country are also encouraging this attitude instead of advising a study of the situation to find out whether increased profit on resale is necessary.

Reasons for Losses

"Naturally, when we find that our business is unprofitable, and the same condition exists with practically every one else in the same line of business, we come to the conclusion that it is because we are not getting a sufficient margin from the resale of the merchandise we handle. But this is not necessarily the case. In fact, in our opinion, in many cases it is not.

"If all wholesale grocers were taking the profit that they are entitled to; if all wholesale grocers were selling all of their customers on the same price basis, playing no favorites to whom they allowed special concessions; if all wholesale grocers were selling drop shipments of tobaccos, snuffs, cigarettes, soaps, etc., without rebating 5 per cent. or sometimes 10 per cent. of their profit; if all wholesale grocers made such items as sugar carry their fair share of the overhead cost of doing business, and then found that they were not meeting expenses, there might be some excuse for asking the manufacturer to raise his resale price. But, until the wholesale grocer has demonstrated that he cannot do business profitably on the profit already allowed him, he is butting his head up against a stone wall when he demands further margins of profits.

Too Many in Business

"Every increase in margin is just another club to the chain store with which to hit the wholesale grocer, and the retail grocer, over the head. Every increase in margin is just another inducement for some one else to enter the wholesale grocery business, a business in which there are far too many already. Every increase in profit is just an additional argument against the economic necessity of the wholesale grocer, and a further argument in favor of the manufacturer becoming his own distributor.

"What is needed is not increased margins of profit, but the absolute necessity of taking the profit that the wholesale grocer is entitled to. What is wanted is a comprehensive study of the whole situation, a thorough analysis of the distribution of foodstuffs, to find out conclusively where waste can be eliminated. What is required is the elimination of unnecessary duplication of effort and by elimination of unnecessary wholesale grocers and the combination of others effect savings which will permit of the business being conducted on the present margins."

The Income Tax Returns of Partners

The Case of the Merchant Who Gives Goods in Payment for Produce Purchased From Farmers Is Also Dealt With—The Man Who Has Sold Out Must Make Returns for Last Year

Article No. 2, by G. G. YORKE

IN CONTINUING the advice on income tax, I desire to remove all possible obstacles from our readers' path, and while this contribution will deal to large degree with the returns of partners in business I wish to digress for a few minutes in order to deal with produce bought by our readers in rural districts fom their farmer customers and on which the storekeeper makes next to no profit. If he breaks even after allowing for lost egg cases, breakages, and Spring market changes, without counting the time of himself and clerks, he does fine.

Open Produce Account

In most cases produce is taken in for goods traded out. Should there be a few dollars coming to the farmer's wife, the merchant pays out the difference in cash. Now where does he get off at in making his income tax return if he shows his total purchases of produce in detail as goods bought for re-sale, and enters into daily cash sales the amounts of cheques he receives from the wholesale produce firms, and which go into his annual sales, but, on which he makes no profit whatever?

The one best way is to set aside in a separate drawer, or open a new account at your bank, name it "Produce Account," sufficient funds to take care of your purchases for two weeks, say $500.00. Pay from it for all produce bought, and pay into it all cheques received from your wholesale produce firms. It involves very little time or labor, and will save a world of trouble when making your returns, for it is purely an exchange account, and can be ignored altogether when making the income tax return, except you will enter the sum involved in the assets column on page 4 as "cash in hand or at bank."

Two Classes of Partnership

There are two classes of partnerships, active and sleeping. The active partner participates in managing or other active direction of the business and takes his share of the net profits derived from it. He is entitled to a "tax free" income of $1,000.00 if unmarried, also the usual allowances on tax free Victory Bonds. If he be married, his "tax free" income is $2,000.00, the usual allowance of $200 for each child under 18 years, and rebate on tax free Victory Bonds.

Each partner will make out and sign identically similar returns, but showing at foot of page 4 his own share of the net profits, deducting his own personal allowances and enclosing his own cheque to the inspector of taxation. Partners will of course observe last week's instruction regarding pages 2 and 3; where other items enter into their individual cases, they must show every source of income and expenditure required by the department.

A sleeping partner, that is, a person having an investment in a business at a fixed rate of interest, and who receives it regardless of how much or little the store is making in profits, need not make a return of the expenses account. He will show profits, or interest, derived from the business, and state rate of interest thereon—upon page 2 of his income tax return sheet.

Must Still Make Returns

A few days ago a merchant sold out his business. After doing so he asked me if he would be required to make a return of his trading account for last year? I answered yes, just as correctly as if he held the business to-day, for this return deals exclusively with trading in 1920, and does not take into consideration the development of the present year which will require a separate return a year hence.

Real merchants, those who keep common sense books and make their periodical stock-takings, will easily make the grade. But the slipshod, rule of thumb fellow, who guesses everything, including his profits, will receive a rude jolt at the hands of the Inspector of Taxation this year.

FLOUR BUSINESS IN CHINA PROSPEROUS

In recent years the flour business in China has been prosperous. There are more than twenty large flour mills in Shanghai which produce on an average of about 46,000 bags daily. Last year the total output amounted to about 17,000,000 bags. Each week about ten thousand bags are exported to Great Britain, the United States and Japan. Before the European war large quantities were exported to Russia, but now the United States is the largest customer. In the whole country the flour products in one year amounted to about 48,000,000 bags, nearly one-third of which is produced in Shanghai. The value of exports is estimated at about 11,000,000 Taels each year—British Chamber of Commerce Journal.

Food Regulations Now in Effect

Important Facts in Connection With the Selling of Foods, With Which Every Grocer Should Be Acquainted—A Careful Perusal is Advised

Certified Milk

Milk sold as certified milk shall comply with the following requirements:

(a) It shall be taken from cows, semi-annually subjected to the tuberculin test, and found without reaction.

(b) It shall contain not more than 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimetre from June to September, and not more than 5,000 bacteria per cubic centimetre from October to May inclusive.

(c) It shall be free from blood, pus, or disease producing organisms.

(d) It shall be free from disagreeable odour or taste.

(e) It shall have undergone no pasteurization or sterilization and must be free from chemical preservatives.

(f) It shall have been cooled to 45 degrees Fah. within half an hour after milking, and kept at that temperature until delivered to the consumer.

(g) It shall contain 12 to 13 per cent. of milk solids, of which at least 3.5 per cent. is fat.

(h) It shall be from a farm whose herd is inspected monthly by the veterinarian, and whose employees are examined monthly by a physician.

Condensed Milk (Sweetened Condensed Milk)

Is milk from which a considerable portion of water has been evaporated, and to which sugar has been added. It contains, all tolerances being allowed for, not less than twenty-eight (28) per cent. of milk solids and not less than eight (8) per cent. of milk fat.

Evaporated Milk (Unsweetened Condensed Milk)

Is milk from which a considerable portion of water has been evaporated, and contains, all tolerances being allowed for, not less than twenty-five and five-tenths (25.5) per cent. of milk solids, and not less than seven and eight-tenths (7.8) per cent. of milk fat.

Sub-Standard Concentrated Milk

It is not forbidden to sell milk which has been concentrated either with or without sugar, to a less degree than Condensed Milk or Evaporated Milk, but such milk must be labelled Sub-Standard Concentrated Milk, and neither upon the label, nor upon any descriptive matter, shall it be described as Condensed Milk, Evaporated Milk, or Sterilized Milk, because these terms are legally defined.

Sub-Standard Concentrated Milk shall be labelled in such a way as correctly to inform the purchaser regarding its content in milk fat, and in total milk solids.

Skimmed Milk Products

Skimmed Milk, Separated Milk, (Machine Skimmed) Milk, Etc.

May be sold in condensed form, essentially resembling the articles made from whole milk, and described in Sections 8 and 9 above, with the difference that they do not contain milk fat.

In all these products the word Skimmed shall appear on the label in letters not less than one quarter of an inch in height.

Condensed Skimmed Milk, Condensed Separated (Machine Skimmed) Milk

Is skimmed milk or separated (machine skimmed) milk from which a considerable portion of water has been evaporated, and to which sugar has been added. It contains, all tolerances being allowed for, not less than twenty-eight (28) per cent. of milk solids.

Butter Milk

Is the product that remains when butter is separated from cream by the usual churning processes; or a similar product made by the appropriate treatment of skimmed milk.

Goat's Milk, Ewe's Milk, Etc.

Are the fresh, clean lacteal secretions, free from colostrum, obtained by the complete milking of healthy animals other than cows, properly fed and kept, and conform in name to the species of animals from which they are obtained.

Cream

Cream is that portion of milk, rich in milk fat, which rises to the surface of milk on standing, or is separated from it by centrifugal force, is fresh and clean and contains (unless otherwise specified) not less than eighteen (18) per cent. of milk fat.

When guaranteed to contain another percentage of milk fat than eighteen per cent. (18%) it must conform to such guarantee.

Cream must be entirely free from gelatine, sucrate of lime, gums or other substances added with a view to give density, consistency or apparent thickness to the article.

Cream must contain no preservative of any kind, except that it may contain Boric Acid not in excess of one part in four hundred (1 in 400) and the presence of the preservative must be declared.

Evaporated Cream, Clotted Cream, Condensed Cream, or any other preparation purporting to be a special cream, except Ice Cream, must conform to the definition of cream, and must contain at least twenty-five (25) per cent. of milk fat.

Milk Fat or Butter Fat

Milk fat, Butter fat, is the fat of milk and has a Reichert-Meissl number not less than twenty-four (24) and a Specific Gravity not less than 0.905.

$$\frac{40^\circ\ C}{40^\circ\ C}$$

Butter

Butter is the clean, non-rancid product made by the gathering in any manner the fat of fresh or ripened milk or cream into a mass, which also contains a small portion of the other milk constituents with or without salt, and contains not less than eighty (80) per cent. of milk fat, and not more than sixteen (16) per cent. of water. Butter may also contain added coloring matter of harmless character.

Whey Butter is butter which has been recovered from whey, a by-product of the manufacture of cheese. Whey Butter must possess the same fat content, and the same limit for water as butter above defined; must be labelled Whey Butter.

Cheese

Cheese is the sound, solid and ripened product made from milk or cream by coagulating the casein thereof with rennet or lactic acid with or without the addition of ripening ferments and seasoning, and contains in the water-free substance not less than forty-five (45) per cent. of milk fat. Cheese may also contain added coloring of harmless character.

Skim Milk Cheese is the sound, solid and ripened product made from skim milk by coagulating the casein thereof with rennet or lactic acid with or without the addition of ripening ferments and seasoning.

Goat's Milk Cheese, Ewe's Milk Cheese, etc., are the sound, ripened products made from the milk of the animals specified, by coagulating the casein thereof with rennet or lactic acid with or without the addition of ripening ferments and seasoning.

Ice Cream

Ice Cream is a frozen product made from cream and sugar with or without harmless flavoring and coloring materials and with or without gelatine, gum tragacanth, or other harmless stiffening materials, in amount less than two (2) per cent.; and contains not less than seven (7) per cent. of milk fat.

Fruit Ice Cream is a frozen product, made as described under Ice Cream, but containing sound, clean and mature fruit. It must contain not less than six (6) per cent. of milk fat.

Nut Ice Cream is a frozen product, made as described under ice cream, but containing sound, non-rancid nuts. It must contain not less than six (6) per cent. of milk fat.

Miscellaneous Milk Products

Whey is the product remaining after the removal of fat and casein from milk in the process of cheese-making.

Kumiss is the product made by the alcoholic fermentation of mare's milk or cow's milk.

Milk Powder is the soluble powder product made from milk, and contains, unless otherwise specified, not less than ninety-five (95) per cent. of milk solids, and not less than twenty-six (26) per cent. of milk fat.

Skimmed Milk Powder, Separated (machine skimmed) Milk Powder, is the soluble powder product made from skimmed milk, separated (machine skimmed) milk, and contains not less than ninety-five (95) per cent. of milk solids. The word "Skimmed" shall appear on the label in letters not less than one-quarter of an inch in height.

Malted Milk

Is the product made by combining whole milk with the liquid separated from a mash of ground barley malt and wheat flour, with or without the addition of sodium chloride, sodium bicarbonate, and potassium bicarbonate, in such manner as to secure the full enzymic action of the malt extract and by removing water. The resulting product contains not less than seven and one-half per cent. (7.5%) of butter fat, and not more than three and one-half (3.5%) of moisture.

Homogenized Milk

Is milk which has been treated by a machine known as a homogenizer. By the action of this machine the fat globules of milk are broken, and the fat tends to remain in permanent emulsion. The food value of the milk is not affected by this treatment; and its constants remain as in Section 1.

XVII.—Molasses, Etc.

1. Massecuite, melada, mush sugar and concrete are products made by evaporating tho purified juice of a sugar-producing plant, or a solution of sugar, to a solid or semi-solid consistence, and in which the sugar chiefly exists in a crystalline state.

2. Molasses is the product left after separating the sugar from massecuite, melada, mush sugar or concrete, and contains not more than twenty-five per cent. (25%) of water and not more than five per cent. (5%) of ash.

3. Refiners' syrup, treacle, is the residual liquid product obtained in the process of refining raw sugars, and contains not more than twenty-five per cent. (25%) of water and not more than eight per cent. (8%) of ash.

Pepper

1. Black Pepper is the dried immature berry of Piper nigrum and contains not less than six (6) per cent. of non-volatile ether extract, and not more than seven (7) per cent. of total ash, not more than two (2%) of ash insoluble in hydrochloric acid. extract; not more than four (4) per cent.

2. Ground Black Pepper is the product made by grinding the entire berry, as above, and contains the several parts of the berry in their normal proportions.

3. White Pepper is the dried mature berry of Piper nigrum, from which the outer coating, or the outer and inner coatings have been removed, and contains not less than six (6) per cent. of non-volatile ether of total ash; not more than five-tenths (0.5) per cent. of ash insoluble in hydrochloric acid.

4. Ground White Pepper is the product made by grinding the berry as above described, and conforms in its composition to the standards as above for White Pepper.

Preservatives

Foods intended for export may contain preservatives, provided that both in specific character and in amount such preservatives do not conflict with regulations in force in the country to which export is made.

It is forbidden to add any preservatives whatever to milk, or any other preservatives than those in Class 1 to foods intended for the use of infants or invalids.

Class 1

Preservatives which may be used without declaration of their presence, provided that such use does not conflict with any other statutory regulations:

Common Salt.
Sugar.
Saltpetre.
Wood Smoke.
Vinegar.
Acetic Acid.
Spices.
Alcohol.

Class II

Preservatives which may be used until further notice, provided that no more than one kind of preservative substance, named in this list, shall be added to any one kind of food, or to any mixture of two or more kinds of food; that the amount of preservative shall not exceed the maximum amount herein named, and the presence of the preservative shall be declared on the main panel of the main label.

Regarding this class of preservatives it is to be noted that toleration of their use is dependent upon the fact that available evidence concerning their physiological action is not considered sufficient to prove that under the prescribed regulations they are harmful to health in such degree as to bring them under Section 3 (f) of the Food and Drugs Act, which reads as follows:

"Food shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of this Act, if it contains any added poisonous ingredient, or any ingredient which may render it injurious to the health of the person consuming it, whether added with intent or otherwise."

Should satisfactory evidence of the harmfulness to health of any of the preservatives named in Class II be forthcoming, such preservatives would immediately fall under the condemnation of the Food and Drugs Act and foods containing such preservatives would be declared to be adulterated:

1. Boric Acid (Boracic Acid) or Borax.
   Limit: 1 part in 400 Cream.
   Limit: 1 part in 200 butter and other foods.
2. Benzoic Acid (Benzoate of Soda).
   Limit: 1 part in 1000 parts.
3. Salicylic Acid.
   Limit: 1 part in 5000 parts.
4. Sulphurous Acid (Bisulphite of Soda, Potash or Lime).
   Limit: 1 part in 10000 parts in beverages.
   Limit: 1 part in 2000 parts in solid foods.
5. Saccharin.
   Limit: 1 part in 1500 parts in beverages.
   Limit: 1 part in 700 parts in solid foods.

Note.—This substance shall not be used to take the place of sugar in any food in which sugar is employed as a source of nutriment, or for its feeding value. Where sugar is used only as a sweetener, saccharin may replace it under the conditions defined above.

Class III

Preservative substances which are prohibited from use in foods:

Formaldehyde (Formalin).
Beta-Napthol.
Abrastol (Asaprol).
Hydrofluoric Acid.
Flucrides.
Fluo-Borates.
Fluo-Silicates or other Fluorine compounds.

Sugar

1. Sugar is the product chemically known as Sucrose (Saccharose) and is at the present time found in commerce as obtained from Sugar cane, Sugar beets, Sorghum, Maple and Palm.

2. Sugar whether sold as granulated, loaf, cut, milled or powdered sugar shall contain at least 99.5 (ninety-nine and five tenths) per cent. of sucrose and shall be free from any artificial coloring matter, unless declaration of the fact is made.

3. Icing sugar is a powdered sugar especially prepared for bakers' use and may contain starch, not to exceed five (5) per cent. by weight.

Tea

Tea is the leaves and buds of various species of the genus Camella, prepared by the usual trade processes, and conforms in variety and place of production to the name it bears. Tea is required to fulfil the following requirements:

Botanical Characters.—The structure of the leaf is that of Camella species.

Total Ash.—Shall not be less than 4 per cent., nor more than 7 per cent. of the dry tea (Dry Tea means dried to constant weight at 100° C.).

Water Soluble Ash.—Shall not be less than 3 per cent. of the weight of the dry tea.

Extractive.—The matter soluble in water, under the conditions described below, shall not be less than 33 per cent. in green teas, not less than 30 per cent. in black teas, these percentages being calculated upon the dry tea.

Conditions for Determining Extractive

A fair sample of the dry tea is powdered so as to pass through a sieve 1-8-inch mesh.

2.5 grammes of the powdered tea are treated with 225cc cold, distilled water in a glass flask of about 500cc capacity and fitted with a cork, and glass tube of about 25 inches long, and 1-2-inch diameter, or with a reflux condenser. The flask is rapidly heated until the water boils, and boiling is continued for one hour.

The whole contents are transferred to a 250cc flask and made up to the mark at about 70° C. A filtrate of 50cc (filtered hot) is evaporated to dryness, and weighed. The weight of the residue multiplied by 200 is extractive per cent.

Vinegar

1. Vinegar is a more or less colored liquid, consisting essentially of impure, dilute acetic acid, obtained by the oxidation of wine, beer, cider, or other alcoholic liquid.

2. The term Acetic Acid in the above and in the following clauses is to be understood to mean Acetic anhydride, $C_4H_6O_3$ molecular weight—102; equivalent—51.

One cubic centimetre of normal soda neutralizes 0.051 gramme of Acetic Acid. Hence the number of cubic centimetres of normal soda required to neutralize 100 grammes of Vinegar, when multiplied by 0.051, gives the percentage weight of Acetic Acid contained in the Vinegar.

When the Vinegar is measured instead of being weighed the number of cubic centimetres of normal soda required to neutralize 100 cc of the Vinegar, multiplied by 0.051, gives the percentage weight of acetic acid in 100 volumes of the Vinegar and is stated as percentage of weight in volume.

3. Vinegar shall contain not less than three and one-half (3.5) per cent.; and not more than ten and one-half (10.5) per cent. of Acetic Acid.

4. Wine Vinegar is vinegar made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetous fermentation of the juice of grapes.

5. Spirit Vinegar; Alcohol Vinegar, Grain Vinegar is vinegar made by the acetous fermentation of diluted distilled alcohol.

6. Malt Vinegar is vinegar made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetous fermentation, without distillation, of an infusion of Malt, with or without the addition of other cereals. It is dextrorotatory and contains in 100 cc not less than 1.8 grammes of solids, and not less than 0.2 gramme ash.

7. Cider Vinegar, Apple Vinegar, is vinegar made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetous fermentation of the juice of apples. It is laevorotatory and contains in 100 cc not less than 1.6 grammes of apple solids, of which not more than fifty (50) p.c. is reducing sugars; and not less than 0.25 gramme of apple ash. The water soluble ash from 100cc contains not less than ten milligrammes of phosphoric acid (P_2O_5) and requires not less than 30 cc of decinormal acid to neutralize its alkalinity. 100cc of the vinegar contains not less than 0.15 gramme of glycerin.

8. Vinegar may be made by the acetous fermentation of dilute alcoholic liquids, whose alcohol may have its origin in the fermentation of fruit sugars of various kinds, or ordinary sugar. Such vinegar should bear distinctive names, indicating the source of the saccharine matter.

9. Blended Vinegar is made by mixing two or more of the above varieties of vinegar.

10. Artificial Vinegar, Imitation Vinegar, Vinegar Substitute, Acetar, etc., are solutions of pure Acetic Acid within the limits of strength of vinegar, which acid is not wholly the product of alcoholic and subsequent acetous fermentation.

11. Concentrated Vinegar, Vinegar Essence is a liquid containing more than ten and one-half (10.5) per cent. of acetic acid, whose acetic acid is entirely the product of the acetous fermentation of alcohol.

12. Concentrated Artificial Vinegar, or Concentrated Imitation Vinegar or Imitation Vinegar Essence is a liquid containing more than ten and one-half (10.5) per cent. Acetic Acid, such acetic acid being in whole or in part derived from other sources than the acetous fermentation of alcohol.

13. Concentrated Vinegar, Vinegar Essence and Concentrated Artificial Vinegar, etc., as defined in sections 11 and 12, shall not be offered for sale when the acetic acid content is above twenty-five (25) per cent., unless labelled in such a way as to show plainly that the article is poisonous unless diluted with at least an equal amount of water.

14. In the case of Blended Vinegars, if the varieties of vinegar forming the blend are named, the names shall be printed in the same sized type; and that variety whose name is first mentioned must be present in largest amount.

"Do Not Put Too Much in Windows"

Tendency is to Try and Feature too Many Lines in the One Display—A Display of One Line or a Few Items of Several Similar Lines is the Only Effective Plan

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A MAN sent me this puzzle: "I buy 100 articles to sell at $10.00, $3.00 and 50 cents each. How many of each must I sell to get $100?" I do not know whether there is a catch in this, but I figure it this way:

90 at 50c is	$ 45.00
5 at $3 is	15.00
4 at $10 is	40.00
Total	$100.00

I suspect that it is required that we dispose of the entire lot of 100. If so, I give up and ask the answer. If not, here is 99 per cent. sold! But the $100 can be obtained by selling six for 50 cents, nine for $3 and seven for $10. This will dispose of only 22 articles.

Anybody know the solution, or whether this of mine is right or wrong?

In a small Canadian city lives the best grocer I know. He did $119.000 in 1919 with only $5,500 of stock. Thus he turned his stock more than seventeen times. He earned just short of seven and a quarter per cent. net. This summer he took a trip back to his birthplace in England. He could afford to do it! I like him for having the ability to leave his business so organized that he felt safe in going. He wrote me on his return a few weeks since.

The Traveled Grocer

Dear Sir,—We arrived back here September 27th. We came on the Empress of France and with the exception of a touch of seasickness entering the St. Lawrence everything was the best we could wish for. The weather was very unfavorable for getting around much, still we did a little travelling and I had a trip through the Highlands of Scotland as well. We found lots of work and business with high wages and very expensive living. The business methods seemed rather odd to me after an experience in Canada. I found what is also common in this country, that very little attention is paid to window dressing and even where an attempt is made too much is placed in the window, or a real mixup of a little of everything, which does not appeal to my taste. Cost accounting is an unknown quantity except in some of the larger stores. . . . I have read most of your articles. One gave the shrink on bananas and that was interesting to me. I would like to see more on a similar line. As I explained in a former letter, I will try to get some more facts along the line of shrinkage, known and unknown. It seems to me that a good deal of it happens in weighing up when the customers are at the counter. To eliminate some of this I am having tea, sugar, rice, etc., put up in 25c, 50c and $1.00 packets ready for handing out to the customers. . . . Since my return I find we are having a repetition of what happened in 1910-12. Everybody thinks there is a fortune to be made quickly in the grocery trade, so we are having them open up all around. Blanks, who were running a chain of stores when you were here, have changed to cash and carry, with a delivery charge of 20c per order if anyone wants delivery. This general condition has meant a good deal of price cutting. . . . We had a successful lemon display a few weeks ago, adopting the 39c per dozen idea and sold quite a bunch of them. It was very inexpensive as a display. We made a lattice work out of lumber in the car, which cost nothing. All real expense was some crepe paper and the price card. The crepe was white and blue and the lemons against that background made a very attractive picture. I send photograph, thinking you may like to see it. . . . With kind regards, sincerely yours.

This young man has been on this side the Atlantic for about twelve years. When he landed here he had nothing. He went to work for a grocer, saved, took over the store when it ran on the rocks, shouldering a debt of $3,000. Now he owns it, clear, has money ahead, makes a greater average net earnings than any other grocer I know of, and can take a vacation! How's that for a record?

Storing Up New Ideas

Does it pay? I think it does. None of us realizes how we ourselves change in a new environment. It takes a trip back home to grasp that. But in the grasping we get it with a force that makes an indelible impression on us. So what we see we make useful in our business for years ahead. There is, in fact, no educator like travel.

I am not surprised that he found methods very different. I remember how odd they seemed to me when last I was across. But I am surprised to learn that grocers are not scientific in Britain. I thought they were very exact. Probably this is because we learn about them through their association news, and naturally the best specimens are in their associations. Maybe Canadian grocers look good to Englishmen, looking across the pond. Who knows?

My friend is right about window displays. All of us tend to put too much in our windows—on the rare occasions when we make any attempt at dressing or decoration. Yet window artists know that the display of one line or a few items of several similar lines is the only effective plan. Moreover, it is known now to those who study such things that a display should be dressed low down. We must remember that the looker stands close to the window; that the eye travels downward, and that hence the floor of the window is the place to put things to be seen.

Cost accounting? Why, that is something almost unknown in our stores. Grocers everywhere tell me that "it is too much trouble," or "I just can't get the hang of it." Yet is there a thing about the business that does not depend on the grocer's knowing exactly what his goods cost, what is the cost of handling them, what ratio the various classes should bear?

Knowing vs Going It Blind

So well do I remember how, over twenty-five years ago, I was puzzling over what margin different groceries should bear. I talked with a friend of mine also in the business. His reply was: "O, don't bother about that! Get what you can. Get what others get. Go it blind, like the rest of us!" That did not appeal to me, nor did I rest until I had formulated ratios which I determined, from observation and experience, were right for different articles. My friend who "went it blind" failed—quit so far below zero that he never recovered. And that is apt to be the ending of such practitioners. For it's bad to play with your life as though it could be a game of luck or chance. It is going to be hard to "play in luck" on such a plan during the years that lie immediately before us.

Shrinkage on all lines of goods is one thing that must engage our attention. This covers not merely shrink on bananas and other so-called perishables, but all lines. We must remember the loss through mice, when a sack of flour is bitten into—not only the direct loss, but the time consumed in sewing up the hole or resacking. All such things must be remembered, for all of them cost real money. My correspondent's reference to "known and unknown" shrinkage is exceedingly timely. I also would like more stories of actual experiences with ascertaining and stopping similar leaks. We cannot know too much about such things. Packaging in advance will save a lot of this leakage, as he indicates.

"Easy Money" in Groceries

How is it that so many think there is easy money to be made in selling groceries? I think it is the penalty of success. This man makes money and is so evidently successful that those who see his prosperity cannot believe that there is hard work and exact knowledge behind his success. He looks just like the ordinary run of men—until you have been with him and talked with him a while. Then, if you know the business, you realize that he knows it with almost exhaustive thoroughness. This is a point the greenhorn cannot get. He must have his try and lose his money, nor does there seem to be any way to save him.

The lemon story just illustrates again that the merchant who is a seller of merchandise is apt to be successful. Most grocers are buyers—few are real sellers. My correspondent of this week is both!

Wanted: A Square Deal in Accounting

Dear Sir:—I have a problem for solution. Mr. X is employed by a firm that runs two stores. He buys for both stores. All bills come to him and he receives all goods. The man who runs the other store sends to X for different articles, say ten boxes of apples, one case of corn, which order is filled and X charges what is supplied to the other store. The transaction in the office is recorded as a cash sale. Supposing both stores sell $5,000 in a month, how should both stock sheets be correctly figured? . . . I am X in question. Have had years of experience. Before the people for whom I work opened the second store, everything was fine and dandy, but now I find that when I am charged for the goods for the other store and I charge it at cost for what it gets from me, my stock sheets show a poor profit. It seems to me that the goods purchased for the other store should be struck off my purchase account entirely and allowance made for the profit I lose on the transfer.

The contention of my correspondent seems as plain, simple and square as anything could well be. If a man is doing $5,000 per month and showing a normal profit thereon and then, instead of having $4,000 worth of goods charged to him he has $8,000 worth, and then is compelled to sell $4,000 worth at cost, his sales will show up as $9,000. But his earnings in dollars and cents are not greater on the $9,000 than they were on the $5,000, hence are greatly reduced in ratio.

Suppose the absolute net earnings were $150 per month on the $5,000 sales. That would show up to three per cent. on sales, and would be creditable. Now if there are $9,000 sales and still only $150 net earnings, the ratio shrinks to one and two-thirds per cent.

There are two ways to handle this problem. If store number one is to buy for store number two—if the one buyer is to give his knowledge and skill to the second store—then store number two must either pay a salary to the manager or a definite margin on goods transferred. Given absolute laid-in cost in store number one, every expense should be added when transfer is to be made—drayage, handling—and then a margin of, say, two per cent. should be added to each invoice. Or the manager can be paid a salary by the second store. It might begin at, say, $35 per month and be increased as business grew. Then goods might be transferred at cost plus all charges and shrinkages.

Then store number one, in the second instance, would show earnings of $2,240 per year. On $9,000 that would be nearly 2½ per cent. and the increase in volume would justify the lessened percentage because the earnings would be greater in amount. In the first instance the earnings would be $2,600, or just short of the three per cent. now averaged.

Fruit Crops Will Be a Fair Average

Open Winter Has Apparently Had No Damaging Effect Upon the Trees and Vines—Prospects Look Promising if No Heavy Frosts Now Occur

THERE is every indication that the fruit crops this year will be a fair average, providing weather conditions continue favorable. The open winter has apparently had no damaging effect upon the trees and vines, and from interviews with growers in the Niagara peninsula Canadian Grocer has learned that the prospects look very promising, although it is yet a little early to make any definite predictions. Many of the plants are further advanced than usual at this season, and severe frosts now would seriously cut down the crop. The present condition of the various fruits averages as follows:

Strawberries.—The plants have wintered fairly well and patches which were well covered are in good condition, whereas patches that were not covered are sure to be more or less damaged. Growers do not look for as heavy a crop as either 1919 or 1920. The acreage is slightly increased this year.

Raspberries.—At present they look exceptionally well and with the mild winter weather there was practically no freezing of the canes. There should be a big crop if weather conditions from now on are favorable.

Red and black currants and gooseberries.—These are very far advanced and look promising for a good crop. Heavy frosts will do considerable damage.

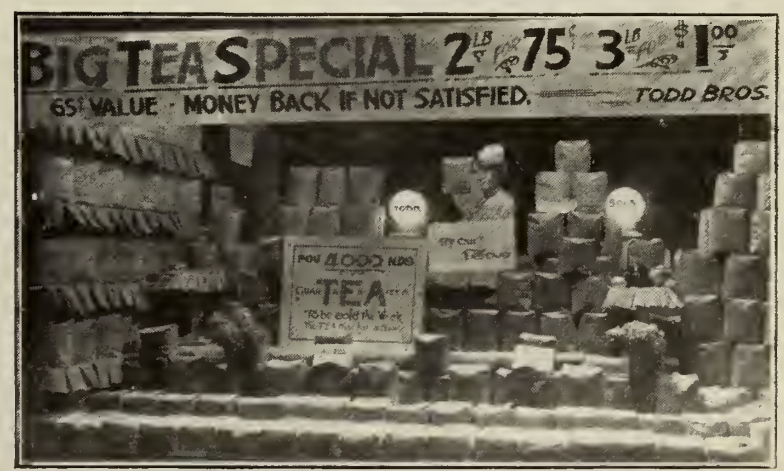
Peaches.—These promise to be a good average yield and there seems to be a goodly number of fruit buds.

Plums and apples.—It is rather early to gather anything definite about these fruits, but in view of the exceptionally large crops last year, it is expected that the crops this year will be light.

Sweet cherries.—The buds swell very early and are now quite far advanced. Frosts under the present condition would undoubtedly do some damage.

Sour cherries.—This variety promises to be a fair crop.

Sells Nearly 2,000 Lbs. of Tea In a Week From a Display



Widow display of tea put in by Todd Bros., Guelph, Ont. In sending in this photo A. H. Todd said: "We have had quite a selling campaign on tea. During the week we sold nearly 2,000 pounds, which we consider well worth the effort." The window was dressed by George Price.

WHAT ABOUT THE TAX ON TEA?

IS the tax on tea likely to be increased? This is a question that many of the importers are asking themselves at the present time. In fact, this sentiment is expressed by some in very forceful terms and one importer stated that he would not be surprised if the tax was raised to 25 cents per pound. Another large importer said they have received a shipment of one thousand chests of tea and they were immediately taking it out of bond instead of leaving the shipment in bond, as is the usual custom, and clearing from the Customs as required.

There is already a tax of seven and ten cents per pound on tea, and it has been one of the easiest taxes to collect simply because the public generally are not aware of the fact. There never was a time when revenue was needed so badly to the country or a time when it was so difficult to collect. Revenue must be raised. But why increase the tax on a commodity that is already bearing its share of the burden?

The consensus of opinion, generally, is that turnover tax should be placed at the source of manufacture or import, and there is no better example of its feasibility than as evidenced on tea.

BUYING SPACE IN NEWSPAPERS

THERE has just come to our desk a copy of a daily newspaper of a recent date containing the advertisement of a merchant who continues to advertise "Christmas Groceries and Fruits."

The space occupied by this advertisement is 4½ by 6 inches in size and no doubt cost the merchant quite a sum of money—money spent that will bring the merchant absolutely no return for his investment. Buying space in newspapers is splendid investment if that space contains some real live news or tells something about some seasonable merchandise, saying it in such a way that it will create in the minds of the readers a desire to possess that article.

It may have been an oversight on the part of the merchant who advertises Christmas goods in March, but it would have been a small matter for the newspaper to have drawn the merchant's attention to it and thereby save both him and the paper a certain amount of ridicule.

WHOLESALERS' PROFITS

ON another page of this issue is an interesting little article on the question of wholesalers' profits. It comes from the pen of the secretary of the Georgia Wholesale Grocers' Association, and is reproduced from the New York Journal of Commerce. He contends that the wholesalers' complaint that they are not getting a sufficient margin from the resale of the merchandise they are handling is not the real fact of the matter. The whole truth of the case, he frankly admits, is that wholesale grocers, in the majority of instances, are not taking the profits that are rightly theirs. There has been too much difference of prices to different customers, too much allowing special concessions to favorites, too much rebating five and ten per cent. on drop shipments of tobaccos, soaps, etc., and not making such a commodity as sugar carry a fair share of the overhead cost of doing business.

The assertion in this article that sugar is not made to carry its proper apportionment of costs, and sold at a sufficient profit, is borne out, it would seem, in the statement of a Canadian wholesale grocer, in his evidence before the court this week, and which is reported in this issue. He stated that out of the sale of one dollar's worth of sugar in a retail store, the wholesalers' portion of the transaction was four and a half cents. He admitted that sugar was not a profitable line, but must be carried for the customers' convenience.

Let the wholesaler take the profits that belong to him, and let him so study his distribution of foodstuffs that his costs are more evenly spread over his various commodities, that one line is not merely carried along at the expense of another. If the wholesaler takes his proper margins on all the commodities that he carries, he will not have occasion to worry about increased margins on resale of manufacturers' goods.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

A CERTAIN chain store recently launched a unique idea for increasing the sale of oranges. In each of their stores they placed a box of the small size oranges beside the cash register and instructed the cashier to ask permission of customers to give them an orange instead of a copper in change.

In an early morning fire at Coatsworth, Ont., the store of A. C. Martin was completely destroyed. The blaze started in the store while Mr. Martin and family were away visiting friends at Wheatley and spread to adjoining premises, causing a loss of $15,000.

New Canadian Manager For Postum Cereal

R. K. McIntosh has become general manager for Canada of the Canadian Postum Cereal Co. Mr. McIntosh's name is a familiar one among the cereal trade of the country, also to the wholesale grocery trade.

For some years he was with the Canadian Cereal & Milling Co. Five years ago he joined the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., of London, Ont., and has been manager of that company up to the present time. Now he becomes the Canadian general manager of the Postum Cereal Co. His headquarters will be in Toronto. He still, therefore, retains his connection with the cereal trade with which he has been associated for so long a time.

WALTER M. LOWNEY, CANDY MANUFACTURER, HAS PASSED AWAY

Atlantic City, N.J., April 7.—Walter M. Lowney, of Boston, widely known candy manufacturer, died suddenly at a hotel here on Monday of heart disease. He was 65 years old. Mr. Lowney was born at Sebec, Maine, and was educated in the public schools of Bangor. He married Nettie Bolton, of Bangor, in 1877.

Foreign Enquiries For Canadian Foodstuffs

Manufacturers desiring names of foreign buyers as referred to below can secure them by writing Canadian Grocer, University Avenue, Toronto, and giving number of enquiry.

2827. Foodstuffs for Bohemia.—A society of traders at Prague, Bohemia, wish to get into touch with Canadian exporters of wheat, rye, lard, evaporated, condensed or powdered milk, and other produce.

2828. Canned goods.—A manufacturers' representative in good standing wishes to obtain a Canadian agency for canned meats and canned fish for Barbados.

2829. Apples.—A Cape Town commission agent, in close touch with fruit buyers throughout South Africa, desires to correspond with New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, or British Columbia exporters of Canadian apples with a view to securing shipments of 1921 crop.

Would Welcome Canadian Goods in British West Indies

A Canadian Spending the Winter in the Bahamas Writes Canadian Grocer U.S. Goods Predominate, Much to the Regret of British Subjects in the Islands

THE following interesting letter was recently received by Canadian Grocer from Morley Pettit, who is on a trip to the British West Indies. Mr. Pettit is a member of the Pettit Apiaries, Georgetown, Ont.

The Editor, Canadian Grocer:

After several winters in different parts of Southern Florida I am enjoying my first winter in an island of the British West Indies. Being a loyal Canadian it gives me pleasure to find that such delightful winter weather exists on British soil. We have been here for over a month already and have not yet experienced such oppressive heat nor such chilling cold as we would be sure to have endured in plenty during that time in Florida. In fact the climate is so far ahead of anything in Florida, according to my experience, and the natural attractions of the place are so great that it is a source of amazement to me that so many Canadians spend their time and money in that state and so very few find these delightful British isles of eternal sunshine.

Enterprising Americans

Our progressive neighbors of the U.S.A. are by no means so slow in finding out a good thing, for in spite of the fact that it is next to impossible to pry loose in New York or in Florida any information about the place or how to get here, they are coming here by the scores and hundreds. They are coming not only for rest and relaxation and to escape the Great American desert, as it were, but they are rapidly taking up all the good business opportunities both as to the products and the imports. Although the inhabitants of all colors and sexes are to a man intensely loyal subjects of the King they have small option but to sell all their products to and to buy all their supplies from some enterprising American firms.

"Made-in-U.S.A." Goods

I am not a grocer nor manufacturer, only a producer of one line which grocers handle, but I have been doing a lot of thinking since coming here. The grocery stores are stocked with practically everything that Canadian firms advertise in Canadian Grocer columns: grape juice, and jams of all northern fruits, all sorts of prepared foods and tinned meats, flour, tobacco, canned salmon, sardines, etc., oatmeal and cereals, evaporated and condensed milk, tea and coffee, bacon and other cured meats, soap. I have not seen dried apples but dried peaches and apricots are plentiful. Then there are several varieties of northern fruits canned, also corn, peas, tomatoes, etc. Practically without exception these are proudly branded as "Made in U.S.A." When we eagerly grasp a can with a familiar label we find to our regret that it is from the United States factory of the firm we know well at home.

Resent This Condition

The people resent this condition but seem to be powerless to help it. They greet a Canadian almost as a brother. This is true particularly of the younger men, the ones who served in the Great War, many of whom went to Canada to enlist. The older ones who did not have that advantage have a warm feeling but vaguer ideas. One intelligent mechanic in a garage, a white man, finding that I was from Ontario asked if that was not the largest town in Canada. I tried to explain that Ontario was a province. He looked blank and repeated that he knew a man once before who was from Ontario, and he understood that it was a very large town, in fact "the largest town, or province, in Canada." There was nothing more to be said.

Of course lack of transportation has been a hindrance to Canadian business Handle.shr shr shr shr shr shr shrdluu connections heretofore, but there is now a new line of Canadian steamers running from Halifax to Nassau, Kingston and Belise. I understand that as soon as navigation opens in May these steamers will go up to Montreal. The Bahamas have a uniform import duty of 12½ per cent. on practically everything but liquor, and the new Canada-West Indian pact cuts that in half, if I am not mistaken.

Warmly Welcome Canadians

I am sure that representatives of Canadian firms would be warmly welcomed by Nassau dealers, and no doubt they would get good business all through the British colonies in this part of the world. Just one complaint so far have I heard, which by the way shows the temper of the people. It is said that some Canadian firms demanded payment for Canadian goods in New York funds. The story goes that while quite willing to pay United States firms with United States funds, loyal Nassauvians insist on paying Canadian firms with Canadian funds or not at all. Can you blame them? The Royal Bank of Canada has a good live branch here and is quite capable of looking after business of that nature.

Yours very truly,
Morley Pettit.

Toronto Retail Grocers Discuss Early Closing

Toronto, April 5.—The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held this evening, Robert Dowson, president, occupying the chair. The early closing movement was discussed but no new phases in the situation materialized. It was finally decided to let the matter rest until the final reading in the House on the amendment to the Curry bill. A new grip will be taken by getting out a new petition, as it seems that the whole cause of the trouble has been the oversight in waiting too long a period after the petition was signed by the merchants before bringing it before the city council.

Members were urged to send in their income tax returns as soon as possible. J. B. Folk, secretary, read an article from Canadian Grocer on the proper method in making returns for the income tax. Mr. Folk also referrred to another article in Canadian Grocer on the pure food regulations and urged all members who were not receiving the Canadian Grocer to procure a copy containing these articles and file for future reference.

The question of a picnic was discussed but nothing definite was decided. It was finally left to Robert Dowson and J. B. Folk to interview the butchers with the object of joining forces with them for one big outing.

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT IS NOTICEABLE IN BUSINESS

London, Ont.—Discussing with Canadian Grocer the outlook for business, a manufacturer here stated that a great improvement was noticeable.

"We have our full staff of 150 employees back at work again," he said, "and we are expecting that in the course of a couple of weeks if business continues brisk that we will add 50 additional hands.

Joseph Nolan, of the McLeod-Nolan Co., stated that trade is steadily improving and that the outlook in the Western provinces is particularly good.

SEVERAL SMALL SUGAR BEET FACTORIES

London, Ont.—One result of the failure of the sugar beet growers of this district to accept the contracts of the company may be the location of several small factories at various points. Negotiations are already under way for the location of a sugar beet factory at Dresden. Beet growers in the district are ready to contract for 20,000 acres of beets for three years.

NEWS FROM WESTERN CANADA

WESTERN

Reliance Ink Co., Ltd., of Winnipeg, Man., have appointed H. P. Pennock & Co. as agents for Western Canadian territory for Reliance ink, mucilage, water glass, etc.

The United Commercial Travellers of America held a final dance and entertainment at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, Winnipeg, on Saturday evening last. The committee in charge prepared extra attractive features for this occasion. More than 1,400 guests were present.

George McLean, of the G. McLean Company Limited, wholesale grocers, Winnipeg, is confined to his home with a slight attack of la grippe.

W. A. Bowron, of Bowron Bros., Limited, Hamilton, Ont., is on a business trip to Winnipeg this week, covering the territory in the interest of his firm. Stroyan-Dunwoody Company are their Western representatives.

Paul Findlay, perhaps better known to readers of Canadian Grocer as Henry Johnson, Jr., will address a meeting of the Vancouver retail merchants on the evening of April 14.

Stroyan Dunwoody Co., manufacturers' agents and brokers, of Winnipeg, are now established in Fort William, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver. W. W. Stroyan has just returned from a trip to the Coast and he states business is showing a decided improvement. J. M. Dunwoody is now on a trip to the East, where it is his intention to secure Eastern representatives and open offices in Toronto, Montreal and St. John. The firm have taken over the agency for Burdick's marmalade for Alberta.

Wholesale House In Vancouver Now Has New Owners

Vancouver (Special).—One of the older Vancouver wholesale houses changed hands recently with the sale of the A. & A. DesBrisay & Co. business to J. A. Thompson and J. H. Elliott. The business at 116 Water Street will be conducted under the firm style of A. DesBrisay & Co., Ltd., with Mr. Thompson as president and Mr. Elliott as manager.

Mr. Thompson is known to many Winnipeg business men, having been active in the hardware and lumber trades. Mr. Elliott comes from Carnduff, Sask., where he was engaged in the retail grocery business. In fact Mr. Elliott was in every sense a pioneer, having been associated with the grocery business for almost thirty years.

The business as conducted in the past was largely serving the hotel and restaurant trade but the activities of the new concern will be broadened to take in regular wholesale grocery services.

Associated with the new management are H. W. Hodge, lately with A. MacDonald & Co., Vancouver, and R. Baxter, who was associated with the MacDonald Co. in Winnipeg.

Heroine of Loos Is Now Serving In a Grocery

Paris, March 31.—In the remnants of a. street in Bethune, where tin shanties and wooden huts have taken the place of the decent houses which stood there before the war, there is a grocery store which bears on its sign the name "Moreau." Within one can buy a hundred and one things, as is the custom in such stores in France. The shop girl is a young woman with grave eyes and a forehead bound round with long strands of black hair. She has a quiet, good humored efficiency in all she does, and anyone entering the shop casually would remember her with pleasure. On her bodice she wears the tiny green and red ribbon of the French War Cross.

She was the first woman ever to earn such a distinction, and she won it at the same time she won the name "The Heroine of Loos." At that time the photograph of Emilienne Moreau was in every newspaper in France. She was received by President Poincare, and the British Government gave her a military decoration. Among the heroines of the war she still stands among the first for the courage with which she met danger and the devotion she showed to her family and to the allied cause.

In her first encounter with the Germans when they entered Loos in 1914 she saved her father when he was about to be executed, with others, on the groundless charge of having fired on the German troops. When he died as the result of the harsh treatment he had suffered, although she was then only 17 years old, she stole planks from the Germans, and with her own hands made a coffin for him when no one else would do so.

Kept Watch From Roof

During the British attack on Loos in 1915, she sheltered her mother and younger brother and sister in the cellar of their house, but herself kept incessant watch over the fortunes of the battle from the roof.

When, after three days' bombardment, the Highlanders entered the city she was the first to meet them and guide them through the streets after the retreating enemy. Before any ambulance arrived she organized a relief post for the wounded and nursed them herself.

The rest of the war she passed in the army zone with her mother and family, and with the British soldiers in that area the name of Emilienne Moreau was one of the most honored.

It is, thanks to some of them and their officers, that she and her mother have been able to open the shop, which is now theirs. There she serves her customers modestly and simply. A French writer, who has interviewed her in her shop, says of her:

"This great French woman shows by her example that, though one has known the smoke of battle and of glory, one need not disdain that of the kitchen. This young woman, who had every kind of courage, has now that of the model housewife. The lesson is not without beauty."

SEND IN PHOTO OF YOUR WINDOW DISPLAYS

Readers of Canadian Grocer are constantly making special window displays, pictures of which Canadian Grocer would be glad to obtain for the purpose of reproduction. We will pay up to three dollars for each acceptable window sent in, the photograph to be at least six by eight inches. The live merchant is always displaying some line of goods in an effort to stimulate sales, and we want to get these displays from time to time. Windows of housecleaning merchandise, of jams, of fresh fruits, of canned goods, in fact of all products sold in a grocery store, will be appreciated, and subscribers are asked to send them to Canadian Grocer, accompanied by invoices of cost of the same in duplicate. You will be making a feature in your windows of special lines from time to time. Many attractive displays will be made. Let us have a photograph of yours.

NEW TANGLEFOOT PRODUCTS

An Alternative to the Turnover Tax

Vancouver Merchant, in Making a Suggestion, Believes That There Is a Better Way Out Than in the Proposed Turnover Tax—Mentions a Few Objections to a Turnover Tax

TO the Editor, Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir,—Can you afford space for some remarks on the very interesting article advocating a "Tax on Turnover," by Austin Campbell in yours of March 18, just to hand?

Mr. Campbell reasons that because "The ultimate consumer enjoys the benefits and protection of government—any just tax must be borne by all the people equally in proportion."

In proportion to what? Age, weight, height, or wealth? Or does he mean "in proportion to consumption?" And does he infer that the ultimate consumer enjoys the benefits and protection of government in proportion to his consumption?

I would respectfully suggest that government benefits and protection are now enjoyed on the basis of property owned in greater measure than on the basis of goods consumed, and that this state of affairs is what a just tax ought to take account of.

In Proportion to Benefits

If Mr. Campbell had stated that a just tax should be borne by the people in proportion to the benefits enjoyed through its expenditure he would make a stronger appeal to our reason. As merchants we believe that we should give and get payment for value received, and that "fair exchange is no robbery," to quote an old proverb. But what other name than "robbery" can we give to any system that would tax some of us for benefits we do not receive, or receive only in part? As a merchant it seems to me that the principle of fair exchange, payment for value received, should apply to the services rendered by the government, as well as to the smaller transactions of commerce.

It is essentially the Golden Rule and the foundation of all happy human intercourse.

A few objections to the tax on turnover occur to me at haphazard.

First, the impossibility of collecting it on sales not recorded by some system of accounting, the consequent facility of evasion and the extension in the country at large of many evils now associated with frontiers and smuggling.

An Ever Increasing Burden

Second, if, on the other hand, its collection be certain, simple, and inexpensive, and everything that the Bache Review claims for it, its lifetime would not be limited to one or two years, as Mr. Campbell suggests. No finance minister would willingly drop so convenient an impost. On the contrary he would of necessity secure through it the revenue now derived through clumsier methods, and, like poor Sindbad, it would be weighted with an ever-increasing burden from year to year.

Third, if, as Mr. Campbell wisely observes, "Taxation can make or break a nation," had we not better profit while there is time by the example of old Spain, who lost her dominating influence in commerce through the adoption of the "Alvacala," or tax on sales?

Fourth, it would unfairly give advantage to chain stores and other large retailers, who can transfer commodities from producer to consumer, without intervening purchase and sale, though purchase and sale by each intermediate handler is usually the most efficient and economical method of general distribution, outside densely populated areas. Thus would be further accelerated the movement of population from village to city, which I am sure Mr. Campbell deplores as much as any of us.

Another Way Out

I sincerely hope that there may be many summers ahead of the writer in the "Bache Review," in which he shall have reason and opportunity to amend his statement that: "'There is but one way out, one reservoir with almost unlimited supply . . . . the tax on turnover."

Another way out is apparent to many of us—a way relied upon for revenue by all but one of the Australian Colonies, and being rapidly adopted by the highly progressive republics of South America. It consists in the use for revenue of at least a portion of the competitive price which people are willing to pay for the privilege of living, working, and exchanging in any particular place or country.

The price of a site, residential, business or mining, over and above the cost of the improvements, is the ready-at-hand measure of the value which competition for its use has created. To levy a percentage of this value for public purposes would impede no industry, or work any hardship on the industrious and deserving. It is simple and easy to collect, as is demonstrated daily. It promotes no dishonest practices, drives no trade into underground channels. Its operation is open and above-board, and it has the inestimable advantage of compelling those to use or sell their land, who now hold it idle for speculation, to the nation's impoverishment.

Would Promote Production

I see from my window many vacant lots, now eyesores and dangerous, a refuge for parasites, and bordered by streets, costly in themselves, and whose length entails heavy extra expenditure on transport and all public utilities. These areas would be brought into use of some kind if taxed on their true values, and the increased industry resulting would go far to solve the problems of bad trade and unemployment that now oppress us.

This is not an untried panacea for all human ills, but an honest constructive attempt to distribute justly among us, without revolution, that which we have as a people created, and are daily creating.

This is what we as merchants should impress upon Sir Henry Drayton, that such a tax as this would be ample for his purpose, would promote production and be for the benefit of all honest citizens; while a tax on turnover, falling ultimately on the consumer, would discourage consumption, be a hindrance to industry, and weigh heaviest on those who can least bear the weight, and who have received least return from the expenditure of the funds, our indebtedness for which it is now the Minister's task to liquidate.

Yours faithfully,

CHARLES PIKE.

THE WRONG ANNOUNCEMENT

In the issue of March 4 Canadian Grocer, through an error, the wrong advertisement of the S. F. Bowser Company, Inc., was inserted. This announcement referred to an oil filtering plant for machine shops and was intended for one of the other publications of the company. Canadian Grocer regrets this error. Subscribers no doubt recognized that the announcement was not intended for them.

"Don't let me catch you here again," roared the grocer as he spanked the boy that had been filling his pockets with ginger snaps.

"It's your own fault you caught me this time," sobbed the struggling kid.

"Always call a spade a spade, my friend," said the plain, blunt man dogmatically.

"Yes," assented the forty-niner, "I once knew a man to lose his life by calling a spade a club and opening a jack-pot on the strength of it."

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE condition of business during the week under review has shown an improvement, and wholesalers generally report a more liberal buying movement. There is a diversity of opinion in regard to collections, some wholesalers stating that there is a slowing up in collections, while others report them satisfactory. Retailers also report business much improved and with the spring weather permitting people to get out, the future looks very promising.

Refined sugar is holding firm at the refiners price basis and the tendency is that sugar will rule around the present price for some time.

Cereals are fairly steady although rolled oats in bulk is slightly easier, and in view of this fact a slight decline can also be expected on package oats.

Currants are firmer on account of the small stocks both in Greece and in Canada. Last year Greece had a carryover of several thousand tons but this year the carryover is expected to be very small. Evaporated apples are firmer and a more active export demand is noted. Raisins are steady under a limited demand.

A strong advance in Ceylon teas and the possibility of the tax being increased has created an active movement in the tea market. India teas, however, are not showing the same strength as Ceylons, in fact they can be considered as easy, especially on the coarser leaf.

Walnuts are steadily advancing in primary markets and the stock in France is very small. Valencia almonds are also firmer but not to the same extent as walnuts. Pecans are in a strong position and supplies are limited. Brazils are easy and prices are considerably lower than last year.

Flour declined during the week, also millfeeds are lower.

In the Ontario and the Eastern Provinces eggs are lower with tendencies for easier prices, but throughout the Western Provinces eggs have shown a firming tendency with prices advanced.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 6.—The most active section of the grocery market this week appears to be fruit and vegetables. The warmer spring weather is perhaps responsible for this. Larger shipments of tomatoes, new cabbages and the first shipments of cucumbers feature the market. Oranges are very active and every effort is being put forward by the orange shippers to keep the price up while it has a natural tendency to slump. Lemons and grapefruit are a little cheaper this week, while Ben Davis apples seem to be in better supply with an easier price. The sugar market stands firm at the advanced price. There is very little change in canned goods while the only change in package goods is a slight reduction in self-raising flour. There is a prospect for a better tea market with the improvement in the movement of stocks, and the better grades are showing stronger tendencies. There are some big reductions in quotations on spices since the wholesalers have been able to enter the primary markets for new supplies. The cereal market is quiet on account of the coming of the warmer weather. The dried fruit market is very firm with a good demand for figs, dates, and evaporated apples in particular. There are quite a few changes in miscellaneous lines this week.

No Change in Cereals

Montreal.

CEREALS—With the coming of the warmer weather there is a more quiet market for cereals and buyers are purchasing smaller quantities. Prices, however, are unchanged.

Some Canned Meats Lower

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS—There are some changes this week in quotations on canned meats. These changes, however, are not large. Some of the local wholesalers have again advanced their prices on the cheaper grades of canned tomatoes. This is simply a readjustment after some of the price cutting that has been going on locally in canned goods. One brand of clams in one pound tins is reduced ten cents per dozen and is now selling at $2.25.

Dried Fruit Market Steady

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS — There are no changes this week in the quotations on dried fruits. Evaporated apples are much firmer on primary markets and while some wholesalers have still stocks of the cheaper goods on hand prices will be stiffer when they have to replenish their supplies. Raisins are very firm in price and there is a good demand for figs and dates.

First Cucumbers Arrive

Montreal.

VEGETABLES—There is no change of note this week in the vegetable market. The market seems to be flooded with cabbages both domestic and imported. Barrels of 120 pounds of old cabbages are offered on the local market for 50 cents. Tomatoes are on the market in larger quantities and at lower prices; $7 per crate is being asked for some grades. The onion market seems to be a little firmer, although there is not a very big demand for supplies. The first two cars of cucumbers arrived in Montreal this week and dealers state that the new price will be about $8.50 per hamper.

Some Lines Lower

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS—There are many changes this week in miscellaneous lines. Canary seed is reduced 2½ cents per pound and is now quoted at 7½ cents in large quantities and at 10 cents per pound in smaller lots. Hemp seed is also reduced in price and is quoted at the same price as canary seed. Burdock blood bitters are reduced $1.75 per dozen and are now quoted at $8.25. Snuff tobacco, which has a demand perhaps only in the Province of Quebec, is in good demand and has been reduced 5 cents, now quoted at 55 cents. Cod liver oil in bulk is reduced $1 per gallon and is quoted at from $2 to $2.50 per gallon according to quantities purchased. The St. Vincent arrowroot is reduced 9 cents per pound to 16 cents in 7 pound tins.

Some Soaps Reduced

Montreal.

SOAP—A reduction of 25 cents per case is recorded this week on Comfort soap. Kitchen Sapolio is reduced 50 cents per case of 3 dozen and is now quoted at $4.25. Some other brands of soap are also reduced in price this week.

Reductions on Cotton Twine

Montreal.

TWINE—Further reductions are made this week on cotton twine amounting to 3 cents per pound. The price of 3 ply twine is now 37 and 38 cents and 4 ply 40 and 41 cents per pound. The variation in prices quoted is accounted for in the difference in quantities bought.

California Lemons Lower

Montreal.

FRUIT—There has been an excellent demand for oranges this season and prices have remained fairly low. There is no change in the quotations on oranges this week but supplies are not quite so large as they have been, and shippers are doing their utmost to keep the price up. California lemons are quoted 50 cents per case lower by some local dealers and are now selling at $4.50 per case. Porto Rico grapefruit of the best quality is reduced 25 cents per case this week and is selling at $4.25 per case. The supply of apples offered on this market is limited almost to Ben Davis, which are selling at from $7.50 to $8 per barrel. Large shipments of strawberries are arrivin and are finding a ready market even a the high prices asked.

Sugar Prices Remain Firm

Montreal.

SUGAR—The sugar market stand firm this week at the advanced basis an even more strength seems to be added t the market by a stronger feeling to th raw market. The American refined suga market seems to have an easier feelin but there is no change in prices and i view of the sugar situation in Canada i is assured that prices will stay at th advanced basis just as long as a sufficien margin between American and Canadia prices exists.

Better Movement of Teas

Montreal.

TEA—There is no change of note i the tea market this week. The move ment in the better grades is very fai with prices standing a little firmer, bu an unsettled condition still exists in th cheaper grades. The primary markets show a little stronger tendency but on account of conditions in the wholesale market the influence of the primary market is not directly felt. There is, however, a better movement of teas throughout the country which will result in a more settled market.

Rice Still Unsettled

Montreal.

RICE—No change of any note is recorded in the rice market this week. Prices are still very low and an effort is being put forward by the dealers to unload present stocks so that they may enter the market for new supplies without carrying over the old stock. The rice market is still in the unsettled condition that has characterized it for some time.

Firm Market For Nuts

Montreal.

NUTS—There is no change in the nut market this week. Stocks in most lines are very low at the present time and prices are being fully maintained. The demand for walnuts, peanuts, almonds and pecans has been very good for some time and the market stands very firm.

Reductions on Spices

Montreal.

SPICES—As intimated by Canadian Grocer for the last few weeks the more active market for spices has resulted in lower prices being quoted by the wholesalers. This is accounted for by the fact that the wholesalers have been able to enter the primary market and buy at lower prices than were quoted on spot stocks. As a result this week there are many big reductions in quotations on spices. The biggest reduction is a drop of 15 cents per pound on ground cloves which is now quoted at from 40 to 45 cents per pound. Old ground cloves are selling at 45 cents. Black pepper is now quoted at 75 cents per pound and white pepper at 33 cents. These reductions do not indicate a sudden drop in the spice market but are the results of many months decline in values on the primary markets while the wholesalers' stocks remained unchanged in price on account of the supplies which they had on hand.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 6.—The sugar market is holding firm at the refiners' price basis although there is considerable irregularity, as practically all wholesalers are selling below the refiners' list. Teas and coffees are ruling firm. Shelled walnuts continue in a strong position with a tendency for an advance owing to the light stocks both on spot and in primary markets. Currants are firmer and spot stocks are very low. Hallowee dates are reduced in price. There is an uneasy feeling in canned goods with a possibility for lower quotations. Beans are quiet but stocks are not large. Cereals are easy and quiet. Reductions are noted on pepper, cream of tartar, water glass, one brand of meat sauce, baking powder, quick puddings and cocoa. One brand of yeast cakes is higher.

Bean Stocks Not Large

Toronto.

BEANS.—Stocks of beans throughout the country and in dealers' warehouses are not large, and it is considered that the greater portion of the Ontario crop has gone into consumption. The market is quiet and prices unchanged.

Are Canned Goods Due For a Drop?

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—For some weeks past canned goods have been more on a stable basis but now one of the big packers has offered to purchasers of initial orders canned vegetables at a reduction that amounts to about 60 cents per case. These low prices, however, are only given to those who purchased early in the season and to the amount of 10 per cent. of the first order. This announcement has created considerable stir and the general feeling is that an upset market can again be expected. Canned fruits are in an unsettled condition and with the demand very limited irregular prices prevail. For instance, Singapore sliced pineapple is offered at $2.45 per dozen, Lombard plums 2s are offered at $2.10 per dozen. Jams are still offered at low prices, 16-ounce strawberry at $3.60 per dozen and 4s range from 70 to 85 cents each.

Currant Market Stronger

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The currant markets have shown considerable strength during the past few weeks and prices in primary markets are higher. Spot stocks continue low, but local quotations are unchanged. Evaporated apples are firmer both in Canada and New York. The export inquiry for evaporated apples has improved and one manufacturer has had several cables from England for prices during the past week. Hallowee dates are lower at 11 cents per pound. Raisins continue firm.

Flour Drops 20 Cents

Toronto.

FLOUR.—A reduction of 20 cents per barrel is announced on flour. No. 1 patents is now quoted at $10.30 per barrel and No. 2 at $9.80 per barrel. This decline is attributed to the weak condition of the wheat market and prices are now at the lowest since 1916, when first patents sold at $10 per barrel.

Millfeeds Lower

Toronto.

MILLFEEDS. — Shorts are down $1 per ton, making the price $35.25. Bran is reduced $3 per ton, bringing the price to $33.25. Middlings are down $1 per ton, now quoted at $40.25. There is a good demand for millfeeds, but bran and shorts are rather scarce as many of the mills are running on short time and some are closed completely.

Little Demand for Honey

Toronto.

HONEY.—The majority of dealers are carrying fairly heavy stocks of honey and there still appears to be considerable throughout the country. Dealers describe the market as extremely dull as there is practically little demand. Quotations are unchanged but the tendency is rather downward.

Toronto.

NUTS.—Little improvement is noted in spot stocks of shelled walnuts and walnuts in this market are growing very scarce. Prices are unchanged, but higher prices are likely in view of the shortage of supplies in primary markets. Almonds are fairly steady, brazils are easy and pecans remaining scarce at high figures.

Refined Sugar Holds Firm

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar is holding firm at the refiners' price basis of $11.34 but there is still considerable irregularity in quotations by wholesalers as the majority continue to sell at the old price. The raw sugar market is somewhat easier but the general opinion is that this is a temporary movement and the opinion is expressed that the market will firm up again.

Tea Market Firm

Toronto.

TEAS.—A rather unusual cable has been received by a local broker from London stating that any teas bought now are good buying as higher prices are sure to follow in the immediate future. There is also a rumor to the effect that there is likely to be an advance in the duty. There is now a duty of 7 and 10 cents per pound on tea and in the opinion of one importer this is likely to be increased considerably. Another importer stated that they are clearing all their purchases in anticipation of an increase on the duty, instead of the usual custom of leaving shipments in bond and clearing the customs as requirements demanded. Apart from the possibilities of increased duty, the market for Ceylon teas is strong and higher. This also applies to the better grades of Indias, although some of the coarser grades are lower.

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The first lot of cucumbers in hampers containing about six dozen are on the market at $7.50 per hamper. Hot house cucumbers are quoted at $5 per dozen. New Texas onions are offered at $4 per crate of around 50 pounds. New carrots and beets are lower, the former quoted at $2 per hamper and the latter $2.25 per hamper. North Carolina cabbage is selling at $4 per large case. Canadian vegetables show little demand, potatoes are somewhat lower at 90 cents to $1 per bag.

Some Price Changes

Toronto.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Lea & Perrins' sauce, small size, is reduced to $2.25 per dozen and medium at $4.50 per dozen. Pure Gold quick puddings are reduced to $1.30 per dozen. Morton's water glass is reduced to $1.40 per dozen. Lipton's cocoa (halves) is reduced to 50 cents per pound and fifths to 52 cents per pound. Gillett's goods show some changes, Royal yeast is advanced 20 cents per case, Magic baking powder is reduced on all sizes 10 cents to 20 cents per dozen, lye is up 95 cents per case and cream of tartar is lower.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 6.—The general condition of trade, generally speaking, is unchanged. Collections are coming very slowly and are not showing any improvement. The demand for tea on the primary market has been very active for all grades. The raw sugar market is reported slightly easier but it has not affected the price of Canadian refined. A better demand is being noted for light breakfast foods and lower prices are not expected on this line. All dried fruits with the possible exception of prunes and evaporated apples are reported weak. The export demand for prunes has given the prune market a better tone. French walnuts continue to show a firmer undertone. Shelled almonds are slightly easier; pecans continue high and scarce. The coffee market has a firmer undertone. There is a marked improvement in the demand for spices, and grinders report business in a healthy condition. Fruits are in good demand while imported vegetables show an advance.

Coffee Shows Firmness

Winnipeg.

COFFEE—There is no change in the local situation in coffee but primary markets have tendencies for considerable strength. Then again, there is a possibility of a surtax being placed on Brazilian coffee to cover loans made to finance the crop. Freight rates are also higher, which of course will naturally reflect on quotations.

Prunes Firmer

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUIT—The dried fruit market on all lines with the exception of prunes is reported weak. Export business has given a better tone to this market. The latest reports from London, England, state that the price on evaporated apples will soon be higher and the New York market is also higher. It is thought that this line has reached the rock bottom prices and buyers should take advantage of buying evaporated apples at present quotations.

CONSUMPTION OF MARGARINE IN BELGIUM INCREASES

Consul General Morgan, of Brussels, reports that a notable increase in the consumption of margarine in Belgium has resulted during the past few years. Owing to the war, imports of butter were seriously curtailed, and the consumption of margarine at present amounts to 2,500,000 kilos monthly, as compared with a monthly consumption of a million kilos before the war. Much of the margarine consumed is produced in Belgium.

Frederick was sitting on the curb cr ing when Billy came along and ask him what was the matter.

"Oh, I feel so bad 'cause Major's de —my nice old collie!" sobbed Frederic

"Shucks!" said Billy. "My gran mother's been dead a week, and you do catch me crying."

Frederick gave his eyes and nose swipe with his hand, and, looking up Billy, sobbed despairingly.

"Yes, but you didn't raise your gran mother from a pup."

Packing Employees on Strike But Supplies Are Unaffected

Sixteen Hundred Packing House Workers Are On Strike in Toronto—Resent 12½ Per Cent. Reduction in Wages

TORONTO, April 4.—Sixteen hundred union packing house workers are out on strike from the plants of Canadian Packing Co., Gunns Ltd., Swift Canadian Co., Harris Abattoir Co. and William Davies Co.

The executive committee of the union, following the meeting at which the strike vote was taken, informed Frank Megan, of the William Davies Co., of the decision of the meeting and asked if there was no other way forthcoming from the packers. Mr. Megan replied that the packers intended to fight. The packers will stick to the 12½ per cent. reduction in wages and that there should be no minimum wage in the agreement, which during the past year has been 50 cents per hour.

At its meeting the union took the view that any decrease in the cost of living during the year was made up by an increase in efficiency upon the part of the workers and consequently a wage reduction was not justified.

The advisability of submitting the matters in dispute to a board of conciliation will not be tolerated by the packers and they claim that they would be compelled to close up the plants indefinitely unless the reduction is made. "We have covered the whole ground, carrying along negotiations in the regular accredited manner, dealing with every phase of the situation," said Frank Megan, of the William Davies Co. "We have compromised all along the line. We dropped the wage reduction from 15 to 12½ per cent. and then abandoned the idea that overtime should not commence until 6 o'clock at night. We retained the 40 hour guarantee. There is no question of a board of conciliation."

The firms affected by the strike are not materially inconvenienced as they are all carrying fairly heavy supplies and have arranged for proper distribution.

Increasing Sales Of Shortening By Display

H. V. Maylor, manager of the grocery department of Maylor's general store, Forest, Ont., was arranging a display of ——— shortening on the counter when a representative of Canadian Grocer strolled into the store. "This is a splendid seller," said Mr. Maylor. "Our sales on shortening were very small before putting in this line. We had a couple of different brands but customers did not seem to take to shortening. The first day we had this brand in the store we sold three-quarters of a case and sales have been steadily increasing ever since. By keeping a pile on the counter and suggesting it to the customers, we have made sales to those people who said that they did not have any success with shortening, and I find that they are now buying it regularly."

UNITED DAIRYMEN WILL DO FOUR TO FIVE MILLIONS' BUSINESS

Peterborough, April 7.—A dividend of 8 per cent. was declared at the first annual meeting of the United Dairymen's Co-operative Co. here last week. It was also decided to write off 20 per cent. organization expenses out of profits, and in addition a sum was set aside for reserve.

The statements showed a successful year, and H. B. Cowan, secretary-treasurer, stated that the company could expect to do from four to five million dollars' business during the coming year, and that one hundred factories will be shipping through the company by May 1.

The following officers were elected: President, R. W. Ireland, Wellington; vice-president, Hugh Marlow, Marmora; secretary-treasurer, H. B. Cowan, Peterborough; directors, John McCaffery, Madoc; W. H. Crough, Ennismore; J. A. Galvin, Lakefield; J. J. Morrison, Toronto; J. R. Macdonald, Alexandria; W. Brownlee, North Gore.

The company was formed one year ago as a co-operative marketing medium for dairymen.

USE OF WORD "BUTTER" RESTRICTED

Importers of cocoa butter and other products in which the word "butter" appears are "saying things" this week about a new Ottawa customs regulation. This regulation prohibits the importation of any product in which the word "butter" forms a part of the name except it is butter made from cow's milk. Cocoa butter must be called something else; also peanut butter, maple butter, etc. One instance is known where a large quantity of cocoa butter has been held up by the customs, which is urgently required by a confectionery manufacturer.

SUGAR FROM CORN COBS OR STRAW HAS LITTLE FOOD VALUE

Making sugar from corn cobs, straw, sawdust and other materials which have been suggested by chemists at various times recently, is quite possible, but there is a question as to whether such sugar has any real food value according to President W. E. Stone, of Purdue University. President Stone, before becoming head of the university, was a chemist, and was considered an authority on sugars.

"I prepared sugar from corn cobs, from straw and from sawdust in 1898," said President Stone, "identifying these sugars as belonging to the class of pentoses. These have an entirely different constitution and behavior from the ordinary sugars of commerce. These sugars are not subject to fermentation and the substance from which they are derived, found in corn cobs and straw, did not appear to be digestible when fed to animals, as some experiments of mine seem to show conclusively. So far as the physiological value of these substances or the sugars derived from them is concerned the results of the research indicate that they have little value."

Selling 100 Pounds of B. C. Salmon Daily During the Month of February

SELLING one hundred pounds of British Columbia salmon every day during the month of February is the record of McCullough and Marshall at Brampton, Ont. "We have discontinued handling fresh fish now that warmer days are here, but we had great success with fish this winter," a Canadian Grocer representative was told by the head clerk in the McCullough and Marshall store the other day. "One Saturday," he continued, "we sold as much as 200 pounds of this salmon. It had a steady, brisk demand all winter. We started in right after the New Year to sell it, and we carried it right up, almost, until the end of March. We sold it from the front of the store all the time. It was always on display, and we also advertised it. People passing saw it, and dropped in for some. Keeping it at the front of the store, outside, meant a great deal in the way of increasing sales. From the standpoint of profit, too, handling this fish was well worth while. It represented a quick turnover, and, having once created a demand for what was a very fine line, repeat orders were continuous."

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 6.—The striking feature of the produce market this week is the further decline in the price of eggs; offerings are large, and although the demand for eggs has been very good, prices have been forced lower. Butter is lower in price with excellent prospects for a big production this year. The cheese market stands firm with only limited supplies to draw from. The hog market is unchanged in price although there is a little easier feeling with perhaps a relaxation in prices quoted since the grading is more emphasized this week. There is a good demand for smoked meats and prices are fully maintained. Some fresh lake fish is offered in the market this week but the supply is small. Haddock is scarce and higher prices are being asked. Lard is in an unsettled condition.

Good Prospects for Butter

Montreal.

BUTTER.—A feature of the week in the butter market has been a weaker feeling that prevailed and prices for the finest grade of creamery are from 1½ to 2 cents a pound below prices quoted one week ago. This to some extent is due to the increased offering of under grade stock which has been shipped from the United States on consignment, and also to the fact that the prospects for the new season's make in the country were probably never more encouraging than they are this year. Stocks in store on spot the first of the month were considerably smaller than a year ago, but with the steady increase in receipts of the new make the indications are that there will be ample supplies to meet all requirements.

Montreal.

CHEESE. — There is no important change in the condition of the cheese market this week. There is a steady demand from local buyers and the requirements for home consumption are sufficient to keep the market quite firm without the influence of the export buyers. The supplies of cheese available are not large and the market may be expected to stand quite firm for some little time.

Demand for Smoked Meats

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS. — The trade in smoked meats for the early part of the week was quiet owing to the fact that buyers in most cases had a sufficient stock on hand to meet requirements, but the demand for all lines is good and has shown a marked improvement. The market has a tendency to firm up on account of renewed interest since the merchants are almost forced to buy more freely. Towards the end of this week the smoked meat market has shown more activity with a firmer feeling. Quotations on all lines are unchanged.

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—There is no important change in the condition of the Montreal hog market this week. Prices are being maintained on account of the smaller offerings than were generally expected and a keener demand for the same. Prices quoted range from $16.00 for selected stock to $15.50 per cwt. for heavies weighed off cars. Although the price is not changed noticeably the tendency is for slightly easier quotations since a week ago the price on hogs was quite firm at $16.00. Lower Prices on Eggs

Montreal.

EGGS.—An easier feeling has prevailed in the local egg market this week. Prices closed 2 cents per dozen lower than a week ago, which is due to the fact that supplies have been the largest of the season so far and in addition to this the values in the country were at the lowest level for some time past. On account of the good quality of the eggs and the comparatively low figures at this period as compared with the past few years, some dealers have been tempted to put up some stock for future requirements which accounts for the marked increase in the stocks in store here on the first of the month as compared with the previous month and the corresponding one last year. Figures in the Government report show a big increase in receipt of eggs during the past week and also a bigger demand. An active trade is being carried on in eggs and prices quoted this week run from 34 cents to 36 cents per dozen in a wholesale way.

FISH.—There is practically no change in the fish market except that haddock is very scarce this week and the price is advanced to ten and eleven cents per pound. its first appearance on the market this season.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 6.—The strike at the big packing houses is not expected to make any material change in the market situation except to cut down receipts. The packers, however, are fairly well supplied with goods and unless the duration of the strike is prolonged no serious results are expected. Live hogs were further reduced during the week, but owing to the strike packers have notified shippers to hold back shipments. New made cheese is arriving more freely, many of the cheese factories now being in full swing. Old cheese is fast becoming cleaned up and prices are ruling high. The egg market again declined under heavy receipts and lack of support for storage purposes. Lard and shortening are unchanged. Provisions show a few price changes but generally cured meats are unchanged. Fresh caught halibut is arriving freely but fresh white fish and trout are still rather scarce and prices are high.

Butter Prices Unchanged

Toronto.

BUTTER — There is slightly easier undertone in the butter market, due to the increase in fresh made receipts. This increase, however, is not of such volume as to affect the market and is not expected to do so for a few weeks. Quotations are ruling fairly firm and unchanged.

EGGS—The egg market has steadily declined since our last report, due to heavy receipts and lack of demand for storage purposes. The situation is unsettled as to the future but the general opinion is that the outlook is for even lower prices. It is stated that some eggs have gone into the coolers, but the general attitude of the packers is to wait further developments before starting storage operations. Quotations to the trade are around 31 cents per dozen.

Hog Market Lower

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—Live hogs registered another drop of 50 cents per hundred during the week and a further reduction was expected this week, but owing to the strike of the employees of the big packing houses, little change is likely to develop, owing to the fact that packers have notified shippers to withhold shipments. There is a great deal of uncertainty prevailing in the market for cattle attributed in part to the strike and the possibility of the United States putting into force an increased tariff which will have the effect of lowering prices. Dressed beef, calves and sheep are unchanged as to price but some pork cuts are up one cent per pound.

FISH—Heavy shipments of fresh halibut are arriving almost every day and prices are ruling fairly steady. Fresh whitefish and trout are rather scarce as yet and prices are fairly high, being quoted around 30 cents per pound. Lower prices are expected as the catch increases. Smoked ciscoes are down two cents per pound, now quoted at 22 cents. Holland herrings are down 15 to 20 cents per kit.

PROVISIONS — In some quarters smoked hams are advanced one cent and the reason for this is probably the fact that some of the packers wish to curtail the sale of hams in order to build up their stock to be used for cooked hams later on. Last year many of the packers were caught with a very small supply of hams when the rush was on for cooked hams and were forced to buy in the United States or any place where supplies could be purchased. The strike at the packing houses is not expected to make any material difference in quotations as they are all carrying fairly large stocks. There are a few minor price changes, but for the most part provision quotations are unchanged.

SHORTENING—The shortening market is steady to easy. One pound prints are quoted at 14½ cents, although in some quarters quotations are as high as 16 cents. On the tierce basis 12 cents per pound is the ruling price.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 6.—The outstanding feature of the provision market during the week was the decline in the price of lard and shortening. The hog market is ruling fairly steady, and although there is a noted improvement in the demand for smoked and cooked meats, the only change in prices is the slight advance in the price of bacon. The egg market has shown a firmer undertone and quotations have advanced. Cheese is in light demand on account of the high prices. Creamery butter continues very firm with little dairy butter arriving. The fish business is reported fairly steady.

Are You Ready for the Spring?

SPRING to the housewife usually means a certain amount of house-cleaning, during which period she cares little or nothing about preparing hot meals in the middle of the day. It is therefore very much to the dealer's advantage to feature prominently different lines of seasonable cooked meats. The housewife will be glad to see these, and would particularly welcome because it is tasty and requires little preparing to get it ready for dinner.

Headcheese

This is the season of the year when headcheese sells. The demand is automatically created by the change in the weather. We would recommend your including some with your next order. Put up in 6-lb. tins and 1-lb. moulds, at reasonable prices.

Cooked Hams

We are now able to offer you square block ham, suitable for table use, and also most satisfactory for sandwiches. Very fine flavor. This is a high-grade cooked ham. You can also obtain the "Peerless" Ham, which is still retained to its high standard, and will surely give satisfaction.

Dry Sausage

We are very pleased to announce to the trade that we have been appointed selling agents and distributors for all of Eastern Canada, of Armour Company's Dry Sausage. The quality of this product is already known, hence needs no introduction.

Brands of Quality

VICHY WATER CANNED GOODS

The products imported from France which we offer to the retail trade of Canada enjoy a universal reputation which should make their sale easy, because products of uniform quality give the most satisfaction to the client both from the standpoint of quality and price.

Petits Pois "Soleil."—The favorite brand of Canadians for nearly a quarter of a century, needs no further recommendation, for nearly everybody knows and appreciates these delicious green peas, fresh, tender, juicy.
Qualities: Sur-Extra Fins, Extra-Fins, Tres Fins, Fins, Mi-Fins, Moyens Nos. 1, 2, 3.

Mushrooms Feyret & Pinsan.—L. Bon, Preignac-Bordeaux, France. A choice brand, a delicious vegetable highly appreciated and which holds a place of honor on the best served tables.
Qualities: Champignons Gallipedes, Choix, 1er Choix, Extra, Sur-Extra.

Pate de Foie Gras Feyret & Pinsan.—This constitutes one of the choicest brands of Pate de Foie Gras "cuisines", ready to serve that delight the connoisseurs, and the sale of which attracts to the merchant the cream of the clientele. It is a most popular brand.

Eau de Vichy des Sources Chateau-Robert of St. Yorre.—Natural, sterilized, cold, and highly carbonated, this water has been approved by the Academie de Medicine de Paris and indicated for the home treatment of diseases of the liver, stomach, kidneys, intestines; also in Diabetes, Gravel, Gout, Rheumatism.

Vichy Lemon Lemonade: "La Savoureuse."—The most pleasant of Vichy lemonades, containing the Natural Carbonic and Gas from the springs of Chateau-Robert at St. Yorre, and no artificial products whatever.

The above goods are of superior quality and do not cost any more than ordinary goods.

Sea Foods

have behind them a quality reputation that spells quick turnovers for Brunswick dealers—a reputation that is the result of years of concentrated effort in the perfecting of high-grade, wholesome Fish Foods.

The success of our efforts may be judged from the confidence of the public in the reliability of sea foods bearing the Brunswick Brand trade-mark, a confidence that is building better business for the dealers featuring these popular quality products.

Ideal location and best possible equipment are two big factors in producing the big sales which are so characteristic of Brunswick Brand lines. Our plant (which is one of the finest on the Atlantic coast) is so situated that we never fail to secure the very choicest pick of the season's catches. Our methods of processing and packing the first eliminate all possibility of customer-dissatisfaction, and make firm friends of first purchasers.

Carrying On By Marking Time

By J. K. Munro

HAY foot—straw foot—left foot—right foot—and never getting anywhere! That's J. K. Munro's view of the Parliament at Ottawa during March. Crerar and Lapointe are the only men who have really said anything, in "J. K.'s" opinion. After a survey of the Dominion Mr. Munro prophesies that there will be a Farmer Government, sure, in 1922—and probably supported by several French-Canadians.

And the Budget—"it is not likely," says Canada's leading political pundit, "that it will be a very sweeping document. It will likely provide for a sales tax of about one per cent, to make up the hundred million by which the estimates exceed the revenue, and the excess profits tax will likely be wiped out. That's about all."

John Barleycorn and Jack Canuck

It's a hard question for the man-on-the-street to answer, How Dry is Canada? But Charles Christopher Jenkins has studied the question from all angles, and you will find his article extraordinarily informative and—in the light of Ontario's vote April 18—very timely.

"For Sale For a Song."
By Agnes C. Laut.

The question whether Oriental labor will solve some of our problems is here discussed.

"From Ontario to Tin Pan Alley."
By Geoffrey O'Hara.

A Canadian wrote "K-K-Katy" and also a song for Caruso. He tells how he won success.

"The Drama of Our Great Forests."
By Arthur Heming.

A further instalment of the artist-author's adventures with Oo-koo-hoo in Canada's primitive Northland.

"As a Man to His Friend."
By William Merriman Rouse.

A stirring story of the Ottawa Valley, of two lumberjacks, an actress and a barber.

"Linen Sheets."
By Alan Sullivan.

What do the occupants of an Old Woman's Home think of, as they wait for the "Reaper"? A poignant story with a surprise climax.

"Pawned."
By Frank L. Packard.

John Bruce recovers his strength, woos Claire Veniza—only to find her falling into Dr. Crang's clutches.

"Why Have We Juvenile Crime?"
By Ethel M. Chapman.

A timely account of Juvenile Delinquency and the Big Brother Movement.

MACDONALD'S

Fast Turnovers Make Fat Profits

Success in retailing depends on the turnover. It matters little to you that you can get fifty per cent. profit on an article it takes a year to sell.

It is fast turnover that has made Macdonald's the most profitable line in Canada. The demand for Macdonald's Tobaccos never falls off. More Macdonald's is sold than any other kind of tobacco. Your capital isn't tied up for long—you sell more tobacco—you make more profit.

Not only that, but you make a higher percentage of profit on Macdonald's — extra profits that make it more than worth your while to sell the tobacco with a heart.

Says a Reader of Many Years Standing:

"I do feel that your paper is the most interesting and readable financial journal published in this country and, perhaps, in the entire North American Continent. Each week I somehow find time to read every word of it—mostly in bed, late at night. I find I have to read THE FINANCIAL POST in order to maintain myself properly abreast with the bigger things and movements taking place in this country."

THE FINANCIAL POST is published for men who are interested in big things—not necessarily men who personally have big financial interests at stake, but for men who are eager to know what is happening that will have a bearing on business and the well-being of Canada generally.

THE entire editorial organization of the MacLean Publishing Company is at hand to co-operate with the editors of THE FINANCIAL POST. Specialists in many businesses write for THE POST. A practical farmer, in constant touch with the farming conditions, deals with crop prospects.

THE POST is a paper edited by specialists for business specialists.

WALNUTS IN STRONG POSITION

Hills Bros. Co., New York, describe the nut market as: "The Cabo Villano is now due to arrive from Spain with a further shipment of Tarragona almonds. The market remains unchanged. Further shipments of Sicily filberts have also arrived during the week, which continue offering on the low basis of prices now ruling. Some little interest is being taken in walnuts, which are really growing quite scarce in this market. A sharp advance is to be noted in both Cornes and Grenobles and stocks are very light. Two steamers have arrived with further shipments of Brazils, namely the Sirpa and the Polycarp. There will be two other steamers arriving within the next ten days, and shipments from both Manaos and Para will no doubt be very heavy during April and May. Valencia shelled almonds are firmly held. Walnut halves remaining in France are trifling and it would seem probable that a higher basis of values will be seen."

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Gentlemen:-
Since our purchase of the last Ford Truck from you, we have been able to deliver our goods more promptly than ever before. This gives us three Ford Trucks, two of which are in constant use. The other we keep for spare. We disposed of the last horses we had in March last, and find our delivery expense is now considerably less. We are also able to give our customers better service.
In our business, we consider two Ford Trucks a far better investment than one large Truck.
If you wish to use our name at any time in reference to the above matter, we shall be glad to have you do so.

DOMINION MATCHES

During the past few years when the highest grades of chemicals and raw materials were difficult to get, DOMINION MATCHES stood the most severe test and established an enviable reputation for quality both with dealer and consumer. DOMINION MATCHES are still supreme; every package is given most vigilant inspection before leaving the factory and absolutely insures their being uniform and of the finest quality. The progressive merchants who are anxious to avoid complaints and to give their customer the best match on the market are selling DOMINION.

A Goodly Profit From A Square Foot of Space

THE Aladdin Revolving Display Stand (containing one gross of Aladdin Dye Soap) occupies only a square foot of space on your counter. Yet it will sell Aladdin Dye Soap for you and earn a worthwhile profit.

Aladdin's best publicity is the strong recommendation of those who have experienced the satisfaction of its use. But to help Aladdin give quick turnover to the dealers who handle it, we advertise it extensively and supply free window cards and lithographic cut-outs.

Behind every Borden Milk Product there stands a sixty-five year old "high standard quality" reputation.

It is this old established prestige, earned through strict adherence to the Gail Borden exacting standard of purity and quality, that has won the confidence of the buying public in every milk product bearing the name Borden's and has made them so easy to sell.

Then, too, Borden's intensive national advertising is constantly at work telling Canadians (many of them customers in your locality) about the convenience and wholesomeness of Borden Milk Products and showing them in concrete ways why they are more economical.

Good profits are assured when you sell Borden's lines—so feature them in your displays—it pays.

Common Sense Wins

In the office of "Canadian Grocer" two cans of salmon, one a High Grade, well-known Sockeye, the other a Standard Grade Pink, were opened. Five persons were blindfolded and made to taste the samples; the verdict for flavor went to the pink. Common Sense won, because color is tasteless. Try this yourself.

SALMON SOUFFLE NO. 1

Separate one can of either of the four brands shown below of Pink Salmon into flakes; season with salt, paprika and lemon juice. Cook one-half cup of soft stale bread-crumbs in one-half cup of milk ten minutes and add to salmon, then add the yolks of three eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored, and cut and fold in the whites beaten stiff and dry. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake until firm.

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

Draws Trade--Holds Trade

FLOOR DRESSING

A spotless store advertises itself. It draws steady trade from old customers and creates new customers. Freedom from dust is the first essential of a spotless store—Imperial Floor Dressing will do the job quickly and effectively.

Why? Because Imperial Floor Dressing holds dust to the floor. It cleans and preserves floors and prevents warping and checking. It fills in the pores and cracks of wood, and regular sweeping with a stiff broom removes all the accumulated dust and dirt.

Imperial Floor Dressing does not gum or evaporate. One gallon is sufficient for treating upward of 700 square feet. One application will last for several weeks.

It is the most sanitary and economical dressing you can buy for your floors. It is also a fast-selling, profitable line to handle.

The Imperial Oil salesman will gladly demonstrate the superior quality of Imperial Floor Dressing the next time he calls on you.

PURITY

It Costs More?—Yes!

—And It's Worth It!

We could produce cheaper Maple Products—but we won't. Why not? Because Maple Products that are not pure are not worth buying at any price.

Your customers are willing to pay the slightly higher price warranted by the superior quality they get in and

Old Tyme Maple Butter

(Both proved absolutely pure by Government Test)

The clean amber color and the delicious flavor of Old Colony Maple Syrup are the result of using the first run of sap (always the best) and from intensive straining and clarifying operations which guarantee absolute purity.

Old Tyme Maple Butter of the same superior quality is a favorite as a quick icing for cakes, or for spreading on toast, muffins or sandwiches.

MACDONALD'S

Premeditated Purchases

The man who buys Macdonald's Tobacco does not do so casually or indiscriminately. He buys it Purposely and he buys it constantly. He gets more tobacco for his money in Macdonald's and he doesn't change.

He is the kind of customer who builds a successful business for the retailer—because while he does not change his choice of tobacco, he is not likely to forget the place where he buys it.

It is worth while to attract and keep such customers—doubly so when their choice of tobacco is Macdonald's.

The extra profit in Macdonald's comes from three sources—an unusually generous profit-margin—four to six plugs overrun per 10-lb. caddy—and an extra quick turnover speeded up by the most extensive tobacco advertising campaign in Canada.

is through wholehearted co-operation of all units of merchandising—manufacturer with wholesaler, wholesaler with jobber and jobber with the retail merchant, who stands on the forefront of our merchandising system.

To-day more than ever before the merchant needs all the constructive assistance you can give him. On him rests the burden of starting the stream of goods across his counters to the consuming public.

New plans of selling, proven ideas for increasing turnover in your products, methods of stimulating present sales and building future profits —all are your answers to his pressing problems of the moment.

Tell your merchants all this and more in the business paper he is reading and studying to-day—reading editorial pages for any trade news affecting his business, studying advertising pages for his information on your special plans. You can stimulate your trade. You can hearten your merchant. Now as never before you can give business just the impetus that will push the trade curve upward to better business for all.

Regular announcements in the merchant's business newspaper will increase your sales and at the same time lower your selling cost by building up goodwill between the calls of your salesmen.

We will be glad to tell you of campaigns which have notably increased sales—and will show you without obligation how you can get the wholehearted co-operation of your merchants.

Money-Saving Information

"The most useful information contained in any paper I get"—so a Western banker writes in to-day's mail, renewing his subscription for FINANCIAL POST.

"Very often," his letter goes on to say, "I am called on to suggest investments for small amounts, sometimes as low as a few hundreds, and I find your Investors' Inquiry Service a reliable partner to consult. If every investor knew there was such service at his call it would surely lessen the losses of many of these people."

The Investors' Inquiry Service fills just that need. Unless you are perfectly sure of your investments write us before you buy.

It costs FINANCIAL POST subscribers nothing to be sure before placing hard-earned savings in stocks that may never have a chance of paying dividends. Trained service men will give you the benefit of keen analysis based on the facts behind the securities you are considering. This is one of many features enjoyed by our readers.

BUYING THE SEEN AND THE UNSEEN

It is easy to judge the size and quality of a visible commodity. There are certain recognized standards that have been universally accepted to which purchased articles may be compared.

With invisible commodities, such as a publication's circulation, the matter is not so simple. It is only recently that a definite measurement has been obtained.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations now furnishes a recognized standard by which circulation may be measured. A publication's distribution can now be as accurately gauged as any other purchased commodity.

Canadian Grocer's circulation is measured by the A. B. C. In buying advertising space in its columns, you receive dollar-for-dollar value.

Watch Closely Their Collections

Griffin Bros., Brampton, Ont., Believe That in a Period of Declining Prices a Close Scrutiny of Stocks and Likewise of Collections is Necessary if a Merchant is to Avoid Pitfalls.

"OUR business is just as good as it was a year ago," Griffin Bros., Brampton, Ont., told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently, in the course of a discussion on present trade conditions. "We have maintained a steady trade, and monthly returns are as good and in some instances better than they were in 1920. We have kept close watch on our stock, and our losses as a result of holding high-priced goods have been reduced to a minimum. When we took stock at the first of February, we had only $4,000 in goods. That was quite a bit lower than six months previous, but we had reduced considerably. We followed the policy of lowering our prices to the consumer, in line with declines in wholesalers' quotations. On the other hand, however, we have certain lines that have shown no change in value in a downward direction, but are holding steady and in some instances have shown actual advantages. Our losses because of declining commodities have not been heavy, and have been partially offset by the fact that on other foodstuffs there have been no lower prices named.

Follow the Markets

"We have always very consistently followed the markets in our prices, and we believe that by so doing the merchant has nothing to fear. The grocer who did not lower his prices in keeping with primary quotations had the biggest worry. The people have been looking for prices to come down, and there has been a tendency for customers to go where values are the lowest. When prices began to go down, perhaps there was a grocer down the street who was selling certain goods lower than we were, and, on the other hand, we might be offering some things at quotations under his prices on the same goods. During the past few months this has frequently been the case, and people have done more scattered buying among the merchants. Early in this period of lower prices we saw that in order to maintain trade it would be necessary to keep our quotations consistent with the declines that were reported from time to time in the primary markets. We have done it right along, and we have found that it paid us to do so. We held the good-will of our customers, and our business has not suffered as a result."

Started in a Small Way

Griffin Bros. have only been in business in Brampton seven years. They had a small beginning but by diligent work, service and careful merchandising they have built up a very fine trade, and their weekly sales average one thousand dollars. "We started with only a stock of $150," Mr. Griffin told Canadian Grocer. "It was a small start, but we kept persevering and by watching our accounts carefully we have succeeded in becoming well established. We have practically no bad accounts.

Close Watch on Collections

"One of the reasons for our success has been the fact that we have kept close watch on our collections, and allowed no accounts to run into big amounts. We have made a practice of collecting our accounts twice a month, and in some instances only once a month. We know our people pretty well, and can judge to just what extent we can allow credit to certain people. For some of our factory people who deal with us, it is more convenient for them to pay us every two weeks. while for others it suits them better to pay at the first of every month. We consider these accounts are as good as cash. Credit of this kind is more a matter of convenience, than anything else. We do not allow accounts to run for longer periods, and any inclination to do so is quickly checked, and not permitted to continue. Ever since we have been in business we have endeavored to meet our own obligations promptly, and this can only be done by our customers meeting theirs in the same manner. It is because of this healthy condition of our accounts that we have been able to meet this readjustment period, without embarrassments. Watching stock closely, and keeping collections paid up, are two essentials that are necessary in order to successfully carry through a period of changing prices, such as we have experienced in the past six months."

Turnover Every Six Weeks

Discussing the number of turnovers in their business in the course of a year, Mr. Griffin told Canadian Grocer that they turned their stock over once every six weeks. Since taking inventory on the first of February, however, they have practically turned it once a month. It is their endeavor to do so, as it is Mr. Griffin's opinion, that only in quick turnovers can the grocer make a success of business.

"While prices have been showing a downward trend, we have been guarded in our buying and purchase only as requirements necessitate," Mr. Griffin remarked. "However, we have had some lines in fairly heavy quantities, but fortunately they are lines that have not declined, but rather have held at strong prices. We try to keep everything in our store moving, and it has always been our aim to have no dead stock on our shelves. If we find a certain line is not a good seller, and it is not proving popular with our trade, we get rid of it and do not stock it again."

Good Equipment Valuable

Griffin Bros. believe in having convenient equipment in their store, asserting that it facilitates service, as well as rendering economies that are well worth while. They have a refrigerator counter that has doubled their sales of meats, up-to date slicer, and computing scales that are conveniently situated, with the idea of saving time.

Window displays are a telling factor in promoting sales in the Griffin store, and Griffin Bros. keep their window changed frequently, displaying new lines from time to time. Just previous to the visit of the Canadian Grocer representative they had had a display of Northern Spy apples. On the Saturday previous, they had sold two barrels in lots of one peck and smaller from a bulk display of them in the window.

"Short Weight Law is Poor Legislation"

Members of Grocers' Section of R. M. A. Discuss Recent Convictions for Selling Bread of Light Weight—Will Interview Government in Regard to the Same—Many Matters are Discussed at Regular Meeting

TORONTO, April 11 (Special).—The grocers' branch of the Toronto Retail Merchants' Association met this evening, when several matters of importance were discussed. Jerry Burns, who was later elected chairman of the section, occupied the chair, and the minutes of the last regular meeting were read by Secretary Miller of the Retail Merchants' Association. Reference was made to the division that had taken place in the grocers' section, owing to some differences of opinion, but it was pointed out that it was only in an alliance with the Retail Merchants' Association throughout the Dominion that the best interests of the retailer could be served. Consequently a special effort is being put forth to enlist the grocers into the membership of the grocers' section, as affiliated with the association, and to correct wrong impressions that have gone forth which are detrimental to the work of the association.

Amendment Did Not Pass

Secretary Miller outlined legislation that had been urged before the present session of the legislature. He spoke of the effort that was made to have an amendment passed to the Factories and Shop Act, but which was unsuccessful, owing to the intervention of Premier Drury. The bill as introduced by Alex. Lewis, member for Northeast Toronto, would have operated to the improvement of the early closing by-law, inasmuch as it would only have permitted men who sold fruit exclusively to remain open after seven o'clock. The man who had the least possible stock of groceries, according to the amendment, would have to close. The Premier attended at one of the meetings of the committee and stated that the time was inopportune for such legislation, with the result that the amendment did not go through. "I do not think there will be any use trying to get such a clause through as long as this Government is in power," stated Secretary Miller. "However, the present early closing by-law still exists."

Want More Enforcement

"But it is not enforced," stated a member present.

Several grocers spoke of stores remaining open in their respective neighborhoods, and of the fact that little or no effort is being put forth to enforce the by-law. A resolution was passed, instructing the secretary to write the Board of Police Commissioners, and urge upon that body the necessity of seeing that this by-law is enforced.

"If you haven't the snow cleaned off the sidewalk in the winter you are quickly summoned," remarked one grocer, "but in the matter of an early closing by-law a good deal more carelessness is evident."

Peddlers' and Hawkers' Act

In regard to the Peddlers' and Hawkers' Act, Mr. Miller stated that leniency has been shown these people on the assertion that the goods they were selling from door to door were made in the province. An effort is being put forth by the Retail Merchants' Association to have this practice stopped, and the Prime Minister has asked that a committee meet him to discuss this matter, with a view to bringing down some new legislation in this regard at the next session.

The Luxury Tax

An outline of the conference of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, which was held ten days ago, to discuss the subject of a general sales or turnover tax, was given by the secretary. It was pointed out that the luxury tax had resulted in a stagnation of business, and how a general sales tax absorbed by manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, would result in a more smoothly operating tax, and against which there would be little complaint.

Short Weight Legislation

The chairman brought up the matter of the law in respect to short weight merchandise, for which the grocer is liable, and over which the grocer has no control. He thought that there should be some change made in this legislation. He instanced the case of the grocers who were fined a fortnight ago for selling light-weight bread. "The law is a bad piece of legislation," Mr. Burns stated. "I believe the association should take this matter up, and see that some changes are made. The same can be said of butter and flour, as of bread. Unless a grocer weighs up everything that comes into his store, he may unknowingly be selling short weight goods. I hope all the grocers have read the regulations regarding foods that have been appearing in Canadian Grocer. These contain a lot of useful information for the grocer."

It was moved by D. W. Clark, and seconded by D. McLean, that the secretary prepare a case against this law and arrange for an interview with the Government, in order that it might be presented. A committee consisting of D. W. Clark, Donald McLean and J. Davidson was appointed to accompany the secretary on the occasion of this interview.

No Action Is Taken

A letter from Mayor Church asking the grocers' approval of a movement to have the Government return to a two-cent stamp for drop letters, instead of three cents as now. Nothing was done in the matter, several members stating that the Government had to have the money, and an extra cent for a stamp was an easy method of getting it.

Merchants' Day at Fair

The first Wednesday in the two weeks of the Toronto Exhibition will be Merchants' Day, according to an announcement of Secretary Miller at this meeting. It is intended to make it a genuine retailers' day, and merchants from all over Canada will be present. The luncheon on this occasion will be in charge of retailers, and the speakers will be men thoroughly conversant with retailers' problems. A committee of three will be appointed at a later meeting of the section to co-operate with other branches of the association.

New Officers Elected

The resignation of Robert Dowson as chairman of the grocers' section was received. J. Burns was elected chairman, J. Davidson first vice-chairman, Dave Bell second vice-chairman and Donald McLean treasurer.

The question of a picnic this summer was discussed, and the opinion was unanimous that one should be held. It has always been a success. All the grocers present were appointed a picnic committee, and the matter of arranging for a boat and destination was left to Mr. Clark, who will report at the next meeting.

Yeast is composed of round cells by the millions. Four thousand of these living cells, placed side by side, would be required to make an inch. Each cell is a complete plant by itself and can reproduce itself indefinitely by budding, and they multiply with startling rapidity in warm temperature. The yeast is generally obtained by placing selected yeast cells in a mixture of corn, rye, barley malt and water.

Selling More Important Than Location

A Little Incident That Shows That While a Store May be Far Removed From The Business Centre of the Town, Goods Can Be Sold by Real Selling Effort.

HERE is a little incident that just goes to prove that the location of a store is not always the main feature in building a business. The real outstanding factor after all is salesmanship and it makes no material difference whether the store is situated in the extreme limits of the city or whether it occupies the most central location in the busy business section. The only difference is that the business must be handled in such a way as to meet the conditions in the community in which the store is situated or the class of trade to whom the merchant wishes to make appeal.

This little story was related to a representative of Canadian Grocer by Robert Kirby, whose store is situated far from the busy marts of trade in the city of Sarnia, Ont. Mr. Kirby tells it in his own way, as follows:

Location Did Not Appeal

"A short time ago a demonstrator came to town for a certain brand of jam. She was demonstrating in a store where the proprietor happened to be a friend of mine. This friend, discussing with the demonstrator the possibilities of sales in the different stores, said that he mentioned my store as one that would be worth her time. When she found that we were situated away out here, she told my friend that it would be a waste of time, because she didn't think it would be possible to sell half a dozen tins. The demonstrator, however, came around to see me—but in the meantime I had been told about the incident of the half dozen tins. When she asked to have a demonstration I was naturally a little annoyed, and I gave her back her own words—that I thought it would be a waste of time as she probably would not sell more than half a dozen tins.

Clerks Lend Assistance

"Well, to make a long story short, she finally came here one Saturday, but as I was rather sore about what she had said, we did not take much interest in the demonstration for the better part of the morning. It was a very busy morning. The five of us were rushed. About eleven o'clock I commenced to feel kind of sorry for the demonstrator because she wasn't doing any business to speak of. I knew that the jam had quality. I told the clerks to give her a boost and to jump into the game. We then introduced every customer that came into the store to the demonstrating counter and it was suggested to customers over the 'phone when they were giving their orders.

Sells 118 Tins

"In fact we all became so enthusiastic that it almost became a contest to see who could sell the most jam. I myself was so full of the jam idea that after I got home and to bed I continued to see nothing but jam and was playing tag with it throughout the night in my dreams. When the store closed at nine o'clock and we tallied our sales, I got quite a surprise. I found that we had sold 118 four-pound tins but just six one-pound jars."

Almy's Ltd. Adopt Self-Serve System

Groceteria Plan of Serving Customers is Now in Vogue in Large Montreal Store—"Means Cutting Down Overhead Expenses" Says New Manager of Department

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, April 12.—On Monday, April 4, Almy's, Ltd., of this city adopted the groceteria system in their grocery department. For some years this store has conducted a grocery department with a delivery system, but for a number of reasons have abandoned the delivery and have adopted the self-serve system. The new grocery is also under new management, Herbert Taylor, who, for many years, conducted a grocery business in the North of England, having come last week to take charge.

Lower Overhead Costs

In speaking to a Canadian Grocer representative on the afternoon of the opening, Mr. Taylor said: "The margin of profit in the grocery business is so small and the competition in prices so keen to-day that we have found that every possible means must be taken to cut down overhead expenses. One of our heaviest expenses is our delivery, and it is also one that can very easily be cut down. People to-day are willing to carry parcels if it will save them money, and we feel sure that we can save money for our customers and for ourselves by cutting out the delivery system. Then, too, the public is getting so used to the self-serve system throughout the country that it is past the stage where the people have to be educated to it. To me, however, it is practically a new thing for I have seen practically none of it in England. I must confess, however, that I like it. We are able to get along quite as well with a smaller staff by adopting this plan and that, too, cuts down overhead expenses.

Will Sell More Goods

"It is very hard to-day to get real salespeople for a grocery store, people who will make sales and not simply hand out what the customer asks for. By the groceteria system we do not rely on the clerks to make the sales. The tables laden with the merchandise all labelled and priced act as silent salesmen. Just for example, a woman coming up here to get two packages of cereals that she saw advertised at a cut price naturally walks around the department before she leaves. Practically everything that we have on sale is before her eyes, all ready parcelled and priced. Under the old system it is not likely that a clerk would ask her if she wanted split peas, yet as she walks around she sees a table full of two-pound packages of split peas. The idea immediately strikes her that it might help solve the dinner problem tomorrow and the sale is made. In the one day that we have been running this new system this fact has been very noticeable. Our sales are larger and more varied in character. Not only that, but in many cases we sell twice the quantity just as easily as we would have sold the smaller lot by the old system, simply because the parcels are all ready to be taken away. It is quite easily explained, for when women ask for a pound of split peas in the first instance they have very little idea just how much is in the pound, yet when she sees the two-pound package done up before her she realizes that it is not too much for her to use."

An Orderly Arrangement

Although the management of the store had only one day in which to arrange the new department on Monday everything was arranged in order and the white tables neatly piled with merchandise. In this new department everything is white. The space is enclosed by a white enameled fence. There are two entrances, two parcelling counters and two cashiers. On Monday afternoon the management of the store found that they had underestimated the requirements of their new department, and things were becoming congested, particularly around the parcel counters. Immediately a staff of carpenters were sent up to move the fence at one end and add fifteen feet more floor space to the department. When a customer enters the enclosure she is given a large basket in which to collect her purchases. This she carries back to the parcel desk, where the goods are wrapped and a price check is given her. When the bill is paid to the cashier the parcel is handed to her in receipt for the check marked "paid." Almy's, Ltd., believe that there are many advantages to the groceteria system and that the public rather enjoy choosing their own groceries in this way.

Stocks of Goods in England Are Large and Values Declining

C. Fairhall Fisher, Vice-President and Managing Director of J. W. Windsor, Ltd., Montreal, Talks of Conditions in England and in European Countries.

MONTREAL.—(Special.)—C. Fairhall Fisher, vice-president and managing director of J. W. Windsor, Limited, Montreal, has just returned from a three months' trip to France, England, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and Scandinavian countries.

Speaking of conditions in the Old Country, Mr. Fisher stated to Canadian Grocer that stocks of many goods in England are large, value is declining, and the labor situation is acute. In France, the labor situation is practically settled and the stocks generally on hand in wholesale houses are light, because the exchange in France has been so high that buying has been going on from hand to mouth for the last two years. Further than that, France did not have the huge stocks of goods on hand during the last years of the war that England had.

What France is feeling most is the non-payment of Germany's debt. As soon as this is accomplished, or even partly accomplished, things will right themselves in France. Switzerland is feeling keenly the effects of their exchange, which has prevented to a very large extent the usual large number of visitors during the past winter, and prospects are not good for the regular influx of summer tourists. Switzerland depends largely on its tourists' trade. In Italy, business is fairly good, and on account of the low rate of Italian exchange, large quantities of goods are being exported from Italy to other countries.

Inactivity of Shipping

Denmark, Norway and Sweden, Mr. Fisher said, are suffering much from the inactivity of the shipping business and the poor state of the lumber markets. On this account there are a large number of unemployed people, especially in Sweden and Norway. The exchange in Norway is much lower than in the other Scandinavian countries, and the result is that the Norwegian government at present have prohibited the importation of all articles excepting actual necessities.

Mere Totals Will Not be Acceptable

Merchant in Western Ontario Asks For Criticism of Income Tax Returns—Has Not Arrived at Income in the Right Way—Follow Detailed Instructions

Article No. 3 by GEORGE G. YORKE

A WESTERN Ontario retail general merchant writes:

"I have read your article on making income tax returns, which is very much to the point at the present time. Below I am giving my trading returns. Is this statement correct?"

Total assets	$17,500
Total liabilities, Dec. 31, 1920	5,250
	$12,250
Less net worth, Dec. 31, 1919	$10,050
Net profit or income	$ 2,200
Exemptions	$ 1,150
Balance	$ 1,050

"Is this correct? Do I pay the tax on the balance $1,050?"

Answer.—You have not arrived at your income in the right way and have probably assessed yourself for far more than you should pay, and the income tax commissioner does not desire anyone to pay one cent which is not due.

Now take your income tax paper form TI; turn to page 4 and begin to fill in each item as it appears. Below will be found an example.

Only Way Acceptable

The example as is here shown is the only way the Government will accept your return. Everyone was told they must keep proper books of account last year, and to try to scrape through by merely showing totals of assets and liabilities and the net worth is useless today.

A merchant may have made a large sum on a side deal in real estate on which profit is not liable for income tax, yet in the same year his actual trading account may show a very small margin of profit. Follow the detailed instructions I have given in the two previous articles dealing with the subject. First obtain your forms and begin at once as directed and you cannot possibly go wrong if you make a clean-cut, honest return.

An Example to Follow:

Merchandise sold during year		$24,875
Inventory of stock, Jan. 1st, 1920 (net valuation)	$ 8,200
Add cost of merchandise bought, including freight	16,000
	$24,200
Inventory of stock, December 31st, 1920	6,500
	$17,700	$17,700
Gross profit		$ 7,175
Commission from Cream Agency		241
		$7,416
Expenses:—
Wages, $2,350, Rent, $450	$ 2,800
Advertising, $50, Depreciation on Rigs, $15	65
Horse Feed, $120, Horse Shoeing, $30	150
Gas, Oil and Tires, actual figures for Truck	200
Cartage, $18, Telephone, $70	88
Office Supplies and Counter Check Books	105
Interest on Borrowed Capital used in Business	....
Bank charges, $16, Water Tax (if any) $10	26
Heating Store, $160, Lighting Store, $48	208
Tax on Business Premises	16
Business Tax, $5, Motor Truck License, $10	15
Insurance on Stock, Fixtures, Horse and Rig	25
Insurance on Truck, $30, Depreciation on Fixtures, $10	80

Old Country Manufacturer Comments on Canada's Prosperity

Manufacturers in United Kingdom, he States, Have Not The Same Advantages Over Other Countries as in Pre-War Days—No Cheap Labor, Coal or Transportation

DAVID PERRY, of Perry and Hope, Glasgow, Scotland, manufacturers of malt extract, cream of tartar substitute, bread improvers, essences and colorings, has been in Canada for some time. Discussing business conditions with a representative of Canadian Grocer, he remarked that here in Canada he thought there was a good deal of prosperity, and Canadian business men were not suffering from trade depression to the same extent as other countries. Mr. Perry, with his wife and daughter, is returning to Scotland at the end of this week, after a five months' tour around the world. He had just come across Canada from Vancouver, on his arrival there from Australia. He has had an opportunity to study conditions in Australia, New Zealand and now in Canada.

Not the Same Advantages

"Conditions are very much better here than in the Old Land, although there is some improvement over there," Mr. Perry added. "Old Country manufacturers, however, since the war, have not the same advantages over manufacturers on this side as they had once. We have no longer any such thing as cheap labor, cheap coal or cheap transportation. These things have passed, and competition is more difficult. It just seems that all the tariff of the world are a wall around us. As a result of these new conditions, a great deal of new manufacturing is going to open up in the colonies.

Want Canadian Business

"As regards our own business, we are not selling in the Canadian market to any extent. Some years ago it was our intention to open a factory in Canada, but the idea was abandoned. Ultimately it might be that we will locate in Canada. During my short stay in Canada I have come to the conclusion that there is a big field here. Owing to the unfavorable exchange situation existing between Canada and the United States there is an evident desire to buy in the Old Land, Canadian buyers being able to profit by our unfavorable exchange in Canada."

Mr. Perry is also keenly interested in the re-establishment of soldiers, and in New Zealand. Australia and Canada, has been giving some study to the problem as dealt with in these countries. He is actively engaged in his own city of Glasgow with this matter, as he was during the war, with the entertainment and care of soldiers from the colonies as well as from the British Isles.

"Grocery butter is so unsatisfactory, dear," said Mrs. Youngbride, "I decided to-day that we would make our own."

"Oh, did you?" said her husband, as reported by the Boston Transcript.

"Yes; I bought a churn and ordered buttermilk to be left here regularly. Won't it be nice to have really fresh butter?"

Judgment Reserved in Grocers' Case

Hearing in Action Against Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association Before Mr. Justice Orde is Now Concluded—A. W. Roebuck for the Attorney-General Occupies Nine Hours in His Argument

By Staff Correspondent to Canadian Grocer

TORONTO, April 12—Argument for the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association in the case of the Attorney-General of Ontario versus the association, and certain manufacturers, namely, the E. W. Gillett Co., W. C. Macdonald, Reg., the Canada Starch Co. and the St. Lawrence Starch Co., alleging price fixing and a combine in restraint of trade, was not concluded until last Saturday evening at six o'clock. Justice Orde, who heard the evidence, reserved judgment. The hearing of this case occupied two weeks, and in his presentation of his argument on behalf of the Attorney-General, A. W. Roebuck spoke for nine hours. Robt. McKay, K.C., for the association, addressed the Court for six hours, and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., for the manufacturers, an hour and a half.

Cases Entirely Different

Evidence in the case of the Attorney-General of Ontario against the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association has been completed, and counsel for the opposing sides were occupied at the close of the week with the presentation of their arguments.

A. W. Roebuck, for the Attorney-General, pointed out that the present action had not already been decided, by reason of the hearing before the Board of Commerce in March, 1920, claiming that the subject matter and relief asked for were entirely different. The Attorney-General, he stated, did not lay the claim in the Board of Commerce case. The decision in this instance was not conclusive, and, Mr. Roebuck contends, is without effect to bind the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Another point that Mr. Roebuck urged appertained to the right of the Attorney-General to ask for an injunction to restrain an anticipated breach of criminal or common law, quoting numerous cases and authorities to substantiate his claim.

"No Reason for Action"

In summing up the evidence for the Wholesale Grocers' Association, Robert McKay, K.C., argued that the Board of Commerce was a court of justice and had made a decision in favor of the Wholesale Grocers in March, 1920, "that they were not an illegal combine in the restraint of trade." There was no reason whatever, he said, for the Attorney-General bringing about another investigation. "We have at this trial the same witnesses, who have given the same evidence, perhaps not the exact words, but I say the facts are the same. We had the same argument as to the resolution of the association. In fact, everything that was an issue here was an issue there. That being the case, how can your Lordship make any other decision than that already made by the Board of Commerce?"

Mr. McKay, continuing, summed up the evidence of the various witnesses, pointing out that the cheapest method of distribution to the consumer was through the wholesale trade, that there was no evidence to show that the association was operating to the detriment of the public at large, and that there was no actual malice to injure anyone. "These men so engaged in this necessary business—so engaged in such a slightly profitable business—do not appeal to me as men who are enriching themselves at the expense of the public."

Endorses Policy of Resale Price

Thomas Kinnear, of T. Kinnear and Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, in being examined by A. W. Roebuck, stated that he was prepared to carry out the resolution of the Wholesale Grocers' Association in that wholesalers should not deal with manufacturers who sold direct to the retail trade. He endorsed the policy of manufacturers who fixed the resale price.

"So that if some manufacturers sold to retailers and at the same time sold to wholesalers, you are quite willing to join with other wholesalers in cutting them out?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes," replied Mr. Kinnear.

"You think it proper that manufacturers should then sell only to the wholesale trade?" asked Mr. Roebuck. "Are you doing it?"

"I do not say I am doing it, but I think it is fair," replied Mr. Kinnear.

Asked by Mr. Hellmuth if he approved that all manufacturers should fix all resale prices, witness replied that he did.

"Then if manufacturers fix resale prices, will this tend to lessen or increase the price to the consumer?"

"Lessen," replied Mr. Kinnear.

Referring to the exclusion of W. F. Morley and Co. from the association, Mr. Kinnear stated that Mr. Morley was not a wholesale grocer and he did not give the same service that the wholesale grocer did. If he wanted to come into the wholesale circle, he was quite welcome to do so, providing he gave the same service as other wholesalers, irrespective of overhead. Morley picked out the big dealers and did not serve the smaller merchants.

No Attempt to Fix Prices

T. Chamberlain, vice-president of the asosciation, was next called, and denied any attempt to fix prices, limit production or transportation. He stated that his firm had been in business for the past ten years, but the profits for the past year were practically wiped out, and during the past ten years their profit only averaged 2.02 per cent. on the turnover.

"Have you any objection to some manufacturers selling wholesalers and at the same time selling retailers?" asked Mr. McKay.

"I don't think manufacturers have any right to sell retailers at the same price as wholesalers," replied Mr. Chamberlain.

"Then if they did, what would happen?" asked Mr. McKay.

"I wouldn't care to handle the goods," said Mr. Chamberlain.

Asked for his opinion as to who should fix prices, witness replied that the man who makes the goods should fix the price for both the wholesaler and the retailer. "Then if the manufacturer fixes the price that the wholesaler should sell the retailer, by what method is the wholesaler to be reimbursed?" asked Mr. McKay.

"By discount," replied witness.

"When fixing this discount that the wholesaler is allowed, what do you consider the right amount?" Mr. McKay asked.

"As cheaply as it could be done," replied Mr. Chamberlain.

"Have you endeavored, either by yourself or in conjunction with the Wholesale Grocers' Association, to fix prices?" asked Mr. McKay.

"No," replied witness.

"Have you attempted in any way to increase the cost of transportation?" asked Mr. McKay.

"No," replied Mr. Chamberlain. "On the other hand, we have endeavored to reduce it."

"Have you in any way made any effort to prohibit or lessen the production of any article?" asked Mr. McKay.

"No," replied witness.

What About Competition?

Cross-examined by Mr. Roebuck: "You state that the proper person to fix prices is the manufacturer. What about competition making the price?"

"Competition enters into it, of course," replied Mr. Chamberlain.

"Then manufacturers set the prices as high as possible and competition brings down the price?" said Mr. Roebuck.

"There would have to be a reasonable profit," replied Mr. Chamberlain.

"That is a very broad term, reasonable profit," said Mr. Roebuck.

"He would make as much as he could," replied witness.

"You would not say that profiteering or gouging the public is proper, but the dealer is there to make as much money as he can out of his business?" said Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes."

"And the dealer is limited on the one side by the cost and on the other side by his competition. His price is fixed in regard to this?"

"Yes."

"And the keener the competition the greater the problem he has to face in fixing his price," commented Mr. Roebuck.

A Disadvantage to Customers

A. H. Pafford, of the firm of Armstrong and Pafford, wholesale grocers, Toronto, stated to Mr. McKay that if a manufacturer sold to a retailer as well as to a wholesaler, it would be a decided disadvantage to the customers of the wholesaler.

"Supposing that condition did exist. How long would it last?" asked Mr. McKay.

"It would have to terminate," replied Mr. Pafford.

"Then what would happen?" asked Mr. McKay.

"Drop the line entirely," replied witness.

Mr. Pafford also stated that the manufacturer was the only one who had the right to fix the price of his goods, but claimed the wholesaler was entitled to a fair remuneration for distribution.

Asked by Mr. McKay how this remuneration was got at, witness replied that it was derived by a percentage basis according to the cost of distribution.

A. W. Roebuck, in cross-examining the witness, said: "You say that if a manufacturer was to sell both wholesalers and retailers, the line would be dropped by the wholesalers. Can you give an instance of this kind?"

"Yes, I can," replied Mr. Pafford. "Take the case of a certain breakfast food. The manufacturer started to sell to the retailers at the wholesale price, and eventually wholesalers discontinued carrying it. A certain soap was another line that was cut to pieces and was dropped almost entirely."

"This soap is not a grocery line, is it?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes, it is."

"Is not this soap a drug line? Are you not sure that drug stores beat you to it?"

"No more than departmental stores. "Both these stores were cutting the price," replied Mr. Pafford.

"Then you admit that the public got some bargains," commented Mr. Roebuck.

Might Have Been Bankrupts

"No doubt some of those bargains were bankrupt sales," suggested Justice Orde. "You wouldn't like to see those very often?"

"No, my Lord, nor would I like to see the prices of the necessities of life left to the regulation of the gentlemen who have gone into the witness box during this investigation," retorted Mr. Roebuck.

Continuing the cross-examination by Mr. Roebuck, Mr. Pafford agreed with the definition of a wholesale grocer as given by other witnesses in that a "wholesale grocer was one that could fill what is considered as an opening order." He also endorsed the resolution of the Wholesale Grocers' Association regarding dealing with a manufacturer who sold to a retailer at the same time as dealing with a wholesaler.

"If preferred treatment was given by the manufacturers, then the wholesalers should not be expected to handle his goods," said Mr. Pafford.

"Then I suppose Morley is not a wholesale grocer," said Mr. Roebuck.

"No, not in the real definition of a wholesale grocer," replied Mr. Pafford. "He does not carry a full line."

"Then what about Harris, of Hamilton? Another witness was Knowles, and the York Trading Company. Are they wholesalers?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I would not consider them wholesalers," replied Mr. Pafford.

This concluded the evidence for the Wholesale Grocers' Association and the manufacturers.

R. K. McIntosh Testifies

"We know our ways are successful, and we are conceited enough to think there are no two ways about it," said R. K. McIntosh, general manager for Canada of the Canadian Postum Cereal Co., and until recently manager of the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co. of London, Ont.

Answering Robert McKay, K.C., Mr. McIntosh said the cost of distributing cereals was 32 cents per case when done in a wholesale way, as practised now, and 94 cents in a retail way. He was positive it would be "bad for business" if the manufacturer were to sell to one jobber at one price and to another jobber at a different price. Wholesale distribution to wholesale dealers, who had facilities for local redistribution, meant a saving for all concerned.

To Mr. Roebuck, witness insisted that the saving was shared equally by the consumer as by the manufacturer and wholesaler.

In reply to questions from I. F. Hellmuth, representing three companies, Mr. McIntosh stated that he would like to return to the times when the manufacturer made cast iron agreements with the jobber as to his price to the retailer. The stabilized price in the long run meant money in the consumers' pockets. The fluctuating price meant large expenditures for advertising, the cost of putting new products on the market, and factory costs because of fluctuating production.

"There is a price," said Mr. McIntosh, "beyond which the housewife will not go, as we found out a year ago. The price of our cereal increased because of increased cost of production. We at once observed a decrease of 22 per cent. in sales. That had to be overcome by advertising."

Wholesale Method Best

John F. Taylor, secretary of the E. B. Eddy Co., manufacturers of matches and paper bags, stated that his company distributed through the wholesalers, fixing the price to the retailer and allowing the wholesaler a discount. There was a preferred list of wholesalers, but membership in any association had nothing to do with those put on the list, which was compiled by the president of the company. Mr. Taylor believed this method of distribution to be the cheapest. His company had used it in preference to selling direct since 1851. He believed that this method of distribution stabilized the market and resulted in an ultimate saving to the consumer. Cut-rate prices would result in decreased production with ultimate increase in cost of production.

Striking Display is Effective in Building Sales

London, Ont., April 12.—The possibilities offered by simple window dressing for making a most attractive and "pulling" display are strikingly shown at the Scandrett grocery here this week. In one of the firm's windows the floor is laid with white crepe paper. The sides are trimmed with white and dull purple. This makes a background for bottles of catsup. The arrangement of the bottles is as simple as it is effective. Starting with three in the front it rises gradually to the rear until the back row is about four feet high. The bottles are built up by means of plates of glass and the entire display is one that instantly attracts and also holds because the prices are given prominently. In an adjoining window an almost identical scheme is carried out with cans of corn and tomatoes. The windows have been splendid boosters of turnover in all the lines shown.

Breaches of the Lottery Act.

A MERCHANT was recently convicted and fined for a breach of the Lottery Act. This merchant, the week preceding Easter, for the purpose of increasing his turnover, conceived the idea of putting on a contest. With every purchase was given a ticket bearing a number, and a duplicate ticket bearing the same number was cast into a large container. The Saturday preceding Easter a person was blindfolded and told to pick out ticket from the container. The person holding the duplicate ticket was presented with a huge basket containing a chocolate Easter egg. It is said that the merchant stirred up such interest in the neighborhood that an inspector got wind of it, and laid a charge against the merchant for a breach of the Lottery Act. The result was that the merchant was summonsed to appear in court. He was fined ten dollars.

There is a lesson in this incident. The merchant who contemplates putting on a contest of any kind will be wise to take to heart, that is, before putting on a contest in which there is an element of chance, to first make sure he is within the law. Although this merchant was only fined a nominal sum, the maximum penalty for such an offence is a two-year imprisonment.

Sell the Specialties, Too.

THE majority of grocers can maintain activity in their trade by directing real selling effort to special lines. This has been pointed out in Canadian Grocer a good many times, but stands repetition, for the fact remains that there are too many merchants who are content to sell only the things that they are asked for. It is the man who is selling things that are not always demanded who has no complaints these days about business being slow. His turnover is comparing very favorably with corresponding periods of last year. He is maintaining his trade because he is selling goods all the time. He is no mere order taker, but is a salesman, and was quick to realize that if business is to proceed smoothly in these days of readjustment, he must exert to the very fullest extent his selling ability.

There is a splendid opportunity to increase your turnover by developing sales in specialties. Building a reputation for being the man who has the special lines of foodstuffs will be found profitable. It will be worth while to make a thorough and continuous study of the buying habits of your customers. Many quick sales mean more profit for you than fewer slow sales with more margin on each sale. Buy the lines that you know you can turn several times in the year, and avoid loading up with "dead" merchandise.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

THE MERCHANTS in Toronto who were fined for selling short weight bread had no alternative but to pay the fine. However it seems that legislation of this kind is very unfair to the unsuspecting grocer, who buys bread from the baker in confident expectation that it is according to law. Grocers say that they are too busy to weigh every loaf of bread, every pound of butter and every bag of flour that comes into the store, but apparently it is a wise policy to take the time to do so, in order that the onus of blame may be placed on the proper party. One grocer who was convicted recently stated that a loaf of bread weighed in his store was found to be four and a half ounces short of the required weight.

ELSEWHERE in this issue there is a story of a merchant who greatly increased his sales on jam with the assistance of a demonstrator. This merchant didn't think much of the demonstration at first, but after buckling down and lending his co-operation, he discovered that his customers were also taking a better interest. This move on the merchant's part stimulated sales on that particular jam and the profits for the day were greatly enhanced thereby. It surely pays to give demonstrators all possible assistance.

IT IS always an advantage to keep just a little ahead of the game. If there is buying to be done, do it to-day. To-morrow may be too late. The man who keeps ahead of the band in the business procession is the first to get the applause.

IT IS a good plan to inject all the newness possible into the store as spring comes on. Something bright and attractive always appeals. Especially is this the case as the bleak days of winter pass.

WITH the approach of spring it is good policy to look about to see what improvements can be made. The purchase of a new show case or two may be the best investment that can be made.

THE observant salesman in any store is a big asset. The grocery business is no place for the man who goes around with his eyes closed and his ears plugged.

Salvation of Retailer Lies in Maintaining Volume as Operating Costs are Still High; Business Still Speculates on Price Levels

Authorities Differ as to Amount of Liquidation Which Will Yet be Necessary to Reach "Bottom"—Claim is Made That Retailers Are Doing Best to Reduce Prices—With Heavy "Overhead" It is in Merchant's Interests to Keep Goods Moving

IN view of the fact that uncertainty as to the probable future trend of prices is generally admitted to be the principal stumbling block in the way of resumption of normal business conditions, it is perfectly natural that a considerable amount of speculation should be in evidence at present. Out of the mass of conflicting forecasts and opinions three different viewpoints may be distinguished.

What may perhaps be called the optimistic view is that prices will never go back to the 1914 level but when stabilization is accomplished the level will be closer to the recent peak than to the 1914 level. If this assumption is well founded it is probable that the present price adjustment process has not much further to go and in some lines already has gone below what will be its permanent level.

World-wide Problem Now

A middle view is that taken by those who base their predictions on experiences during and after the American Civil War. It is pointed out that during the Civil War prices compared to those of 1860 rose to a higher level than did prices during the World War as compared with 1913. After the Civil War there was a sharp drop in prices comparable in severity to the recent drop, but this continued for less than six months and after that prices declined more gradually with frequent minor rallies. It took approximately fourteen years for prices to reach the old 1860 level.

Is Retailer to Blame?

It is pointed out that conditions after the Civil War were much more favorable to a rapid fall in prices than they are now. Then commodity prices in the U. S.A. had risen to a much higher level than those prevailing in other countries. Now the situation is reversed. Moreover after the Civil War there was only one country and that a very prosperous one in which deflation had to take place. Now the problem is world-wide.

In recent weeks there has been a tendency to put the blame upon the retailer for not reducing prices and taking losses, the argument being that this would lead to a more rapid movement of merchandise and better conditions with the manufacturing industries. The case for the retailer has not received much consideration. However, the Bache Review prints an interesting letter from one of the large department stores in New England, which sets forth the position in which many retailers no doubt find themselves. This letter says in part:

Merchandise Marked "Close"

"When so much is being written and said against the retailer, would it not be fair to make an impartial examination of his case by way of a change, in a spirit of fair play and a square deal?

"Those of you who criticize us now seem to forget that it was the retailer who first cut prices almost six months ago, when the manufacturers failed to recognize the change in the temper of the buying public, which the retailer was quick to sense through his close contact over the counter.

"At that time the wholesaler and manufacturer was the first to criticize the retailer for reducing prices, telling him he would be unable to replace his stocks except at still higher prices! Had the retailer heeded this advice it would have prolonged the period of high prices, as none of us have heard of a wholesaler reducing his prices when the demand was still strong. Is this consistent with the great chorus of 'profiteer' which the wholesaler is lustily shouting to-day?

"In spite of your undoubtedly well-meaning statements to the contrary, I assert without fear of successful contradiction that the retailers as a class have not been guilty of profiteering during the war, nor are they at this time. We are all marking our merchandise closer to-day than for many years; we have been reducing stocks, and buying only from hand to mouth, and in so doing are able to follow the market down, giving our customers the benefit of the new low prices.

"I have been in close touch with a great many retailers in this section and we have freely and frankly exchanged confidential information relative to our business, and I know that as a craft the retailers are doing everything possible to bring prices to the lowest level obtainable, short of self-extermination."

Profits on Paper Only

The writer then, while asserting that the retailer during the last five years has made little, if any, increase in percentage of net profits, admits that this percentage expressed in dollars is larger than heretofore, but he further contends that the profits thus accumulated on his balance sheet were on paper only and not in cash in his pocket. Rising prices made for larger inventories, the shrinking value of the dollar increased his expenses, and then if the books showed the accumulation of a reserve, the government stepped in and took the lion's share. This is what has been happening to nearly all business operations under the baleful workings of the Excess Profits tax. The small amount left for dividends and reserve against the inevitable rainy day has, in most instances, been so inadequate that, the writer claims, the retailer should not now be blamed for trying to save himself from business disaster. He adds:

Combinations Impossible

"The nature of our business is such that combinations to maintain prices are practically unheard of, if not actually impossible. Therefore, the element of keen competition would work to lower prices even though the storekeeper desired otherwise. With costs of operating our stores still high, our salvation lies in maintaining volume, and this means sharp bidding for the business that exists in our respective communities and when you find retailers bidding for increased sales you invariably find price concessions.

"You see, gentlemen, the much abused retailer is not entirely without a defence. He is by no means the heartless, selfish, conscienceless, unprincipled being he is sometimes represented to be, and every man of the craft who takes pride in his occupation, and values the respect of his associates and the community in which he lives, resents the imputations and injustices to which he has been subjected in just such articles as yours."

Better Supply of Maple Syrup

Montreal, April 13.—There has been no further change in the condition of the market for maple syrup. Prices are steady with ample supplies coming forward. The weather conditions have improved considerably lately for the production of maple syrup, and as a result it is expected that prices may drop a little in the near future. The nights lately in the Province of Quebec have been frosty with bright, sunshiny days, which goes to make a good flow of sap. There is every probability that quotations on maple syrup will be lower before the season is over.

Possibilities in Fruits and Vegetables

Letter to Henry Johnson, Jr. Opens Discussion on the Handling of Perishables—A Study of Conditions as They Now Exist

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A MAN writes me thus: What is the present opportunity and possible future developments in the fruit and vegetable business from the standpoint of the retailer?

That is a large order, but here is the point. I am a young man holding a good position with a successful advertising organization. The future is not limited here, but I am anxious to strike into some line which offers possibilities for real development, where I can put my advertising and merchandising experience into action—and where, with money not the primary object, I can gain the satisfaction of seeing my personal efforts result in actual accomplishments. My attention has been called to the changing character of our distributing problems and the marketing of our food products—fruits and vegetables in particular. Do you see any special unit which should be developed to a higher efficiency or do you see any steps which could be eliminated in the marketing of fruits and vegetables by the substitution of some new aggressive unit which might combine the former functions of a given group? Or, simply, is there any business opoprtunity here that is being overlooked?

I understand you are familiar with our local situation — the fruit auction, the dormant wholesale receiver, the aggressive broker, the successful wagon trade to the grocer, etc. Is, for example, the broker to put the old jobber or receiver out of the way? Is the grocer giving the best service to the community by not getting up early enough to get down to the market, but relying on the wagon jobber? Or is the grocer merchandising his fruits the way he should? I am not yet familiar with the per cent. of volume fruits and vegetables form in the average grocery, but familiar with only one local store where a really good job is being done in trying to sell the purchaser on these products in any but the ordinary corner grocery display style. You know what is meant.

Now, what is the opportunity for an exclusive fruit and vegetable store? Secondly, if this exclusive store was backed by capital enough, and then went in and did a real job of advertising and merchandising their location, products, etc., is the fruit and vegetable business of the character to stand this kind of publicity and will it react as other specialty businesses have? Are there any stores of this character operating now? If successful and you would advise it, I should want to go and study their methods.

You possibly never received a letter like this before. You have no way of knowing my standing and may be hesitant in answering that long series of questions as freely as I hope you will. Be assured that if anything you should write is confidential in any way, it will be kept as such. Any light you may be able to throw in the path of a man considering entering the ramifications of this industry will be greatly appreciated.

Covers Practically Limitless Ground

No: you guessed right—I never have received such a letter before; and by the same token I am mighty glad to get this one. It opens the way to a discussion of the handling of perishables that is so wide in its possibilities that probably I shall have to carry it into several articles. But that is fortunate, for the subject merits all the attention we can give it.

Before I tackle it, I want to give this boy a hint that may be useful to him through life. I have altered his letter to the extent of cutting out a lot of indirection used to avoid saying "I think," "I seek" and other uses of the personal pronoun singular. This is folly. About forty years ago a notion got about that to say "I," "me," "my," "myself" was to manifest undue and offensively obtrusive egotism, conceit and self-importance, and everybody veered away from that short, expressive, direct form of speech. This boy refers to himself as "the writer" and says "it is meant" and "it is hoped" instead of writing "I," "I mean," "I hope." We have had a lot of efforts to avoid direct speaking—saying, apologetically, "personally, I," for example, to sidestep unfavorable comment when to avoid the pronoun was impossible.

Cut it out! Come forward yourself and say what you have to say! Real people have no time to waste on circumlocution, and no real person will object to any use of I, me, myself, provided you have anything worth listening to to utter. Advertising men especially should be speakers to the point. Same with everybody else. Glance at the Bible once in a while for a model of direct, simple, comprehensible speech. Take this in good part. It is meant that way. Now to our knitting:

This letter apparently is predicated largely on the rather prevalent idea that there is a lot of waste motion and needless expense in our present scheme of distribution. Men analyze costs that intervene between producer and consumer in various countries. One tells me that in Japan it is, say, 14 per cent.; in Italy, 18; in Germany, 24; in Britain, 46, and in the United States, 76. Much emphasis is laid on that figure of 76—usually this way!!!!

But is all this conclusive evidence that we are glaringly wrong and the entire scheme going to pot? I think not; for I reason that Japanese live on rice and tea, while we enjoy the most varied dietary of any people in history—and the other nations come in between us and the Japanese in variety. Further: what did distribution cost 100, 300, 1,000 years ago, having in mind what the people ate those days and what was available for them to eat? Have we improved? In 1688 it was common for food to rot in one township in England while famine raged in the next. The Russians of to-day would be glad to have enough coarse bread and some milk to keep body and soul together, but money will not buy either. Rightly considered, the distributive cost of our most varied food list is therefore incomparably lower than is that of Russia.

Altruism Not Practical

"With money not the primary object," says my friend. Wherever money is not the really definite object, business fails. If the work be worthy, the service genuine, money follows inevitably. Therefore, the logical and entirely proper aim in preparing to enter any business and pursue it with all that is in you is to make money, for money making connotes success and success evinces service; and solid, lasting satisfaction will follow the attainment of all this. Hence, go after this with "your heart and brain and sinew" for what you can make out of it. The rest will follow.

Do I see any special unit which should be developed to a higher efficiency? Yes: all the units. Many individual links in the chain are functioning well, but all could function better, and those which now are doing the best work are progressing steadily to better things. It is possible that "some new aggressive unit might combine the functions of a group" to the benefit of business and consumer. That might be revealed to some bright student of the problem, provided he was working from within. If he were in the business, had learned it thoroughly, was familiar with all its ramifications, he might see opportunity for its radical bet-

W. Graham, of Morpeth, who has been conducting the Erie Hotel as well as his grocery store, has sold the hotel to Mrs. C. Avern, of Brantford. Mr. Graham will continue the store.

Leo Grondin, of Amherstburg, is completing work this week in connection with remodelling his store front and the installation of new plate glass windows.

Elmer Morrow, of Tara, Ont., has taken a position in the grocery store of C. J. Halliday at Chesley. Harry Stevens, who has been with the firm for many years, is leaving shortly to go into the insurance business.

E. H. Graham, of Cromarty, Ont., sustained a serious loss in the complete destruction of his store by fire. When discovered in the early morning the flames had made such progress that nothing could be done to check them.

Peter Hubert was sentenced in Sudbury to one year in Burwash for the theft of groceries to the value of $50 from the store of L. P. Trudeau, of the same town. Wilfred Pare, Joseph Spencer and Hubert were also sentenced to six months for breaking into summer cottages. Hubert's sentences will run concurrently.

Joseph Howard, general merchant at Waterford, Ont., fought two bandits recently, and fought with such good result that he got the gun away from them. He was wounded in the shoulder. Nothing was stolen as the culprits made a get-away when Mr. Howard secured the firearm.

GILBERT NOBBS IN AUSTRALIA

According to a cable received by the Toronto office of Holbrook's, Ltd., H. Gilbert Nobbs, overseas director of this firm, recently arrived in Sydney, Australia. Mr. Nobbs was in Toronto last November, after which he went to England. He left in February for India and then went to Australia. He was a captain in the British army during the war and unfortunately, as will be remembered, lost his sight. In spite of this handicap he travels all over the world in the interests of his firm.

Striking Cigar Workers Are Now Back at Work

London, Ont., April 12.—An important development in connection with the cigar trade took place here this week when the employees of seven shops went back to work. The settlement of the strike, which was called last December, was arranged by Fair Wage Officer E. N. Compton. The men go back to work accepting a cut in wages equal to the increase they received last fall. What is perhaps equally important from the manufacturers' standpoint is that seven other shops, including several of the largest, refuse to be union shops any longer and will operate only as open shops. Since the strike was called probably two hundred cigarmakers have gone from London to Montreal, Detroit and other points. Many of them will not return.

St. John Merchants' Annual Banquet

Large Representation of Merchants at St. John Gathering—Spirit of Co-operation Among All Branches of Trade — Associated Ad. Clubs to Put on Organization Campaign in New Brunswick

ST. JOHN, N.B.—A large number of merchants in St. John were at the annual banquet of the St. John branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. A strongly optimistic note marked the gathering of the retailers, and although they realized that there were difficulties still to be overcome before readjustment would be complete, they felt that matters were righting themselves in a very satisfactory manner.

Many prominent speakers told of the advantage of the association, and outlined present conditions in Canada today. The principal guest of the evening was F. W. Stewart, of Montreal, who spoke eloquently on present conditions and what might be expected in the future. A. N. McLean, president of the association, occupied the chair. The first speaker was His Worship Mayor Schofield. He paid a tribute to the association and said that the city officials appreciated the work done by the association in the city, and were glad at all times to hear their views. He told of efforts to keep the tax rate down, and of the progress the city had made in a sane way. It was now in a good position as compared with other cities. He read a list of per capita expenditure of several cities, showing St. John to be one of the lowest. He suggested that the Retail Merchants' Association discuss the subject of hydro development when it found an opportunity, as this would be ready in about a year and the question was how to distribute the power in the city.

Appeals For Unity

Stanley C. Emerson made a strong appeal to the merchants for unity, and showed the necessity of all working together. W. S. Fisher, of Sackville, N.B., in a brief address caused much laughter by giving figures showing that the manufacturer was the first man to go when hard times came, then he was followed by the jobber, but the retailer survived until the last minute. He added that the manufacturers of today were doing all in their power to co-operate with the jobber and retailer, and fully realized that one could not be successful without the other.

Robert A. Macauley made a strong and forceful speech, pointing out the needs of the association and asking for closer co-operation on the part of the members. He stated that the organization was a national one and reached from coast to coast, and must eliminate from the public mind that the organization was a narrow one or worked for selfish ends. The consumer did not pay all the taxes and all must bear a part of the burden. He touched on group legislation and said that the association should combat this. The chairman then read a telegram from the Associated Advertising Clubs, meeting at Hamilton, telling of a campaign of organization that would be made in New Brunswick. The chairman then called on F. W. Stewart, the speaker of the evening.

F. A. DYKEMAN,
St. John, N.B., elected President of the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association at the annual meeting.

Retailers Keep Manufacturers in Business

Speaking on the conditions throughout Canada, he said that there had been a disappearance of profits on the part of most concerns. The general impression was that the manufacturer did all he could to hurt the retailer. Such was not the case as they realized that they kept them in business, and in some cases the manufacturers were supplying the goods and acting as banker as well. He wanted the Retail Merchants' Association to feel that the manufacturers were working with them, and that many of them were advising their customers to make their purchases cover a period of no longer than from sixty to ninety days. Buying for short periods would do much to stabilize business conditions and put merchandising on a firm basis. Price advances had covered a long period but the decline only a few months. Some things had gone too low, and would react, while others had not yet reached their lowest point. Conditions in the United States were in a much more unsettled condition than in Canada, and he cited instances where Canadian factories were still operating but United States factories in the same lines of business were closed down.

Mr. Stewart showed that declines in raw material did not affect the finished product until several months later, and regretted that the press did not make this clear when announcing declines in raw materials. The transportation problem was a serious one and had a marked influence on prices. Transportation charges should be such as to encourage haulage east and west. He favored high rates on short hauls and low rates on long hauls.

Hopeful Outlook

In concluding, he said that the retailers should encourage the sale of goods produced in Canada, but the Canadian manufacturer should see that his goods were equal to those of any other country. He said that very few articles were produced in Canada that were not equal to those of any other country, and that great strides had been made in the last few years. The business outlook was hopeful and encouraging.

The annual business meeting was held immediately after the speeches, A. N. McLean, the retiring president, being in the chair. The election of officers resulted as follows: Honorary president and chairman of the advisory board, A. N. McLean; president, F. A. Dykeman; vice-president, R. A. Macauley; second vice-president, J. H. Marr; secretary, S. E. Fisher; treasurer, M. E. Grass. Partial advisory board: A. O. Skinner, E. W. Daniel, A. E. Everett, S. C. Emerson, H. H. Scovil, H. Magnusson, C. McConnel, F. S. Thomas, H. Everett, D. Magee, J. McPherson, A. A. McIntyre, J. H. Vaughan, P. Rising, P. Levine, C. H. Smythe, H. C. Brown, A. R. Campbell, W. H. Turner, H. M. Jones, W. Hawker.

A hearty vote of thanks was given the retiring president for his untiring energy in the work of the association during the past year.

Tea and Olives Now Grown on Vancouver Island

Ottawa.—That there are now being successfully grown in Vancouver Island, and for the first time in Canada, both tea and olives, was the information given here to a banquet of local horticulturists by Hon. Dr. Tolmie, Federal Minister of Agriculture.

This year, too, on Vancouver Island, there will be a good fig crop. Filbert and almond trees are in full bloom, and the bamboo crop is large enough to harvest for baskets and fishing poles.

This is an astonishing statement to those without our borders who are prone to think of Canada as a land of snowbanks and wild country.

It is stated, too, that it will only be a matter of time until Canada is able to buy its roses from Pacific coast towns and cities within her borders.

The best caviar is processed from the sturgeon caught in the Caspian Sea of Russia. As a table delicacy it is famed the world over ever since the days of Shakespeare. It is packed generally in small tins or glass jars.

Vancouver Grocer Comments On Difference in Quotations

Points to Facts That a Cash and Carry Store is Selling a Certain Line Three Cents Under Price Quoted by Wholesaler's Salesman to Him, as an Extra Special Offer

VANCOUVER, April 12—(Special.)—"Recently I had a specialty salesman call on me," remarked M. T. Greene, 1,000 Denman St., in discussing buying with a representative of Canadian Grocer. "As an extra special offer he wanted me to contract for a six months' supply of his product and I was to get a very favorable price.

"At the same time, his brand was being advertised locally by the cash and carry department of a downtown departmental store at three cents a pound cheaper than his special price to me. I believe that those who have special prices for the maximum quantity that a small retailer could use have extra special prices for the big stores. I believe that the function of a retailer is to distribute to the consumer. This being true, it is entirely unreasonable for the wholesalers to give an unfair advantage to any one of their customers. The largest cash and carry stores here, run as a feeder to departmental stores, must buy at better prices than are offered to small retailers. I have the greatest confidence in those salesmen who come to me and quote me a fair price, make no attempt to have me strain my resources to handle an excessive quantity, and who seem certain that their line is saleable in such quantities that I will be able to order further modcrate quantities frequently."

Convenience Rather Than Credit

Mr. Greene gives thirty-day credits to many of his customers, but considers that such should properly be called convenience, rather than credit. The opening of the monthly account does not indicate that the customer cannot pay for each article as purchased, but merely that it is more convenient to pay once a month than to bother with C.O.D.'s.

Dead-beat Is No More

This grocer says that conditions are such at the present time, owing to the good work of the Retail Merchants' Association, that the dead-beat customer is practically eliminated. The credit rating department of the Vancouver branch makes it exceedingly difficult for any householder to open a new credit account while that customer has any other grocery bill unpaid.

Looking For The Man Who Let Them "In On The Deal"

A number of Small Retailers in Vancouver, B.C., are the Victims of a Man Who Was Supposed to Have Let Them in on an Extra Favorable Contract For Sugar and Flour

VANCOUVER (Special).—In recent years many stories could be told dealing with sugar. Out in British Columbia there have been many amusing incidents, and some not so amusing.

While the Board of Commerce were holding their August sessions in Victoria one of the prominent druggists was haled before the commission to answer several charges laid by zealous citizens. After the charges concerning tons and tons of sugar stored in this druggist's warehouse were sifted down, it was found that about fifty sacks of coarse salt had stood in front of his little private ice cream factory for several hours one day.

During the shortage, many householders accumulated several months' supply of canned goods in their efforts to get sugar which many grocers would not sell without some additional purchases.

Five Pounds for 49 Cents

Recently one of the cash and carry departments in Vancouver has started to sell five pound cartons of granulated sugar for 50 cents. This sugar costs any retailer at least 60 cents. Imagine the surprise of the trade then when a Granville Street Chinese grocer commences to sell these cartons at 49c. It was found out that while the cash and carry grocery loses 10 cents per carton, to make a leader, the wily Chinese has his boys buy quantities of this sugar from the white price-cutter, and he makes a good fellow out of himself at an expense of only 1 cent per carton.

Let Retailers "in on" Deal

Within the last week literally dozens of small retailers have carefully scanned the pages of the daily papers hoping to see the news that one "Hayes" has been caught. It would appear that Mr. Hayes, in the largeness of his heart, has been letting a considerable number of Vancouver's small retailers "in on" an extra favorable contract which he is alleged to have with the sugar refiners. Two or three of his small deals with the retailers were consummated to the King's taste, and at last, whispering to them in deepest secrecy that his alleged arrangement was about to expire, he allowed these intimate friends to thrust about $10,000 of their money into his hands, with which to buy them sugar and flour at $2 a hundred under the market.

It is to be concluded that the local quotations were not sufficiently attractive and that more remote markets seemed to offer superior advantages, for the police are combing the country for him. He will probably return, for he is not one to slip easily through a comb. He weighs about 300 pounds.

New Goods

The Upressit Corporation of New York City is putting on the Canadian market a device for salt and pepper shakers designed to keep the holes free during hot and damp weather. To clear the holes a pressure at the centre of the shaker is necessary. The Upressit shaker top may be removed and replaced by a simple pressure of the finger. The pressure expands therein, thus permitting the cap to be removed. To close again the rim is pressed and the shaker is resealed. The Upressit shaker is of white glass artificially fluted. The cap is plated with silver. The Upressit Products Corporation also manufactures Upressit caps for bottles, tins, jars, etc. The illustrations show the salt and pepper shakers.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE raw sugar market during the week under review has developed further weakness and is in an unsettled condition attributed mostly to the opinion rendered by the counsel of the Federal Sugar Company that the Sugar Finance Committee is illegally constituted. Sales of Cubans were made at varying prices from 5 cents per pound on 43,000 bags afloat down to 4⅞ cents, and one sale reported of 10,000 bags at 4 13-16 cents. Since then the market declined further with sales of Porto Ricos at 5.77 cents and of full duty-paying sugars at 4.77 c.i.f., which equals 4.75 cents for Cubas.

The correct visible production for Cubas to end of March is 1,573,234 tons against 1,901,906 tons at same date last year. The Ways and Means Committee have announced a new tariff bill, which, if passed, will increase the duty on raw sugars practically one cent per pound. One American refinery has reduced its price on refined sugars to 7.75 cents, but others are unchanged and there are rumors of a sale for export to Europe of 5,000 tons at 6.60 cents.

There is no change to report in Canadian refined sugar and the consumptive demand remains normal. Nothing definite can be said with regard to future prices, but it is well for the trade to watch the New York market as some authorities seem to think the declines that have transpired will be only temporary.

The strength of the nut market is a feature this week. Shelled walnuts are extremely strong and with the small stocks held both in Canada and in France, higher prices are practically assured before the new crop arrives, which it very rarely does, in time for the Christmas trade. Shelled almonds, although not quite in the same position as walnuts, are also showing a firmer tone, and prices in primary markets are somewhat higher. Pecans, on account of the very small crop last season, are becoming scarcer, and prices tend upward.

Cereals are quiet and easy, and the same can be said of flour and millfeeds, although bran and shorts are in scant supply, attributed to the mills not operating at full capacity.

Some brands of soaps are reduced, while others have special deals, which practically constitute a decline. Some brands of cleansers in cake form show an advance, while certain brands of peanut butter, soap powder and cooking oil have declined.

Currants are in a strong position with prices in primary markets higher. Raisins and evaporated apples, although showing no price changes, are firmer and show an improvement in movement. Canned vegetables are fairly steady under a good demand but fruits and jams are quiet with prices irregular.

In the vegetable and fruit market little change is noted with the exception of potatoes, which are dull and lower. Barrel apples are about cleaned up, and any that have quality are in good demand and command high prices. New potatoes from Florida are arriving in straight car lots and are moving freely.

Eggs have developed a firmer tone and have a tendency to remain steady at about the present price basis for a time at least. Butter and cheese have easier tendencies.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 13.—Sugar prices stand unchanged this week, and while the American market shows some weakness Canadian prices have every appearance of holding steady. There is no change in the tea market, although the primary markets are stronger, it is having little or no influence locally, and buying is only for immediate requirements. Prunes are lower, but figs, dates and raisins are very firm in price, with stocks short. Walnuts and almonds are scarce with higher prices quoted and a good demand in all lines of nuts. There is a big change in the soap market this week, with prices upset locally. Lower prices are quoted this week on canned asparagus tips, lobsters and on olives. The rice market is in the same unsettled condition. The cereal buying is light and prices are unchanged. Lower prices are quoted on green vegetables with larger supplies arriving and a bigger demand. Strawberries are also lower and oranges are holding firm in price. There is no change in the coffee market.

Coffee Prices Firm

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The coffee market stands steady in price, although the primary markets are much stronger. Supplies on spot are sufficient to carry the trade without any sharp adjustments in price following the changes in primary markets, and a fairly steady basis may be expected for coffee.

Lower Prices on Prunes

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Much strength this week is shown in dates and figs, with an advance of one cent per pound on both in the wholesale market. The supplies of Smyrna figs are reported to be low and both London and New York are quoting higher prices. Raisins are standing firm in price. Prunes are very weak, with further declines listed; 70-80's are quoted at 14 cents this week.

Soap Prices Unsteady

Montreal.

SOAP.—Quotations on all soaps have changed this week and vary considerably. Prices in the city of Montreal are set by local wholesalers this week at a reduction of $1.00 a case. Soap manufacturers in some instances have set a price on their soap, with a bonus offer on 5, 10 and 15 case lots. This bonus offered virtually means a reduction in price, but some of the local wholesalers have preferred to make an actual reduction in list prices and sell from their old stock. This action of the wholesalers has made considerable change in the quotations on soap locally and only holds in Montreal district. French castile soap, 50 one-pound bars to a case, is reduced $2.00 per case and is now quoted at $9.50 per case. The reduction on Comfort and Surprise soap differs among the different local wholesalers and prices as a result may be considered unsteady since some standard basis must be determined in the near future. The only official change in the price of soap is the bonus offer made by the manufacturers.

Rice Market Unsettled

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market continues in its unsettled condition, with prices ruling very low. There is considerable variations in prices, owing to the fact that much price cutting is going on. Practically nothing can be said of the future of the rice market.

NUTS.—There is no change in the quotations on nuts this week, but the strength of walnuts is increased by the rapidly diminishing spot stocks and prices are strong. As the primary markets are very strong, replacement prices will be higher and consequently higher prices may be expected for walnuts. Almonds are steady in price, with a good demand. The approaching Jewish holidays have increased considerably the demand for nuts.

Sugar Market Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is no change this week in the quotations on sugar. The Canadian market for refined sugar is steady, but New York shows weakness on raw sugar, with some refineries in the United States shading their prices. This, however, is not affecting materially the Canadian market and prices holding.

Green Vegetables Lower

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—The feature of the vegetable market this week is the increasing supplies of fresh green vegetables which are arriving. Cucumbers are now offered at $7.00 per hamper. New cabbage is lower this week, since they are now being sold in crates at $7.50. The price last week was $7.00 per hamper, which shows a decrease in cost during the week, with larger supplies on the market. There is a big demand for new tomatoes and the price shows a slight advance, being now quoted at $7.50 per crate. Sweet potatoes are also advanced in price this week. Potatoes continue weak in price and some local retailers are selling potatoes as low as $1.25 per bag.

Lower Prices on Olives

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS—There are a number of changes this week in canned goods but most changes are in fancy lines. Prices on asparagus tips are all reduced and 2½s mammoth are quoted 50 cents lower at $5.25 and ½s large are quoted at $6. Queen olives are lower. Six-ounce bottles are down 20 cents, now quoted $2.20 per dozen and eight-ounce bottles are reduced 50 cents, now quoted at $2.50. Other sizes are correspondingly reduced in price. Lower prices are also quoted on canned lobsters. The decline amounts to 60 cents per dozen on the one-pound tins and 50 cents per dozen on the ¼ pound tins.

Strawberries Are Lower

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The orange market is holding very firm although there have been large supplies arriving in the city lately. Quotations this week have a firmer tone with a good demand for supplies. Blood oranges are a little cheaper, but the requirements are limited. Bigger supplies of strawberries are on the market this week with lower prices and resulting increased demand. The quality of the fruit is also improved. As low as 30 cents a pint is quoted on strawberries this week. Reports from this province show that the frosts of the early part of the week have not damaged the strawberry plants, and so far there is no reason for concern as to the domestic crop this year.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 13.—The feature of the markets this week is the reduction on soaps. While some of the brands have not made a straight reduction in single case lots, there are special deals in five case lots which reduces the price over a dollar a case. Other brands have made a straight drop of 75 cents per case. Sani-Flush, Bon-Ami and Sapolio are higher, also one brand of grape juice is quoted at advanced prices. Shelled walnuts are slightly higher in a extremely strong market. Shelled almonds, although not registering any advance, are in a firm position with a tendency for an advance. Cereals are easy with slight reductions on cornmeal and breakfast food. Triscuit and individual shredded wheat biscuit, after being off the market since the war are again on the market. Currants and raisins are in a firm position, while evaporated apples show a better movement. Refined sugar is steady and unchanged. Potatoes are easy and lower.

Bean Market Quiet

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is nothing of interest developed in the bean market since our last report. The demand has considerably fallen off but stocks throughout the country are not large.

Canned Goods Quiet

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—The special deal announced last week by one of the big canners has been cancelled, few of the wholesalers taking advantage of it. The movement of canned goods has apparently slowed up, many wholesalers reporting sales as rather quiet during the past week. This condition especially on vegetables is perhaps only temporary as the majority of retailers are not carrying heavy stocks. Canned fruits have not enjoyed a heavy sale this season, although wholesalers generally have reduced prices far below the replacement values. Keiller's marmalade 4s are offered at 80 cents each. Upton's pineapple marmalade 4s are offered at 95 cents each. No. 2 tins Bahama sliced pineapple are offered at $2.90 per dozen. Libby's No. 1 tin asparagus tips are selling at $4.90 per dozen. Crown Norwegian sardines are offered as a special this week at $14.50 per case.

Currants are Higher

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS. — Currants in primary markets are stronger and prices during the past week have again advanced. Some shipments have arrived during the week and Patras currants are offered to the trade at 17 cents per pound. Raisins are holding firm. Evaporated apples show a better movement and although prices are unchanged the situation has shown a marked improvement with a more satisfactory condition existing for the evaporators. The advance registered on prunes a couple of weeks ago did not hold and prices slumped to the old basis. Some wholesalers are quoting lower prices on prunes this week.

Southern Fruits in Demand

Toronto.

FRUITS.—Southern fruits are arriving in heavy shipments and there is a good demand noted. Strawberries are a little higher but are expected to be lower at the end of the week. Pineapples are arriving in splendid shape and are offered at $9 to $9.50 per case. Quotations on oranges, grapefruit and lemons are practically unchanged. Barrel apples are about finished and anything that has quality is bringing around $8 per barrel. Box apples are plentiful and are showing a good movement.

Walnuts To Be Higher

Toronto.

NUTS. — Bordeaux shelled walnuts continue to show considerable strength, so much so that it is intimated that the price will shortly be advanced to at least 65 cents per pound. This week importers are quoting at a three-cent advance. Spot stocks are very light and the same situation exists in France, which condition is bound to react in higher prices and a shortage of supplies by the time the new crop arrives, which very rarely does in time for the Christmas trade. Almonds, although not in such a strong position as walnuts, are nevertheless quite firm and higher prices are practically assured. Shelled pecans on account of the extremely small crop this past season are scarce and prices are advanced 10 cents per pound, bringing the price to $1.40. The new crop Brazils are arriving and are lower in price than last year; shelled are quoted at 95 cents and in the shell at 20 cents per pound.

Some Price Changes

Toronto.

MISCELLANEOUS. — Squirrel brand peanut butter is reduced as follows: One-pound tins are now $3.20 per dozen, 5-pound tins $14.50 per dozen, 15-pound tins 21 cents per pound and 55-pound tins 20 cents per pound. Niagara grape juice is advanced; the following are now the new prices: Individual size, $7.50 per case; medium, $6.50 per case, and large size, $6 per case. Mazola oil is lower; No. 1 tins are now quoted at $6.75 per case, 2s at $6.25, 4s at $11.75 and 8s at $10.80 per case. Sani-Flush is advanced to $3.40 per dozen. Sapolio is higher, now quoted at $1.50 per dozen. Bon-Ami is advanced to $4.15 per case or $1.40 per single dozen.

Triscuit Again on Market

Toronto.

PACKAGE GOODS.—After being off the market since the first year of the war, triscuit is again offered to arrive in about ten days. The price is $2.65 per case of 18 cartons. Individual shredded wheat is also back on the market and quoted at $1.70 per case of 72 cartons each containing two biscuits. In view of the lower quotations on bulk oats there are indications that a lower price will be named within a couple of weeks on package oats.

Toronto.

SOAPS.—There are special deals out on five-case lots of such brands of soap as Surprise, Comfort and Sunlight. This deal gives the purchaser one box free with a five-case order shipped from the factory, which practically reduces the price per box to $7.45. Proctor & Gamble's soaps are reduced as follows: Lennox 100s, $7 per box; P. & G. White Naptha and Gold, $8 per box, and Pearline all size packages, $7 per case. Fels Naptha soap is reduced to $8 per case. Taylor's soap powder is reduced to $3.40 per case. Rinso is reduced to $7.25 per case.

Sugar Holds Steady

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The raw sugar market has developed further weakness but fairly heavy sales have transpired at the lower price basis. There is no change in Canadian refined and the consumptive demand remains normal. There is nothing definite to be learned in regard to the near future but it is well for the trade to watch conditions in the New York market as some who are in close touch with the situation seem to think that the decline in prices is only temporary.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 13.—Bulk rolled oats are slightly easier and quotations are reduced. There is a noted improvement in the demand for tea and coffee. Cloves are easier. Several wholesalers are quoting reduced prices on off grades of canned fruit and vegetables. The primary prune market is showing a slightly firmer tone. Sugar is holding firm. Bordeaux shelled walnuts show a firmer tendency and spot stocks are very light. Fresh vegetables and fruits are in good demand.

Rolled Oats Easier

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—Bulk rolled oats are slightly easier and are quoted at $2.35 per bag of 80s. Whole green peas also declined and are quoted at $3.80 per bushel. Other lines show no change.

Coffee Market Steady

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—It is not unusual to have a dull and declining coffee market in the spring, but with prices at present levels many of the trade believed that this spring would be an exception. Prices of coffee are low, future crop prospects are favorable for a considerably higher basis, and from many sources expert opinions are expressed that general financial conditions are improving and an upward turn may come sooner than expected, but at the moment a decided reduction in the Brazil receipts seems the only factor that might bring about an advance. The local market has shown a decided improvement in the demand.

Canned Goods Reduced

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—There are many lines of both canned fruit and vegetables being quoted by wholesalers at reduced prices, but these are largely off grades which have been picked up from holders irrespective of price. This condition applies particularly to canned corn. Large quantities of American canned peas are arriving and are quoted at $3.20 per case. The sale of canned tomatoes is reported heavy, with corn and peas up to normal at this time of the year. However, the canned goods market on the better grades continues firm. Sockeye salmon has been high for the past two years or more, but packers state that there will be no decline in price this year, as there is enough of the other grades on the market and they will be forced to devote all their attention to the packing of sockeye, which naturally means that the expenditure must be borne by this line.

Prunes are Higher

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUIT.—The primary market on prunes is showing a slightly firmer tone, and prices advanced from one-quarter to one-half cent per pound, according to size. This has been caused by large European export orders from both Oregon and California packers. In fact, some Oregon packers claim that they are entirely sold out of the smaller sizes. Peaches and apricots show no change. There is a limited quantity with no special demand for same. Raisins are firm and holders have no difficulty in disposing of their stocks long before the new crop is available.

No Change in Jams

Winnipeg.

JAMS.—Some wholesalers report an active demand for jams, while others claim that they are not selling as well. One wholesaler stated that this condition was the result of some retailers getting rid of jams bought at high prices who have taken their loss and are doing a good business, while others are still keeping prices at the high figures.

Rice Market Firm

Winnipeg.

RICE.—The rice market is ruling firm with little or no indication of further decline. Southern grades such as Carolina and Japan type, are slightly easier. Recent purchases made by wholesalers will be arriving soon, which will permit of a selling price to the trade of one to one and one-half cents under previous quotations. Tapioca is reported easier while sago is ruling firm.

Shelled Walnuts Firmer

Winnipeg.

NUTS. — Bordeaux shelled walnuts have a firmer tendency, with indications that prices will be higher. Spot stocks on halves are very bare, and this has caused an unusual demand for broken. Shelled almonds are quoted at low figures and are considered good buying at the present time. Spot stocks are reported light. No. 1 Spanish shelled peanuts continue low in price. Shelled pecans are difficult to procure with high quotations. Shelled Brazils show no change, although lower prices are quoted on June to December deliveries.

Winnipeg.

FLOUR.—The flour market is quiet with the demand regulated by the merchants' requirements. Quotations on No. 1 Manitoba flour in cotton bags is $10.85 per barrel; jute bags, $10.65.

Grapefruit in Good Demand

Winnipeg.

FRUIT.—Strawberries from Louisiana are arriving freely and are quoted at $7.00 per crate. Pineapples are reported scarce, and the few that are arriving are quoted at $15.00 per case. Grape fruit is in good demand and is ranging in price from $7.00 to $8.00 per case. There is little change in quotations on oranges. The larger sizes range from $6.00 to $7.00 per case, with the smaller sizes $5.00 to $5.75. California lemons are selling at $5.25 to $6.00 per case. Washington winesap apples are moving freely from $3.00 to $4.25 per box. The demand for bananas has shown an improvement and are quoted at 13 cents per pound.

Fresh Vegetables Active

Winnipeg.

VEGETABLES.—Shipments of fresh vegetables from the South arrive daily and have an active demand. Walla Walla rhubarb is on the market and is quoted at $4.50 per case. New spinach is in good demand and is quoted at $2.50 per case. Mexican tomatoes are selling freely at $9.00 per case. Florida celery is now on the market and quoted at $7.50 per 50-pound boxes. FROM ST. JOHN, BY WIRE

St. John, N.B., April 13.—Eggs are now lower than they have been since pre-war days. Prices dropped again during the week and are quoted at 25 to 33 cents per dozen. Tapioca declined $2.00 per hundred. Cheese is firmer at 33 to 33½ cents per pound. Pure lard is easier at 18¾ to 19 cents per pound. Compound lard is also down to 14¼ to 14½ cents per pound. Corned beef is quoted at $4.00. Corn dropped 55 cents and peas 50 cents per case. Bananas are easier at 10 to 11 cents per pound. Grapefruit declined 50 cents, now selling at $6.00 to $7.00 per case.

POSSIBILITIES IN FRUITS

terment; but it is quite evident to me that this young man has a lot to learn first.

His town is an auction market where anybody with cash can buy—the man who can swing ten boxes of oranges, lemons or grapefruit, for example, is on the footing of the biggest buyer. That leads automatically to very free competition and protects the community from excessive costs.

For "the dormant wholesale receiver" let us see what conditions are. That man gathers some 500 products—around the various seasons—from all parts of the world and holds them ready for the retailer in quantities to fit the needs of all classes of merchants. He blankets their credit, enables many of them to operate who otherwise could not function at all. The little ones who thus thrive, or make ends meet, on the jobbers' capital, are a potent force in stabilizing consumers' costs on a basis much below what would prevail if retail distribution were confined to strong hands, concerns amply capitalized and centrally located. The jobber does all this for a very moderate return, business risks considered. What he gets on various commodities is varied by the same hidden but most potent economic forces which operate, for instance, to compel the retail grocer to handle sugar at 10 per cent., flour at 9 or 10, butter and eggs at 6 or 7. Thus the jobber handles oranges and other citrus fruits for around 14 per cent. on his sales' average.

"Is, for example, the aggressive broker to put the old jobber out of the way?" I cannot see it. If he did, he would immediately cease to be a broker. He woud have to assume the functions of the jobber, carry the various stocks, receive them, distribute them at wholesale and wait for his money—blanketing the credit as aforesaid.

There is plenty material here for another story and I'll write it next week. Let me say in closing this one that business changes constantly. The only things that do not change are dead things, and business is alive. The story is not closed. Business development goes on. Not unlikely some units may be eliminated that now function well or ill. But the way lies through evolution from present methods and such can only be brought about by those who know conditions intimately. It is certain that the jobber survives only because he is to-day economically sound, and he must cease to be the minute he fails to render a service commensurate with his cost.

Will There be a Large Sockeye Run in 1921?

Fishermen and Salmon Packers are Aware that 1921 is a Lineal Descendant of Those "Big Years" Which Prior to 1917 Occurred Without Fail in Every Fourth Season

By DR. CHAS. H. GILBERT, in Canadian Fisherman

IT may be assumed that any indication of the probable size of the sockeye salmon run to the Fraser River in 1921 will be received at this time with lively interest. Fishermen and salmon packers, and all who are concerned with the salmon situation, are aware that 1921 is a lineal descendant of those "big years" on the Fraser which, prior to 1917, occurred without fail in every fourth season, and brought such incredible hordes of salmon to the fishing grounds and into the river. Even after the depletion of the river had become pronounced for the three "small years" of each cycle, still the quadrennial big years remained unimpaired. And they would probably have maintained themselves until now but for the accidental blockage of the Yale Canyon in 1913, precisely in time to intercept the spawning run of that big year.

An Unfortunate Coincidence

The coincidence was most unfortunate. Had the blockade occurred a year earlier, or a year later, comparatively little damage would have resulted. There would have been time to apprehend the seriousness of the situation and to remove the barrier—as was subsequently done—before a big year should come round. But in 1913 the catastrophe had become irreparable before adequate measures of relief could be taken. The canyon was already full of struggling salmon, destined for up-river spawning grounds, trying in vain to force the blockade. Myriads of them subsequently weakened and died, still retaining their spawn, and they formed decaying masses on the bars and shores of the river below Hell's Gate. Thus the up-river spawning grounds in 1913, for the first time in any big year, were left relatively bare of fish.

These facts were fully set forth by J. P. Babcock in the report of the Commissioner of Fisheries of British Columbia for 1913, and their bearing on the unfavorable prospects for 1917 was plainly stated. As the season of 1917 approached, interest in this problem became intense. The question was much debated whether the immemorial big year on the Fraser would again repeat itself, or whether the warnings of the experts would be justified in the event. Some of the packers took counsel of their hopes rather than their fears and made preparations for the usual pack of a big year. The result is still painfully fresh in our minds. By most strenuous exertions, and an intensity of gleaning never before witnessed, a pack of 560,000 cases was produced; little more than one-fifth of the pack of the big year of the previous cycle.

Decreased Run in 1917

Two entirely independent lines of evidence had pointed to a greatly decreased run in 1917. One of these we have already mentioned, based on the insufficient seeding of the up-river spawning beds in 1913. The other method forms an interesting side-line of prophecy, which could not be developed in that cycle until 1916, the year before the season which so anxiously was being awaited. We shall proceed to discuss the second more in detail, inasmuch as it is now equally applicable to the year 1921.

It is known to all packers and fishermen that the year before the big run was always made conspicuous by the occurrence of large numbers of greatly undersized individuals, which evidently constituted a class apart from the main body of the run, and in the small years of each cycle were rarely encountered. They were not only undersized, but they were all male fish; and their flesh was relatively pale in color and poor in oil. Being thus of small value to the trade, they were not very welcome visitors. The canners who were jealous of the quality of their pack put them up separately as an inferior grade, and were thus in position to compare their abundance in the year of their occurrence with that four or eight or twelve years previously. From observations made in this manner, it came to be currently believed that whenever the number of small fish was relatively large, then the big year which followed would be correspondingly increased in comparison with other big years. It was believed that some basis for forecasting the size of the big run was furnished by the relative numbers of undersized sockeyes that were included in the run of the previous year.

Maturing in Third Year

The reason for such possible direct relation between the two became apparent in the course of our investigations of the ages of salmon. It then became known that whereas the usual run of sockeyes to the Fraser were maturing in the fourth year of their age, these undersized males—or grilse, as we call them—were maturing in their third year; and they would therefore make their appearance in the run one year earlier than would the four-year fish which resulted from the same spawning. If, then, the spawning of the last big year had been an unusually successful one, this might be expected to result in an exceptionally large run of grilse three years thereafter, and an equally exceptional run of the four-year fish which would constitute the big run of the following year. The number of three-year grilse in the year before the big year might well, therefore, give a clue to the probable size of the big year itself.

One in Five a Grilse

Our investigations for the Provincial Fisheries Department of the Fraser River sockeyes began in 1911, and have permitted us but three opportunities to witness this run of grilse; in 1912, in 1916, and now during the last season, 1920. In the first of these, 1912, the big years were still undisturbed, for the grilse of that year had developed from eggs laid down in 1909, when the pack of sockeyes of the Fraser River had totalled over a million and a half cases.

The 1912 grilse came from a successful season, and the proportion which they formed of the 1912 run could be accepted as an approximate statement for the corresponding years of previous cycles. Tests made throughout the season indicated that about one fish in five of the total run was a grilse. This condition in 1912 was followed in 1913 by a big year of the first magnitude, resulting in a pack of well over two mlion cases.

It was with these data in our possession concerning the relation of the grilse to the big-year runs, that we approached the season of 1916. The grilse that would run that year would have developed from eggs deposited in the year of the blockade in the Yale Canyon. Should they show a decided reduction in numbers compared with 1912, their condition would reinforce the argument from the impoverished spawning beds of 1913, and a dismal outlook would be presented for 1917. It is a matter of record that the grilse of 1916 were only one-fourth as numerous as in 1912; and it is equally a matter of record that the pack of 1917, compared with that of 1913, suffered an equal reduction.

Conditions in 1921

For the year 1921, the same two lines of evidence are available; that derived from the condition of the spawning grounds in 1917, and the independent evidence to be derived from the numbers of grilse that made their appearance in the run of 1920. As to the condition of the spawning grounds, we have again the testimony of Mr. Babcock, and from this the prospect seems gloomy indeed. Not only was no improvement found over the conditions which had produced the curtailed run of 1917; the situation, on the contrary, had become definitely worse. The spawners throughout the up-river district seemed scarcely more numerous than in many of the lean years of the past cycles and could be expected to produce nothing better in their turn.

Material to establish the numbers of grilse to be found in the run of 1920 was collected with great care, under the supervision of Mr. Babcock. Collections of scales for age-determination, accompanied by data concerning the length and sex of the fish, were obtained at frequent intervals throughout the season. When the receipts of the cannery were small, the entire catch was examined. At other times, liberal samples were obtained, taken at random as the fish lay on the cannery floor. Secured in this manner, the nineteen hundred and fifty individuals which we have examined can be safely accepted as presenting a reliable cross-section of the entire run.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 13.—There is a further weakness to the hog market this week. The weakness is due principally to larger supplies being offered without a corresponding increase in the demand. There is no change in cooked meats or smoked meats although there is a good demand for smoked meats. There is also a marked weakness in butter with lower quotations both on creamery and on the new make of butter. There is little or no call for dairy butter. The egg market is steadier this week. In some cases there are further declines in prices but the average price is about the same with a big demand and an equally big production. Cheese is advanced in price this week on account of the small spot stocks and the demand for local consumption, which is very good, particularly for old cheese. The lard market remains in the same weak, unsteady condition. There is no change in the fish market but supplies of fresh lake fish are expected on the market this week.

Further Declines on Butter

Montreal.

BUTTER—The weak feeling which has characterized the local butter situation for the last two weeks has been more pronounced during the past week and prices closed 5 cents lower than a week ago. The prospects for the dairy season this year are very good. There is a steady increase in the new makes throughout the country owing to the favorable weather that has prevailed for the season and larger receipts have come forward for which there has been only a limited demand as buyers in most cases have had sufficient creamery butter on hand to meet all their requirements. New milk creamery butter has been offered as low as 52 cents per pound and the finest creamery available on spot is selling at 50 cents per pound. The wholesale price on creamery is 54 cents per pound for either the finest creamery on spot or the new make. Solids are selling at from 52 to 53 cents per pound. There is little or no demand for dairy butter at the present time on account of the low prices quoted on creamery, and quotations on dairy butter are from 40 to 42 cents per pound.

Egg Market Steadier

Montreal.

EGGS—The egg market is a little steadier this week showing only a decline of one or two cents per dozen for the week. Consumption at the present level of prices is heavy. Moreover, all dealers and packers are now storing for future requirements. In spite of this demand, however, the supply has been sufficient to keep the prices at the low level. There is no sign of a falling off in the production. Quotations vary considerably, but the price given below is a fair average of the wholesale market.

FRESH MEATS—Lower prices are quoted on live hogs with a decline of from 50 to 75 cents per 100 and in a few cases even more. To some extent the labor troubles in packing plants in Ontario are responsible for the weaker feeling, but in this market it is entirely a case of an abundant supply.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 13.—In spite of the strike of the abattoir employees, packing houses are doing some killing and they state that they are in a position to handle all business with perhaps the exception of some export. The strike however, has to some extent upset the live stock market. Values are holding fairly steady at the same price basis as a week ago and although packers are not buying anything near the amount of hogs they would under normal labor conditions some business is passing every day. Fresh cured and cooked meats are unchanged. Butter has easier tendencies with prices slightly reduced. Eggs have a steadier tone and it is generally considered that the market from now on, for a time at least, will remain at about the present basis. The position of old cheese is unchanged but new cheese is arriving more freely and the situation is a fairly easy one. Lard is reduced in price but shortening is unchanged. Fresh halibut has advanced but otherwise fish quotations are unchanged.

Butter Markets Easier

Toronto.

BUTTER—The butter market has developed an easier tendency with prices down one to three cents per pound. The make of fresh made butter continues to increase and with the creameries now paying a lower price for cream there is no doubt that an easier market from now on can be expected.

COOKED MEATS—There are no price changes on cooked meats. Some of the packers affected by the strike report a shortage of square pressed hams, headcheese and bologna, but otherwise the strike is not interfering with the supply as packers still have a generous stock.

CHEESE—The situation in the cheese market insofar as old cheese is concerned remains unchanged and quotations generally hold around 35 cents per pound, although one house is offering at 33 cents. New cheese is arriving fairly well and prices are down one half cent per pound, bringing the price to 30½ and 31 cents per pound. New cheese has an easy tendency with prospects for lower prices.

EGGS—The egg market has developed a steadier tone and there are now indications that the market will remain at around the present price basis. Hog Values Unsettled

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS—The strike of the abattoir employees has upset the live stock market and sales in consequence were few. Values, however, held fairly steady, although there is a certain amount of uncertainty. In spite of the strike the packing houses involved are doing some business and made purchases of hogs on the same price basis as a week ago. The real effect of the strike is shown in the receipts of hogs, which amounted to 2,849 as compared with 4,770 the previous week and 5,188 for the same period a year ago. Packing houses affected by the strike state that they are not expecting any difficulty in meeting the situation as far as supplies are concerned, with the stocks on hand and the amount of killing going on they state they are in a position to handle the business in a manner satisfactory to their customers.

Halibut Slightly Higher

Toronto.

FISH—The only price change effected in the fish market is an advance of one cent per pound on fresh halibut. Chicken halibut is quoted at 18 to 19 cents per pound and medium at 22 to 23 cents. Fresh lake fish is not yet arriving in any quantity and prices are holding at the high level.

Lard Down One Cent

Toronto.

LARD—The lard market is in an easy position with prices down one cent per pound making one pound prints 21 cents and on the tierce basis 16 cents per pound.

LARD—

1-lb. prints		0 20
1-lb. tierces, 400 lbs.		0 16

In 60-lb. tubs, ½ cent higher than tierces, pails ¾ cent higher than tierces, and 1-lb. prints, 2c.

Cured Meats Unchanged

Toronto.

PROVISIONS—The market is practically unchanged. Some packers have advanced the price of small smoked hams but this is more in the nature of wishing to hold back sales in order to build up stocks for turning into cooked hams for the summer trade, and is not a real market condition.

Poultry Unchanged

Toronto.

POULTRY—Receipts continue very light and prices are firm. Storage stocks are filling the greatest part of the demand.

Shortening Steady to Easy

Toronto.

SHORTENING—There is practically no change in shortening, quotations are steady but the market is fairly easy. Crisco is reduced, 1s and 3s are now 22½ cents per pound, 6s and 9s are 22 cents per pound.

SHORTENING—

1-lb. prints		0 14½

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 13.—There is practically no change in quotations on produce, provisions or fish this week. The creamery butter market continues steady. There is a noted shortage of both Ontario and Manitoba cheese and the market is firmer. Eggs have shown a firmer tone and receipts are lighter. Both cooked and smoked meats show no change. The hog market continues steady with prices unchanged.

Butter Market Steady

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—The butter market is ruling steady with no change in quotations. Best grade is quoted at 60 cents per pound.

Hog Market Steady

Winnipeg.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market continues firm and selected live hogs are now quoted at $14.00 per cwt. Buying on the cattle market was slow. Killing steers were the strongest sellers in the butchered division, and those showing quality sold from $8.00 to $8.75, while the rest were weighed up from $6.50 to $7.75. Heifers were light sellers, and best quality changed hands at $8.00, while the good kinds were disposed of at $6.50 to $7.50. Veal calves maintained a firm tone and choice kinds brought from $8.00 to $11.00, and the common grades from $5.00 to $6.00. The sheep and lamb markets have been quiet, due to the meagre offerings. A few common lambs sold at 8 cents per pound with mutton sheep quoted at from $5.00 to $6.00.

Fish Quotations Steady

Winnipeg.

FISH.—There are no changes in quotations of note this week. The demand for fish is not as large as it has been, but the trade is well satisfied with the demand at this season of the year. Supplies are arriving daily and prices remain steady.

Quality and Value

THERE is superior quality to be had in every tin of Davies' Pork and Beans, for the utmost care is taken in their preparation, using only clean, choice, hand-picked White Beans, which are never touched by human hands after they are washed.

The price at which they are sold to you, and the price you are able to get for them, gives every dealer a good margin of profit, which fact, coupled with the steady demand Davies' Pork and Beans creates, makes this a valuable line to handle.

Try some with your next order, ask your traveller, or enquire from your wholesaler.

Answer.—You could purchase Saratoga chips in Canada from V. Keachie, 2 Collier street, Toronto, Ont., and buyers of lead papers are: E. Pullan, Maud street, Toronto, Ont.

THE ANT PEST

Will you kindly tell us how to get rid of ants?

READER.

Answer.—Here are a few remedies:

Balsam of Peru: Rub a thin film of it near the bottoms of the table legs or on the floor, and renew the application in three weeks. In addition, boil one ounce of the balsam in a gallon of water for thirty minutes, and sponge this water, while hot, over wooden floors and walls.

Powdered Borax and Pulverized Alum: Sprinkle underneath the paper on the shelves.

Oil of Sassafras: Follow the train—for the ants form a train in travelling—to it's origin. Saturate a small cloth with the oil and apply to every portion of the distance covered. If they come out of a crack, pour a little of the oil into it—it is sure death to them.

If ants become troublesome about the pastry case in the summer time, insulate it by raising it on four inverted cups set in saucers filled with water. Give the case a good cleaning and in half a day the ants will become discouraged. Do not leave the case insulated longer than is necessary, as it is suggestive.

CORN STARCH AND CORN FLOUR

What is the distinction between corn flour and corn starch and is there any regulation in Canada against calling corn starch "corn flour?"

W. I.

Answer.—Canadian Grocer submitted this question to Prof. A. McGill, chief analyst Department of Health, Ottawa, and has received the following reply:—

Ottawa, March 15, 1921

"There is a difference between corn flour and corn starch, but in popular usage the terms are employed synonymously. Flour means ground flour from which only the husk has been removed and contains more or less of the proteids of the grain as well as the starch. Of course, starch always constitutes the chief component of flour but the flour is not starch. Corn starch proper is prepared from corn flour, by destruction of the material other than starch and removal of the same by flotation processes. On account of the ambiguity of well established popular usage, we find it undesirable to carry out the distinction between corn flour and corn starch too arbitrarily, but the distinction exists and if conditions justify us we may insist upon its legal recognition."

For Dainty Spring and Summer Desserts

Junket
MADE with MILK

When your customers want a delicious, wholesome dessert that is decidedly economical, give them JUNKET. JUNKET makes such a great variety of delightful desserts in such a short time that it never fails to win repeat orders. It is put up in 10-tablet packages that retail at 15c with an excellent profit.

JUNKET POWDER

NESNAH

This is a JUNKET in powder form. It makes tempting desserts in a jiffy. Just the thing for rush meals. Attractively packaged in four different flavors. It will pay you to have a good supply of these two sellers for the Spring and Summer months.

MAN! MAN! MAN!

Where is that man you need so badly?

Well, no use grouching, is there? Best thing to do is to advertise for the man you want. Use CANADIAN GROCER as the best and cheapest medium. Use dailies if you think they're better. It's up to you.

All we know is that you get to a sifted class when you use CANADIAN GROCER. The replies you will get will be from men now in jobs—not slackers nor idlers, not job-chasers. It will cost you three cents a word first insertion to use CANADIAN GROCER, and you may have to use several issues before the right man puts himself on your hook. Nobody knows in advance just how much you'll have to advertise. But we all know good men are scarce and don't have to look for jobs. You'll have to do some inducing, perhaps, to tempt the man you want to leave his present employer.

But you never can tell who's open for your proposal. Climate, inclination, the boss's bad temper, a fancied slight, desire to get into a new field — all these are explanations of why men change; all these are pegs on which you can hang your hopes.

So send along your advertisement. Better order it to run "until forbid." It will be cheap enough if you find the right man; and anyhow, there's no other cheaper or better way of finding your man.

Three cents a word for the first insertion, two cents a word for each insertion after. Five cents extra per insertion if addressed to Box Number. Payable in advance.

Address: CANADIAN GROCER WANT ADS.
153 University Avenue - - Toronto, Ont.

Your Customers Know

No "talking up" is ever required to sell a customer an Eddy product.

If it's a match order, one of the thirty to forty different brands of Eddy's is certain to satisfy in every particular. Even where the customer doesn't specifically ask for Eddy's you can take it for granted that Eddy's is expected, for with most people, to think of good matches, is to think of Eddy's.

The same holds good where Indurated Fibreware is concerned. These handy, light and durable utensils are made under the self-same standards of manufacture that have made Eddy's Matches famous. They never bulge, leak or fall apart and are ideally suited for household or farm use.

Eddy Products are Made-in-Canada—by Canadians—for Canadians.

A Tribute To Development

A splendid recognition of the work done by business papers in furthering advertising and merchandising has come in the election of Mr. C. A. Otis, publisher of "Finance and Industry," to the high post of President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

His election to this coveted position is a tribute to the section he represents—the business, financial and technical papers that have played such a part in the development of advertising and merchandising for many years.

It recognizes that business papers are leaders of progress in their respective industries. By their editorial contents they automatically select the men in each industry whose words carry the weight of buying authority.

Business paper advertising has developed because for a judicious expenditure of money, you reach a circulation of tremendous buying power which is being taught by the publication itself to want the very products advertised.

In the election of Mr. Otis the whole advertising and business fraternity joins in a tribute to the development and service of the business press of America.

POTATOES EASY AND LOWER

Potato values have again moved downward and even at the lower levels there appears to be no great demand. In Toronto during the week potatoes were sold on the track in car lots at 50 cents per bag and dealers state that they are buying at country points, loaded on the cars at 25 cents to 30 cents per 90-pound bag. The abundant crop and the small demand both for export and domestic use is apparently having the effect of bringing prices down to the 1914 level. There are no indications at present that the market will recover. Then again Southern new potatoes are commencing to arrive in straight car lots, the price is high, it is true, but there appears to be a good demand which of course does not react to the benefit of Canadian producers who have still large supplies of last year's crop on hand.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Advertising that doesn't cost you a cent will hustle Procter & Gamble Soap Products right off your shelves into your customers' baskets.

These are what do it:

Big advertisements, many of them in colors, in the leading magazines, reaching the best homes in the Dominion.

Newspaper advertising ever so often.

House to house sampling and couponing at regular intervals.

Are your eyes turned toward the future—toward the up-building of a STURDY business that will flourish while FLIMSY businesses all about you wither and die?

STURDY businesses are not built with FLIMSY equipment.

When you are equipping your store with scales look to the years ahead and instal the Dayton. Dayton Scales are the product of the great pioneer scale-manufacturing house. They have stood the test of the years. The reason is, in two words: Scientific construction.

The sturdy and compact Dayton is the scale for the buyer who looks to the future.

When the Grocer asks: "Why?"

The grocer who asks "Why" is the grocer the Dayton Salesman is delighted to meet.

No question, for instance, more welcome than this:

"WHY should I buy the Dayton Scale in preference to any other weighing machine in the world?"

The question is simple and direct.

The answer is simple and direct.

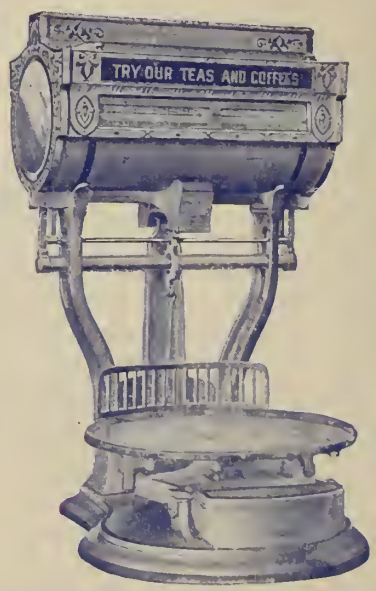
Here it is: Scientific construction.

Behind the words "scientific construction" stand 30 years of experience and research. In a score of important details, Dayton construction excels all others. Take just these three for consideration—any Dayton Salesman will be glad to give you a personal demonstration of the vital part they play in true and perfect scale-building:

CHART ACCURACY—The Dayton's chart, like some of the most delicate, sensitive scientific instruments in the world, is propelled by oil-tempered springs. Scale's position on counter makes no variation in chart.

CENTRE PULL—Equalizes weight on machine between platform load and chart.

SWIVEL BASE—Permits merchant to weigh on either side of counter and to get proper light on scale.



INTERNATIONAL DAYTON SCALES

End time wastes and money wastes in the weighing of goods. They stand for goodwill and the square deal between merchant and customer

O-Cedar Polish

—from every angle, A PROFIT-MAKER FOR YOU

THE high esteem in which O-Cedar Products are held by merchants is, of course, due chiefly to the profit-possibilities of the goods. These profit-possibilities are in evidence every way you consider the line!

First, from the angle of "profit per sale."

Second, from the viewpoint of "frequent turnover."

Third, from the consideration of "customers' satisfaction."

And last, but not least, for the reason that the price of O-Cedar Products is well-maintained. Merchants easily get the full price for O-Cedar Polish and the O-Cedar Polish Mop—thus making sure of the full profit they are intended to have on every O-Cedar Sale.

The Food Value of "Cascade"

Teach your counter-men the value of pink Cascade salmon as a food. It is more valuable than meats for making flesh and bone, has less fat, is digestible as the best Sirloin Steak and there is no waste. Then they can speak with true selling power to your customers. Here's another Dandy Recipe:

SCALLOPED SALMON NO. 2

One can of pink Cascade salmon; remove all bone and bits of skin; mince fine. Roll one dozen crackers fine. Put in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers, adding bits of butter and a sprinkling of salt and pepper to taste. Have the top layer of crackers, and add sufficient milk to moisten the whole mass (about one pint). Bake thirty minutes and serve hot.

There is no Higher grade of Pink than Cascade. Its food value is excellent. Tell your customers all about it.

LIQUID VENEER MOP POLISH

Goes Twice As Far

Here is a wonderful new polish made by the "LIQUID VENEER" People.

It will renew any dusting or polishing mop as it has never done before. When used on floors it will show remarkable results at once, not only making them spotlessly clean, but bringing out the original polish and luster in a surprising manner.

And you can offer your customers this wonderful polish with our strong money back guarantee. They must be satisfied in every way or you are authorized to refund their money. We, in turn, will reimburse you for any so returned.

Liquid Veneer Mop Polish does not displace the regular Liquid Veneer which has been sold throughout the world for over twenty years. It is a wonderful companion product and will double the cleaning, dusting and polishing possibilities of all dusting and polishing mops.

Packages and retail prices are as follows :

4 oz. 30c bottles, cartoned. 32 oz. $1.25 tin cans.
12 oz. 60c bottles, cartoned. 64 oz. $2.00 tin cans.
128 oz. $3.00 tin cans.

You are missing something big if you don't ask your jobber about Liquid Veneer Mop Polish.

Can We Salvage Our Railways?

THIS is the biggest question facing Canadians to-day—overshadowing even the tariff, housing, wages, "buyers' strike," and other vital questions. Why? Because every man in Canada, with a wife and three children, is paying $80 a year, on the average, toward the running of our National Railways, whether he or the members of his family ever board a train from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31!

Frank S. Cahill, M.P.—keenest critic in the House of Commons of the Government in railway matters—has written for April 15th MACLEAN'S a striking article, in which he calls for the handing over of the railways to a private corporation—to run properly.

Also, in another striking article a prominent, nationally-famous, business man calls for the appointment of a commission of railway experts—probably (so that they may be unbiased) selected in the U.S. After a searching investigation, he advocates that:

1—Certain lines be leased to the C. P. R.;
2—Non-paying lines cut off;
3—Remaining lines handed over, on equitable basis, to private company.

What do business men think of the parliamentary committee appointed to investigate railway conditions? — "Political probe? Pah!—a bunch of amateurs!"

Should Net Weight Appear on Canned Goods Label?

J. L. Durand, of Three Rivers, Que., Starts Discussion on This Subject—Canners Claim That Public is Adequately Protected By Present Government Regulations

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL.—(Special).—A number of retail grocers have expressed the opinion to Canadian Grocer that the net weight of contents of tins of canned vegetables and fruits packed in Canada should be stamped on the cans. In the case of most brands of canned meats, pork and beans, etc., the net weight does appear on the tins. The contention of some of the grocers is that the absence of the net weight on the tins handicaps to some degree the sale of the canned goods.

A Logical Handicap

J. L. Durand, a grocer of Three Rivers, Quebec, first brought up the question. Mr. Durand, in speaking to a representative of Canadian Grocer, said: "You will notice on most of the cans of fruit and vegetables packed in Canada the net weight of the contents does not appear. Tins vary in dimensions and in design. When a woman asks for a can of peaches the grocer will, in all probability, hand her a tin of the Canadian pack. The average woman does not buy without a little investigation and generally asks to see some other brands. Value for the money paid is one of the big factors in every sale and the buyer naturally tries to determine which tin contains the most. They may be of different shapes and the mere appearance of the tin indicates nothing. She sometimes asks the grocer the weight of the tins. He is only able to tell her approximately the gross weight of the goods. In many, many cases this is the one determining factor in the sale and often a little more is added to the trade balance against Canada.

Guessing At Weights

"Many grocers have the impression, whether it is right or wrong I do not know, that canned vegetables are packed to standard weights, such as 2 lb. and 2½ lb. tins of tomatoes. I have found, however, that the gross weight of tins varies considerably. The grocer is therefore at a loss to know what to tell his customer when he is asked the net weight of canned goods. I personally believe that it would be of great advantage to the grocers, to the canners and to the Canadian public to either have it compulsory to have the net weight stamped on the labels or the canners voluntarily agree to state the net weight on each of their cans. Furthermore, I believe that it would noticeably increase the sale of Canadian canned goods."

Another Grocer's Opinion

J. E. Teatrault, manager of N. Mitchell & Co., general store, Granby, Que., expresses the same opinion in this regard. He, too, claimed that many people enquire the net weight of canned goods and are not satisfied with only judging the weight of the goods by the size of the containers. "When the customer sees the net weight of the contents stamped on the label," said Mr. Teatrault, "it gives them a little more confidence in the goods they are buying and if the grocer will note it, it makes the selling of such lines easier."

Applies Particularly to Cleansers

Mr. Teatrault enlarged the idea by saying: "I believe that the idea of having the net weight stamped on tinned goods applies particularly to such lines as cleansers and there are a great many of them on the market to-day. There are hardly two of them put up in the same sized tins and the prices vary considerably. If a customer is quite satisfied with two or more of the brands and wants to compare their values she is at a loss for the size of the containers indicates practically nothing. In these lines in particular I would like to see the net weight given."

The Packer's Viewpoint

Canadian Grocer took this matter up with the Dominion Canners, Ltd., of Hamilton, Ont. When asked for his opinion with regard to the practical side of this idea as expressed by a number of grocers and for an expression of the attitude of the canners towards its adoption, W. R. Dryman, of the above mentioned company, said: "We would like to give the matter some consideration before giving a direct answer. However, we may tell you that there is some misapprehension as to the weights of canned vegetables and fruits. For instance, there is no such thing as a two-pound tin of tomatoes. The designations, 1's, 2's and 2½'s tins simply indicate the size of the containers and are terms which are arbitrarily used both in Canada and the United States.

Sizes of Tins Standardized

"The sizes of the tins are regulated by the government as laid down on page five of the Supplement to Canada Gazette. You will there see that any variation in the size of the containers requires that the net weight in ounces be stamped on the label of the tin. Further, on page eight of the supplement it states that a No. 2 tin of tomatoes must be filled full of tomatoes, with enough allowance for head space. By that we mean the air space between the top of the tin and contents sufficient to allow for processing, to prevent bulging of the tin that would result if the tin were filled full.

Minimum Net Weight Stated

"The same regulations also state that the minimum net weight of the No. 2 tin of tomatoes shall be 19 ounces, etc. In fact, the regulations in Canada are much more complete than they are in the United States and we cannot see where there would be any advantage to the consumer in having the net weight of the goods stamped on the label. As a matter of fact it would only add to the expense of the goods for a few years for the reason that we, as perhaps all canners, have a considerable quantity of labels in our warehouse which would have to be reprinted, and it would cost very nearly as much to reprint these as to purchase new labels.

Variations in Weight

"With regard to the variations in the weight of canned tomatoes, I might say that if a can were filled with water it would weigh quite as much as if it were filled with tomatoes and therefore the net weight has little to do with the actual quantity of tomatoes that the purchaser will get in a tin. The grocer is always protected, and through him his customers, if he buys goods put up by reliable packers and under well-known brands. It goes without saying that any packer who values his reputation is bound to give good value.

Variations in Canned Fruits

"There is another difficulty in marking the net weight on canned goods since there is quite a variation in the weight of certain kinds of fruits and vegetables, which also vary according to the amount of sugar in the syrup and the condition of the fruit. For instance, a can of pitted cherries will weigh more than a can of unpitted cherries and a can of apples of one variety will weigh more than a can of apples of another variety. Our contention is that the net weight of canned goods varies so much that it is almost impossible for the canners to mark on their labels the weight of the contents of most fruits or vegetables and that already the government regulations are ample to protect both the retailer and his customers.

Canners Open to Conviction

"However, we ourselves are open to conviction and our desire is to do all we can to increase the consumption of canned goods made in Canada. We will be only too pleased to adopt any measures that will insure this, but at present we really cannot see how the marking of the net weight on the cans will mean an increased consumption."

Enthusiastic Convention of Retail Grocers From Various Parts of the Province Is Held in Vancouver—Points of Difference Between Wholesale and Retail Trades Discussed—H. Johnson, Jr., Talks

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, April 19.—Commencing at noon on Wednesday, April 13, a convention of retail grocers from various parts of British Columbia met in session in the board room of the Retail Merchants' Association at Vancouver.

The following resolution sets forth the purpose of the convention:

"Whereas this meeting of retail grocers of the Province of B.C. deem it advisable that a Provincial Association, as a section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, should be formed, in order that its members shall have an adequate means of expressing their desires on all matters affecting their business and trade interests, both Provincial and Federal, it is hereby resolved that a Provincial Association of Retail Grocers be formed as a section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada."

Points of Difference

There are very serious points of difference between the retail grocers in British Columbia and the wholesale grocers serving them. These differences have tended to embitter both parties and finally the Vancouver grocers' section decided that the time had come to get together and to clear the air.

The following resolution sets forth some of the malpractices which were considered:

WHEREAS the retail grocers of this Province of British Columbia in convention assembled protest against the encroachment of the wholesale grocers upon their legitimate trade by selling to hotels, restaurants, hospitals, logging camps, saw mills, tug boats, farmers, contractors, section men, bridge crews, boarding houses, etc., thus taking away the legitimate trade of the retail grocer, which we consider is detrimental to our interest and if continued must jeopardise our financial investment and seriously impair our ability to remain in business, and,

WHEREAS it is the custom of wholesale grocers to sell their employees at cost, and as said employees are abusing the privilege by supplying their friends at cost prices, and,

WHEREAS retailers in almost all other lines of trade, particularly tobacconists and confectioners, are able to get groceries at cost, and,

WHEREAS the retail grocery trade is the acknowledged system of distribution to the consuming public,

Therefore be it resolved that this convention of retail grocers demand the discontinuance of this practice immediately, and further demand that the wholesale grocers confine their sales to the legitimate retail grocer.

Want to Get Together

A glance at the list of delegates present exhibits a decided wish on the part of both the wholesalers and representative retailers to get together, discuss their differences and resume harmonious relationships at the earliest possible moment. The retailers generally are very well pleased at the success that has met this effort, and the following resolution was worded and proposed and seems to point to happy relationships in the future.

WHEREAS this meeting of wholesalers and retailers engaged in the distribution of groceries in this province is unanimously of the opinion that every effort should be made to conserve the legitimate interests of both wholesalers and retailers, and as far as possible define the limits of the respective territories in which the wholesalers and retailers may solicit business.

It is hereby resolved that a committee representing the grocers of B.C. be appointed at the convention of the retail grocers to-day and that the functions of this committee shall be to prepare a list as nearly as possible Province-wide in its application, such list to contain the names of parties who may be considered to be entitled to wholesalers' prices.

It is further resolved that the committee mentioned in the foregoing shall meet the representatives of the wholesale houses in the immediate future for the purpose of considering the list prepared by them and that the final agreement reached between the said committee and the wholesale houses shall be filed with all branches of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada in this Province, and with the wholesale houses concerned.

It is further resolved that in cases in which wholesale grocers are invited to supply persons, firms or corporations, whose names do not appear upon the list which may be agreed upon, shall file particulars with the Provincial Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, who shall co-operate with the wholesale houses in securing immediate information from the locality from which the application comes for the purpose of ascertaining whether such parties are entitled to have their names added to the list agreed upon.

"Your Troubles Are Ours"

At a banquet in a private luncheon room at the Hudson's Bay, an enjoyable session was held and an entertaining and instructive address was delivered by Mr. Crowder, druggist, the president of the Vancouver branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, on the subject of "Your Troubles Are Ours." He assured the grocers that besides having the advantage of a provincial body which could speak for grocers they could at all times feel that they had the whole body of retailers in British Columbia, and indeed in the whole of Canada, behind them in whatever action they found it necessary to take.

Henry Johnson, Jr., Speaks

A very hearty welcome was also given Paul Findlay, a retail merchandising authority of international repute, better known to Canadian Grocer readers as "Henry Johnson, Jr."

At the Thursday afternoon session Mr. Findlay addressed the convention on the subject of "The Oriental," as a problem in the retail business on the Pacific coast, and he gave the meeting the benefit of his knowledge of the Oriental problem as it exists in California.

Ice Cream Sales Total $300 Weekly

J. G. Gray, Bradford, Ont., Has Made Ice Cream and Kindred Refreshments a Profitable Sideline in His Grocery Store—Has Complete Equipment Including Soda Fountain and Ice Cream Cabinet

"ONE of the best schemes to stimulate sales on ice cream is to put in a window display,'" stated J. G. Gray, of Bradford, Ont., to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "And for this purpose, I know of no better advertising than the cards and display matter sent out by the manufacturers of ice cream."

Mr. Gray had received, a few days previous to the visit of a Canadian Grocer representative, a bunch of such display matter. Some of these cards were real works of art, each portraying a suggestion that at once conveys to the mind of the person or persons looking at them a desire to drop into the store for a refreshing dish of ice cream, or the impression that a brick of ice cream would be a joy to the folks at home. These cards Mr. Gray uses to good advantage in dressing the window, placing them a little to the rear and in front, arranging dummy ice cream brick cartons, piles of grape juice, ginger ale and other soft drinks in bottles. Fresh fruits in baskets are also displayed, which makes a very attractive and suggestive display.

Has Complete Equipment

Unlike some other retail grocers who serve and sell ice cream, Mr. Gray has a separate room. In fact, this room is really another store that has been taken over and a connecting door made between the two stores.

It is equipped with soda fountain, cabinet with storage capacity for three ten-gallon cans of ice cream and another cabinet with capacity for one hundred one-pint bricks. The room has seating accommodation for 24 people. Attached to the fountain is a nut grinder which, according to Mr. Gray, is a valuable article. "To my mind, anything that tends to be of a sanitary nature in the handling of ice cream adds just so much more money in my pocket. Take ground nuts, for instance. The usual custom is to keep an open dish on the fountain containing the ground nuts. When a sundae is being made, a spoon is dipped into this dish, which soon becomes wet and gummed up with the nuts and does not look very appetizing. With the grinder, however, this is all done away with. We simply keep the hopper of the grinder filled with walnuts, filberts or whatever nuts we are using. The sundae is held under the grinder and a couple of turns of the handle grinds sufficient nuts for the dish. This method is simple and clean, and the nuts look fresh to the customers.'"

Sales Average $300 Weekly

All sundaes and sodas are served in cone-shaped sanitary cardboard cups which are held in a specially constructed silver dish. These cone-shaped cups are made in different sizes to contain just so many ounces and no more, permitting Mr. Gray to know positively how much profit there is made on every portion served. Then again they eliminate the labor of washing, which more than offsets the cost of the cup. The average sales per week during the six months commencing the first of May and ending the last day of October in the year 1920 were $300, and last year was a cold summer, too. This amount, perhaps, may not appear a large sum, but it must be remembered that the big end of Mr. Gray's business is groceries, which consumes a vast amount of time and energy, also the fact that Bradford is just an average country town of some 1,200 inhabitants, a town wherein three other stores sell ice cream.

Mr. Gray also has a splendid sale of ginger ale, which is also served in the ice cream room and on which Mr. Gray remarked, "there is good profit on selling ginger ale. We just simply take the top off the bottle, put a straw in it, and serve it that way. Since handling —— dry ginger ale, I find the business steadily increasing. Customers like it much better than any brand that I ever sold, and they tell me so. It is considered a small Saturday's business if we do not sell at least a hundred bottles."

Ice Cream the Year Round

"The profit on selling ice cream for home consumption is not as great as it is when served in the room and consumed there," said Mr. Gray, "but it is very satisfactory, and I only wish that the average profit on general groceries was as large."

The ice cream room is not kept open for the serving of ice cream the year round. It is only used for about eight months, from the beginning of April until the end of November. Ice cream, however, is handled for home consumption the entire twelve months. Mr. Gray only stocks it in brick form, but for special functions, when a quantity in bulk is desired, it is procured when a day's notice is given. The sales of bricks in the store for the year 1920 throughout averaged 100 bricks per week.

This Grocer Finds That Courtesy Always Brings Good Returns

WHILE in a grocery store in a city suburb the other day, a representative of Canadian Grocer was impressed with the really attentive manner of the merchant in looking after his customers. He called everybody by name, adding some little comment about the weather, or how was so and so's baby, etc. When the telephone rang, again the nice business-like tone of the grocer was impressed upon the visitor. Mrs. —— wanted a particular butter. He didn't have it, but instead of saying, "No, I haven't it Mrs. ——," he remarked, "I am very sorry I haven't it, but I have another make that ——— (here naming three names of women well-known to this customer), are using, and who like it very much. It is slightly higher in price, but I am sure if you care to try it, you will like it. If you don't, I will gladly refund the money." The customer decided to try it.

Instead of losing a sale, one was made, and very likely secured a new customer, as the Grocer representative learned that this woman was not a regular dealer at this store.

Discussing the incident with this grocer, it was learned that he made a strong point of giving service all the time. "I endeavor to study my customers, and all the people that come into my store," he stated. "If new people move into my district, I send a circular, telling them about my service, quality, etc., or if a customer of mine moves away to another district I recommend a store. It pays to do so, because at some time or other new people will come into my district, and on more than one occasion customers have told me that they came first to me because Mr. ——, their former grocer, had recommended me. I find it always pays to treat customers, travellers and everyone who comes into my store in as nice a way as possible."

Restrict Sales Tax to Source of Supply

After Much Consideration Dominion Board R.M.A. at Ottawa Has Decided to Recommend Course of Action—Retailers Must Not be Guided by Suggestions of Other Organizations—Ask For Definitions of "Manufacturer" and "Importer"

From Special Ottawa Correspondent Canadian Grocer

IN the following carefully prepared statement, which is for the consideration of retail merchants throughout Canada, and a copy of which has been forwarded to the Minister of Finance, the Dominion Board Retail Merchants' Association of Canada points out some objectionable features regarding any proposal to place a sales tax on retail merchants. The keynote of the statement is that retail merchants must not be guided in this important matter by what other organizations suggest. The matter has been thoroughly considered by the board and by important branches of the association throughout the country, and there appears to be no other adequate solution than that the tax be collected at the source of supply, the Government having all the facilities for collecting the same at a comparatively small cost. The statement and recommendations of the Dominion Board follow:

Considering the experience that all classes of retail merchants have had in all parts of Canada with regard to the operations of the luxury tax, and also with regard to the present sales tax, under which the Dominion Government is endeavoring to compel a large number of retail merchants to take out a manufacturer's license and collect a sales tax from their customers, and which is being strongly opposed by us in the courts, it is very essential that whatever system of taxation is proposed for the future should be free from annoying complications and be collected at the lowest possible cost.

Investigation and Enquiry

The question of securing the best and the most economic method has received very careful thought and attention by the members of the Dominion Executive Council and Dominion Board of our association, and, as a result of our investigation and enquiry, the following resolution was unanimously adopted and presented to the Dominion Government:

Resolution

Whereas if it be the intention of the Dominion Government to continue the sales tax and extend its application to those engaged in the retail trade, we recommend that such tax be collected at the source of supply, namely, from the manufacturer and the importer, and carried as the present sales tax is carried, thus achieving the desired end, and more economically collected, and in this way the tax would be absorbed in the same manner as all systems of taxation are absorbed, and that the words, "Manufacturer" and "Importer" be properly defined in the Act so as not to include retail merchants.

Consider Cost of Collection

A great many proposals have been advocated by various commercial and financial organizations, as well as by some portions of the press. The arguments they present only confirm our belief that retail merchants must not depend upon other organizations who have not given the retail problem proper consideration to advise them regarding the retail trade. Our proposal, which is set forth in the above resolution, places the proposed tax at the source of supply, and as the Government now has all the facilities for collecting the same the additional cost will be very small.

There Should Be No Discrimination

The argument used by some that as the tax is passed on from the manufacturer to the wholesaler, to the retailer, and to the consumer, it will be pyramided, has no value whatever when we consider that the proposed tax is a very small matter in comparison with the rate of duty and revenue tax that is collected on some manufactured and imported articles at the present time, and no one would ask the importer or manufacturer to refrain from placing his profit on the duty he paid. Duty is part of the cost, and a sales tax should also be part of the cost; the only difference we see is that Customs officials who collect duty at the port of entry and through the Revenue Department are paid for their services, but those who are asked to collect a sales tax at the source of supply and who pass it on to the retail merchant, who in turn passes it on to the consumer, receive no remuneration for their services.

The Plan of Collection Must Be Simple

Our plan as set out in our resolution does not require the Government to engage a vast army of tax collectors, auditors, inspectors, bookkeepers, and clerks, etc., to travel all over Canada and collect a turnover tax from two hundred thousand retail merchants when the amount required can be collected at the source of supply at a very small cost.

The Same Rate Would Be Unfair

To place a tax of one or two per cent. on the sales of all classes of retail merchants, irrespective of the amount of profit they make, is absolutely unfair to the retail merchant who is compelled to make a large turnover in order to secure a small profit. To differentiate between the rate of percentage to be applied to each line of retail trade would cause great confusion and its application would be very injurious to general store merchants who carry nearly all classes of merchandise which bear varying percentages of profit. This is one point that is entirely overlooked by those who advocate a tax on the turnover or sales of all retail merchants.

Peddlers and Agents Would Escape

Then, again, if the Government should decide to collect a sales tax from all classes of retail merchants, the thousands of peddlers and agents who travel from place to place selling goods would escape taxation, and in this way retail merchants would be discriminated against.

All Taxes and Costs Are Passed On

The argument put forth by some that by placing the tax at the source of supply, viz., on the manufacturer and the importer, and having it passed on to the retail merchant, it would mean that the retail merchant would be compelled to pay this tax to the manufacturer and the importer when he purchased the goods, whereas if he paid a tax on his sales he would only pay when he sold the goods. This argument is deceptive and misleading because it infers that the manufacturer and the importer is asked to pay a tax to the Government on their sales and not pass it on to the retail merchant. We are all well aware that, no matter whether it is taxes or other costs that are paid out by the manufacturer or the importer, they are all passed on to the retail trade in one form or another, and they become part of our cost.

Must Be Collected at the Source

Our strong objection to having a sales tax or turnover tax collected from retail merchants is the enormous cost that will be incurred in collecting it. As loyal Canadians we want to see the war debt paid. We want everyone to pay his share, and we want the amount to be collected done so at the lowest possible cost. This cannot be done by endeavoring to collect it from two hundred thousand retail merchants, and engaging an enormous staff of collectors, clerks, in-

Service in Fruits Means Other Sales

A Customer Who is Satisfied With Her Fresh Things Will For That Reason Buy Other Commodities Too—Impressed With Perishables, the Customer Believes Everything in the Store is of a High Order

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

"THE writer is not yet familiar with the per cent. of volume the fruits and vegetables form in the average grocery, but he is only familiar with one store where a really good job is being done in trying to sell the purchaser on these products in any but the ordinary corner grocery display style. You know what is meant."

Such is the next paragraphic inquiry in the letter quoted fully last week.

What percentage of the volume consists in fruit and vegetables in the average store I do not think is yet known to anybody. It is, I think, quite accurate to say that where perishables are given preferred attention the store is more profitable than where they are neglected or treated as a mere side issue.

This because fresh goods are of daily, constant interest to all of us. To be palatable they must be as fresh as possible. Therefore they must be bought as nearly to the time of consumption as practicable. Hence, every visitor to any store is attracted, inevitably, by an abundant display of fresh perishables, and is apt to be repelled by one that is disorderly, inadequate or neglected. This applies in varying measure to any store anywhere, no matter what the general character of its customers.

Therefore, practically anywhere there exists the opportunity to build business on the perishables department; and business built thereon reacts most favorably on every other department. A woman who is satisfied with her fresh things is not liable to object if you charge her adequately for coffee, flour, table luxuries, even though your prices range sufficiently higher than your neighbors' to cover the better character of your service. The very fact of your selling her better perishables in better condition leads her to gain the impression that everything in your store has a higher intrinsic value than what she might find in less attractively arranged stores. If therefore your other service is well rendered you enjoy preference—and that is good will, the most valuable thing you can strive for.

Correct Margins in Perishables

The study of margins in this line should be followed out with the utmost exactness and detail. For it ramifies into endless items, shades and diversities, with variations in the factors throughout the seasons and in various kinds of seasons.

Six or seven years ago a high service store could aim at around 30 per cent., average margin, and make fair net earnings. But careful investigations made in 1918 by several chains of self-service and limited-service stores showed that such a margin, at that time, was not too wide for their needs.

Stanton, the originator—so reputed—of the "groceteria," in Santa Monica, California, has studied this very exhaustively. His story may be of real value, so I insert it here as I got it nearly three years ago:

"We buy only the highest standard brands, where such are to be found in perishables, because then there is no come-back," is the keynote. Such a declaration coming from such a source is of special significance. For Stanton's chief appeal is based on the idea that, as he cuts service and the cost thereof, he is enabled thereby to sell at reduced figures. The force of this appeal, regarded superficially, would seem to lie in the implied promise to sell-for-less. But the statement, coupled with close observation of the business and talk with the personnel, shows what I have always found true: That any successful business is built on intrinsic merit of goods and reliable service. You can call the store what you like—this factor is at bottom of all success.

The real appeal, therefore, rests on the thought: "We sell reliable, high-quality groceries at modest prices. We do not handle trash, no matter how cheap it may look, nor how much thereof others may think it wise to handle."

Stanton does not fool himself. He knows precisely what he is doing. He operates each department to make it pay its way on its own merits. Here are some of his points on perishables:

Limited Service Goes With Perishables

While his stores are self-serve throughout, he gives limited service with perishables. This because experience shows customers cannot be permitted to handle and paw over the stock without the loss being too great. So in different stores he has from one to three or four clerks assigned exclusively to the perishables department.

He charges a just proportion of rent, light and other fixed general charges and the wages of the clerks employed in them to the perishables departments. He charges the merchandise at both wholesale and retail figures, so that by inventorying he can tell exactly what the shrinkage is, and he thus deduces the following: Average shrink, omitting potatoes, is 7 per cent. Including potatoes the shrink is 6 per cent.

A man working alone in a small perishables department can handle sales of $30 daily. That is about the limit, though three men in a large department can handle $100 daily. With minimum wages of $20 per week the department which can be run by one busy man is profitable, and one that will keep either two or three—or more—men busy is likewise profitable. But a department too large for one or two men to handle and yet not large enough to keep two or three men busy is very difficult to make profitable. We see, therefore, that wage expense is 10 per cent. and upward.

He had been figuring 25 per cent. average margin, but as a result of the recent analysis he was adding a mark-up of 43 per cent. on the average to yield 30 per cent. margin on sales. Is this not rather conclusive evidence that merchants generally mark their perishables too low?

An exception is citrus fruits. These he sells on a 25 per cent. margin because they are so staple in character and move so freely that 25 per cent. is ample margin.

As a hint on how carefully the efficiency of such a chain of stores is guarded we may take this: That Stanton had just opened a store in Los Angeles for a special purpose. This is to purchase and assemble fruits more than to sell. Here is the why:

Operating his 22 stores in Santa Monica, a beach resort about 20 miles from Los Angeles, his buyers of perishables formerly had to leave Santa Monica at between 2 and 3 a.m. to get the earliest garden pickings and return in time for the opening of business. Thus he paid first-asking prices, which were between 8 and 12 per cent. higher than later offerings. Now, by having a buyer on the spot he can wait until 8 or 9 o'clock, after the early rush is over, and gardeners glad to clean up at considerable concessions from first figures. By making careful selections of such remaining offerings he is able to get choice goods which yet can be on sale in his Santa Monica stores about noon, and which, by skillful storage, are perfectly good for the following morning trade.

I think the time is specially ripe to develop this line and believe men everywhere are going to do it, because the coming of prohibition has given an immense push to the fruit business.

GETTING BACK TO NORMAL

ARE you keeping your stock moving? Have you lines on your shelves that are not being turned over as rapidly as is profitable? No doubt there are a number of merchants who have goods on hand that are not selling as rapidly as they would wish. It should be the endeavor of every grocer to keep his stock moving, that is, all lines, if he is to make his business show satisfactory returns.

The example of a jobber in the United States is interesting, and it would seem might well be followed perhaps in a smaller way by many retailers. Quoting a bulletin of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, "this jobber melted $100,000 into cash, that was frozen in slow-moving stocks that required special attention. They got it." Retailers, too, who find they have lines that at present represent a slow turnover, should exert every effort to sell them, to turn them into cash, replacing them either with other lines, or else having created a demand for them, with new goods of the same kind.

The present affords an opportunity to sell lines now, that during the past four or five years have not been receiving an active inquiry. Devoting some attention to goods of a special character is always good business, and even in the experience of this jobber, he has found it profitable to bring back into his stock, goods that have not been selling for some time past. In this way he has maintained his trade on a very satisfactory basis, and the retailer following his lead will find too, that his turnover will be increased by applying selling effort to various products for which there is not a particularly brisk demand.

What this wholesaler has really accomplished in this period, when every effort is being made to bring business to normalcy, is told in an article in this issue. It narrates a striking example of what can be done when one goes at it, and retailers will profit by reading it closely.

SELLING HOUSE-CLEANING LINES

NOW that the early spring weather has apparently come to stay, housekeepers are turning their thoughts toward the semi-annual house cleaning siege. Many lines that have been more or less dormant on the merchants' shelves for the past few months will be in great demand for the next month or six weeks. Scouring and cleansing powders, metal and silver polish, brooms, brushes, floor wax, furniture polish and the many other lines that tend to lighten the housewife's burden at this season of the year, will be requested.

Window displays of these goods can be effective in stimulating sales and can be made very attractive to the passerby. To get the best results from the window displays it is necessary to have the co-operation of the whole sales staff and also the interior displays should be linked up with the windows. This need not be an elaborate display, but a table set aside for house-cleaning supplies or a few lines placed on the counter will make the suggestion that leads to an increased turnover on lines that do not enjoy a regular and steady sale the year round.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

MANY a merchant hires an orchestra to attract loungers, and forgets the little silent salesman—the price ticket.

THE STORE that succeeds is the store that serves—that saves time and steps—that offers what customers want, and makes it simple, easy, pleasant, to buy and get away.

A CHEERFUL smile and a hearty thank you from a clerk enthusiastic for the store are worth many dollars. Enthusiasm usually has to begin with the proprietor.

* * *

SUCCESS isn't made up of orders. It is made up of repeat orders. And a good customer, wrongly treated, is soon off the books. Explain this to every salesman.

* * *

THE PROFIT that is represented in a quick turnover of "perishables" is sufficiently attractive to appeal to all grocers. From now on is the time to sell fresh fruits and vegetables, and the merchant who is keeping them constantly displayed will do a great deal to increase his sales.

ACCORDING to a report emanating from the retailers' association in Moose Jaw there is some opposition in that section of the west to a proposed tax of one per cent. on all turnover. Preference is expressed for a tax of three per cent. at the source of supply, claiming that a tax of one per cent. applying to all branches of trade would be harder on the grocer than on any other retailer.

THE RETAIL grocers of British Columbia have formed a province-wide organization, that is enthusiastic over what it is going to do in the interests of the trade on the Pacific Coast. The grocers out there have had some grievance against wholesalers who are selling to people who legitimately should be customers of the retailer. At a convention last week an endeavor was made to reach a better understanding between the wholesaler and the retailer, and one of the good results that it is hoped will result from this gathering will be the entire elimination of this practice of selling to consumers.

Food Building Will Not Be Ready For This Year

Toronto, April 20.—(Special.)—When the Board of Control opened the tenders for the proposed new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition they found that the lowest tender was $51,000 above the estimate given by the architect. The original estimate was $150,000, while the lowest tender was $201,000.

The Exhibition Board and the Food Products Association both advised against the acceptance of the tender at the present time. It meant an increase in the rate per square foot of 30 cents above the estimate. The result is that the new Pure Food Building will not be erected this year, but in all probability matters will be straightened out in good time for the erection of the building next year.

The executive of the Food Products Association held a meeting on Monday and discussed the matter. The members felt that in six months' time conditions would be sufficient to warrant the matter being gone into again. The Exhibition Board feel the same way, and it is quite likely a general meeting will be called at this year"s Exhibition to again discuss the whole proposition.

Ottawa Grocers' Position Now "Second to None"

Ottawa, Ont., April 19 (Special).—The local Retail Grocers' Association at its meeting recently elected an executive committee, the election resulting in A. Roache, R. Edmonson, G. Stoate, J. Patterson and J. A. Walsh being appointed, the first named being chairman.

B. G. Crabtree gave a splendid address and requested the members to give the new president the same measure of fine co-operation they had always extended to him. He believed that the reputation of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association would go far and keep its proud position of "second to none" in the Dominion.

A. E. Kelly, the new president, took the chair and assured the members that they could certainly go ahead if each one determined to do his best to make the association a greater power than ever. The success of the Pure Food Show proved what co-operation could do and should spur them on to other things that were needed.

A tribute to the worth of the Retail Merchants' Association was voiced by Mr. Kennedy, first vice-president.

Remodels Store Front and Makes Better Display

Sherbrooke, Que., April 18.—William Murray & Co., Ltd., grocers, of this city, have had the entire front of their store remodelled so that the window space on each side of the entrance has been greatly increased. This store has now two large display windows each of which has two open sides. One faces on to the street and the other faces towards the hall-like entrance to the store. The interior of the store has also been remodelled and redecorated. A gallery has been built across the back of the store which affords an office for the store manager and for the bookkeeper. New wall cases have been placed in the store with the patented, pivoted bins for holding the bulk gods. The two windows are finished with polished hardwood floors which add materially to the attractiveness of the windows and make the windows adaptable to a style of window dressing which, in grocery stores, is unique.

An International Committee Wholesale Grocers Form

Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association is Represented on Committee by A. C. Pyke and T. H. Kinnear—Conference is Held in Chicago When Present Conditions in Trade Are Discussed

TORONTO, April 20.—A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, and T. H. Kinnear, treasurer, attended a conference of wholesale grocers from all parts of the United States, in Chicago, at the latter end of last week. Between four and five hundred grocers were in attendance. They were brought together at the instigation of O. J. Moore, of Sioux City, Iowa, vice-president of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States. The object of the gathering was to discuss present conditions in the trade and ways and means of relief.

A number of splendid addresses were given, reviewing business conditions generally and the wholesale grocery trade in particular. One of the results of the gathering was the appointment of an international wholesale grocers' educational committee consisting of eleven members. Both Mr. Pyke and Mr. Kinnear were appointed to this committee. One of the first things that it will do will be to investigate through experts business conditions throughout the United States and Canada, with a view to a better understanding of the basic principles of wholesaling, to dispel uncertainty and to endeavor to eliminate losses.

This educational committee will also seek to work out a system of uniform operation to be adopted by all wholesale grocers and to be of a character that will give the trade percentages of profit that it must absolutely have in order to operate successfully.

Mr. Pyke stated that the gathering was a very enthusiastic one, and from conversations with various wholesalers in the United States he believed that Canadian business men had not suffered the same depression in trade as had men similarly engaged in the United States.

How One Jobber Maintains Trade On Satisfactory Basis

NO subject is quite so prominent in the wholesale grocer's mind just now as that of "getting back to normal," says the New York Journal of Commerce, and with the average wholesaler the sad experiences of the past year have as yet not been wholly readjusted. Nor will they be until the problem is approached with a radical appreciation of just what the economic status is and how to adapt policies in the immediate future to the changed necessities for strenuous economies.

A bulletin to members of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, issued by Secretary Toulme, narrates a striking example of what can be done when one goes at it without hesitating as to consequences. The circular tells the story of a Middle Western wholesale grocer, who, "barring acts of God, will pay his common stockholders a substantial dividend as a result of 1921 operations," an outcome which probably most of the trade will be willing to accord a place of honor in the museum of curios in these times. As Mr. Toulme tells the story it is as follows:

Convincing Results

"The story of how this firm got practical results of convincing size is a classic. It is the most clean-cut, decisive and encouraging story that has yet been put before the trade we believe.

"Briefly, here are some of the results in figures:

"1. This firm will save about $16,500 on interest charges; average borrowed capital has been reduced from $300,000 in 1920 to $95,000 in 1921.

"2. This firm, without cutting salaries or wages, will save at least $10,500 on its 1921 payroll as against 1920.

"3. This firm has reduced its average inventory by $172,000 as compared with last year—slashing interest, storage and insurance costs, etc.

"4. This firm has melted $100,000 into cash that was frozen in slow-moving stocks that required special attention. They got it.

"5. This firm has held 'outstandings' at around 1920 figures with just a slight increase.

"6. This firm is bringing into its stocks a number of items that have been eliminated in the past eight or ten years.

"7. This firm has determined to pare the entire payroll, probably excepting salesmen, from 20 to 30 per cent. in the event that the methods outlined above do not bring the desired results.

"Dead Horses" Moved

"No. 1 of these results is self-explanatory. 'Dead horses' have been moved; outstandings held firm: inventories cut sharply, but intelligently; insurance an storage charges reduced, etc.

"No. 2 of these results has be brought about by a reduction of perso employed; in one warehouse a floor for of twelve men is doing the same wo that seventeen men did a year ag (This grocer believes that, not includin salesmen, 10 to 20 per cent. too ma people are employed by the average gr cer.) Where there is a resignatio death or removal the work is eith divided among other employees or a ne employee starts at a figure 20 to 30 p cent. under the amount the position pa previously.

"No. 3 means that this firm is follo ing the market closely but not ultr conservatively.

Walks the Stock Rooms

"No. 4 is leadership at its best. T head of the firm has adopted the poli of 'walking the stock rooms' personal each week and sometimes daily. H takes an assistant with him and stoc that look too large or a little 'slo are marked for special attention. Th are moved by intensive salesmanship.

"No. 5 will be readily appreciate Account is taken of present conditio and the figures of 1920 were favorabl

"No. 6 means that this firm is goi over its old stock records and addi profitable items that were dropped du ing the past eight or ten years.

"No. 7 represents the last step in t policy of this firm. The hope, if n the opinion at present, is that it w not be necessary.

"We have reported the story in fu Here is a policy that stands four-squa with competitive conditions and ec nomic laws. This jobber has return to normalcy.

"There is no doubt that many whol sale grocers have adopted similar po icies and that the results are fully satisfactory. The trade needs exper ences of this type. We would appreciat further ideas from members, becau skilled management is put to the te to-day."

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR OKANAGAN FRUIT

Vancouver, April 19.—Prospects are unusually bright for a good fruit crop in British Columbia this year, according to R. G. L. Clark, Dominion fruit inspector. Although there has been a little frost in spots, no damage was caused. Weather in the Okanagan Valley has been ideal, and present indications point to a heavy crop of berries and other fruits.

New President of Grocers' Section At Vancouver

Vancouver (Special).—James Harkness was chosen president of the local grocers' section, Retail Merchants' Association, at a recent election of officers. Mr. Harkness has been an active worker in association affairs for several years. He was trained in Scotland and brought to Vancouver, several years ago, a good knowledge of groceries that has built for him a splendid grocery trade in the suburban district of Mt. Pleasant. Mr. Harkness is conceded to be one of the foremost tea authorities in British Columbia. He has been foremost in the fight for better legislation that has been, and, in fact, is being waged in Vancouver at the present time, and his forcefulness and determination make him a good choice for president.

Thinks the "Cash and Carry" Idea is Beginning to Wane

Vancouver (Special).—According to Mr. Trainor, 2902 4th Avenue West, Vancouver, the cash and carry business is on the wane. He states that many of those who were carried away with the fad are beginning to appreciate the service that the neighborhood grocer renders and the novelty of rushing downtown with a cord bag and struggling home with the packages that the grocer's boy used to lay down on the kitchen table is beginning to pall.

It would appear that a few of the small, outside grocers are going to the downtown cash and carry stores themselves and picking up an occasional bargain. Mr. Trainor pointed out the disastrous effect such action had on the customer. There is nothing so likely to convince the consumer that her retailer is unnecessary than to see him downtown in his competitor's store, advertising to the world at large that he is beaten at his own business.

Happily, he said, this practice is not general. There are, of course, the weak sisters in every line of business.

Propose Three Per Cent. Tax at Source of Supply

Moose Jaw, Sask., April 19.—The Retain Merchants' Association of this town favors a three per cent. tax at the source of supply in preference to a one per cent. tax on all turnover as has been proposed. A resolution was made supporting the one per cent. tax, but an amendment favoring a three per cent. tax on the source of supply, namely, the manufacturers and importers, was moved, and when put to a vote carried by a majority of one.

A More Equitable Tax

In support of the amendment it was stated that it was not a fair proposition to put a one per cent. tax on a retail store turning over a $100,000 business at a three or four per cent. profit while another line of business with a turnover of only about $30,000 and a profit of between ten and twenty per cent. escaped with the same tax. In the grocery business, for example, some articles only yielded a very small profit and it would be difficult to add a one per cent. tax on the selling price. Therefore, the merchant would be forced to absorb the tax himself.

The three per cent. tax on the manufacturer on the other hand would be added on to the wholesale price of the goods and thus would be absorbed by the retailer in the selling price of his wares. This would be the more equitable tax of the two, although either would be much better than the present two per cent. sales tax on the manufacturer and one per cent. on the jobber.

The amendment as passed at last night's meeting reads as follows: "We, the Retail Merchants of Moose Jaw, in session last night, recommend that instead of placing the collection of the proposed turnover tax on the retail trade, that it be collected at the source of supply, viz., from the manufacturers and importers, and in this way would be absorbed in the same manner all systems of taxation are absorbed;

Oppose Heavy Expense

"And whereas, collections in the past, such as the Luxury Tax, have been very expensive, we go on record as being opposed to any system of collection which involves the heavy expense o collection that the proposed system of 'turnover tax' obviously would, and we further recommend that a system by which the maximum amount will be collected at the medium cost be adopted."

This resolution was endorsed a short time ago by the retail merchants of Swift Current and Langham.

Dominion R. M. A. Board Will Meet In Winnipeg

Winnipeg, April 19.—The twenty-fifth annual convention of the Dominion board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada will be held here August 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Delegates from every province in the Dominion will be present, and the convention will be given over to the discussion of the regular business transacted during the year, and the programme for the next twelve months.

J. A. Banfield, Dominion president of the association, will preside at all sessions. T. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary, will be present.

It is expected that a special meeting of all the members of the Retail Merchants' Associations of Manitoba and Saskatchewan will be held in the city at the same time.

The first day of the convention will be devoted to a conference of the provincial secretaries of the association with the Dominion secretary, E. M. Trowern. Each secretary will submit a report of the activities of his own particular branch.

The following three days will be given over to a general discussion of the business of the Dominion board.

There will be an extensive social programme arranged, and a banquet will be held in one of the large hotels on the last evening of the convention.

Last year the conference was held in Vancouver.

BACK TO THE OLD DAYS

That eggs in the Peace River country are selling as low as 10 and 12 cents per dozen was the statement made by a Calgary wholesale grocer upon his return from a recent visit to the north country. This is attributed to the excessive express rates to Edmonton running in the neighborhood of $2 per case.

B.C. GROCERS OUT TO IMPROVE TRADE

On Thursday evening the delegates to the convention, as well as several hundred Vancouver retailers, attended a lecture given by Paul Findlay at Navy League Headquarters under the auspices of the grocers' section, Vancouver branch, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. The meeting was enlivened by thirty minutes of community singing led by Roy A. Hunter, Canadian Grocer representative on the Pacific coast. Mr. Findlay found himself already well known to the retailers in Vancouver, who have followed his articles in Canadian Grocer with a great deal of interest. The convention broke up with the unanimous expression of opinion that much good had been accomplished and an organization created that could not fail to make for much smoother co-operation between the retail and wholesale grocers in British Columbia.

New Officers Elected

The officers elected for the provincial grocers' section were: President, T. H. White, Vancouver; first vice-president, P. G. M. Macdonald, New Westminster; second vice-president, Geo. McKenzie, Kelowna, and treasurer, S. J. Wilson Kamloops.

Canadian R. M. A. Functions Best

British Columbia Secretary of Retail Merchants' Association Speaks of Relative Merits of Canadian and U.S. Associations

VANCOUVER (Special). — Mr. Hougham, British Columbia secretary for the R.M.A. of Canada, attended the second annual convention of the Washington State Retailers' Association recently held at Tacoma, Wash. In commenting on organization affairs among our friends to the South, Mr. Hougham stated that while the number of associations in the State of Washington exceeded quite considerably the number of branches of the R.M.A. in British Columbia, and the total membership of them all reached a greater total, the results were not commensurate.

"As I see it," said Mr. Hougham to Canadian Grocer, "the trouble is that there is a lack of singleness of effort that militates against their greatest success. There were 22 secretaries at the convention. Each had his own local troubles which he was eager to have solved, but there is no parent body which can assure any local of state-wide support. Each organization is a complete unit in itself and necessarily the amount of effort required to achieve anything like unanimous action is simply colossal. Each unit must bear almost as much per capita expense as a parent body might function on, and yet there is not the one organization that can speak for the whole.

"At present, association affairs seem to be in the condition found here several years ago, when the hardware merchan considered the dry goods man's trouble a matter for only the dry goods man t settle and the jeweller refused to ge himself perturbed over what the groce struggled with.

"Until they all feel that they ar retailers first, and that any problem af fecting retailers is of concern to all re tailers, they must find their protests s scattered as to be almost futile. All th elements unfriendly to the retail trad of both countries have some definite ac tion which they propose to take. Th only successful way for the retail trad to protect itself is for the retail trade t speak with one voice.

"There is not in existence a coast t coast organization, speaking with th authority of every state organization, a the R.M.A. speaks in Canada. This wil no doubt be accomplished at some dat and then constructive action can b looked for," said Mr. Hougham.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 20.—The sugar market has a steadier tone this week with a firmer market for raw sugar. There is no change in molasses or corn syrups. Both the tea and the coffee market are unchanged but there is a firm feeling to coffee, while the better movement in tea is confined to package goods. The whole vegetable market shows a stronger tendency with higher prices quoted on onions, tomatoes and on new cabbage. There is a good demand for fresh vegetables. Cucumbers, however, are reduced in price. Strawberries are two cents a pint lower with a better supply. The larger size oranges are a little higher in price. A feature of the week is the drop on package oats of the large size. Cereals in general have been reduced in price by local wholesalers in an effort to move their stock before the warm weather comes. Walnuts are very scarce and most lines are advanced in price. Bordeaux walnuts are advanced and may go higher. There is a very good demand for nuts. Raisins, figs, dates and dried apples are firm in price but currants are a little easier. Lower prices are quoted on bulk jams. Candles are reduced in price and washboards show a ten per cent. decline in price. All soaps and washing soda are reduced in price.

Coffee Market Steady

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is no change in the coffee market, and all that can be said is that there is a firm tone to the primary markets and a fair call for supplies in this province.

Package Teas Steady

Montreal.

TEAS.—There is no change in the tea market. A little more strength seems to be added to the Ceylon teas, but the movement is only fair. The movement of package teas is good, however, and prices are steady.

Montreal.

CEREALS.—On account of the advent of warm weather, wholesalers locally have cut some of the prices on rolled oats, oatmeal and barley. The reduction amounts to 25 cents on all but pearl barley, which is 35 cents lower, now quoted at $5.25. Split peas are also down in price and are quoted at $5.35 per bag.

CANNED GOODS.—Prices on canned goods stand steady with a very firm tone to canned peas, tomatoes and corn. The stocks on hand of these lines are rather low and prices have been firming up to a steady basis. The only change in price is an advance of 25 cents per case on the No. 1 tins of shrimps, which are now quoted at $3.50 per dozen. There has been a further reduction on compound jam in bulk amounting to three cents per pound. The price quoted on these jams is 17 cents per pound.

Candle Prices Reduced

Montreal.

CANDLES.—In the Provinec of Quebec, candles are an important commodity in the grocery market and it is of interest to note that a reduction of nine cents per pound has been made on Belmont stearine candles, and are now quoted at 25 cents per pound.

Dried Fruit Firm

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The whole dried fruit market is firm. Valencia raisins are scarce; in fact, all Spanish raisins are scarce and the price strong. Dried apples show more strength. Dates and figs are also firm in price, but currants are a little easier. There are no changes in quotations.

Wash Boards Reduced

Montreal.

WASH BOARDS.—There is a reduction on all lines of wash boards this week amounting to 10 per cent. on the former quotation.

Raw Sugar More Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is very little change in the sugar market this week. Raw sugar is steadier, but the question of the legality of the Cuban sugar commission has been brought up and the outcome has a decided bearing on the sugar market. Another question that will affect the sugar market in Canada is the outcome of the Fordney Bill which is being brought up in the United States. The question which now stands before the trade is as to whether the duty will be added to the in-bond price or to domestic price. Opinions vary on this question. However, sugar itself stands steady at the present time, and apart from these two questions there is nothing apparent which will affect the sugar market either one way or the other.

Reductions on Soaps

Montreal.

SOAP.—Following the cut in the price of soap made last week, another has been made this week. All laundry soaps have been reduced by Montreal wholesalers to a price of $6.75 per case, which in some cases is a reduction of 75 cents per case. The premium offer has been withdrawn. Soda bicarbonate or washing soda is reduced 50 cents per keg, and 112-pound kegs are now selling at $4.50.

Package Oats Lower

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The only change of note in package goods is a reduction of 60 cents a case on the large size packages of rolled oats. Both the round and the square packages of this breakfast food of all brands is reduced to $5 per case of 20. The small size is still quoted at $2. Other lines are steady in prices.

Shelled Walnuts Scarce

Montreal.

NUTS.—The nut market as a whole stands very firm, with a very good demand in most lines. Walnuts are very scarce and the prices quoted by the importers have already advanced on Bordeaux walnuts and on pecans. Spot stocks of these are almost depleted and replacement prices are higher. Peanuts stand firm in price with a noticeable increase in the demand. Prices quoted by the wholesalers here are advanced two cents on almonds, while Bordeaux walnuts are up to 63 and 68 cents, and at those prices are hard to find. Dealers state that a price of 70 cents may be looked for in walnuts.

Strawberries are Lower

Montreal.

FRESH FRUIT.—Strange though it may seem, considering the lateness of the season, Ben Davis apples are offered at a lower price than they have been quoted at in the last two months. The quality, however, is not as good as might be desired, but larger supplies are coming forward and prices have been forced down. Baldwins, however, are firm in price with not as large a supply. From $7 to $7.50 is quoted on Ben Davis apples. The larger size oranges are a little more expensive this week. Larger supplies of strawberries of a better quality are on the market and a decline of two cents a pint is noted. There is a good demand for all lines of fresh fruit.

Strong Vegetable Market

Montreal.

VEGETABLES. — The market for fresh vegetables shows considerable strength. The most notable change is the advance in the price of onions. Texas onions are offered on the market at $2.75 per crate and yellow onions are quoted at the same price. The red onions which have been selling for some time at $2.50 per cwt. have advanced to $2.75 owing to fewer offerings. Some dealers state that supplies are to be had, but these have not been offered on account of the lower prices. The demand for new tomatoes has been so great during the last few weeks that the price has advanced to $10 for six-basket crates. Although the price quoted last week was $7.50 per crate, the advance is not as big as the figures would indicate, but is a slight advance on the previous price. Cucumbers, however, have declined $1.50 per hamper and are quoted at $5.50. Cauliflower, lettuce, spinach and parsley are offered in fair supply with a good demand at market prices. No standard quotations are made.

Lower Prices on Maple Syrup

Montreal.

MAPLE SYRUP.—The colder weather that has prevailed in the Province of Quebec has resulted in larger supplies of maple syrup with lower prices quoted. Quotations vary considerably, but a price of from $1.25 to $1.75, depending upon the quality, is general.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 20.—The free deals on laundry soaps as announced last week have been withdrawn and a straight reduction is now in effect. Flour is in a weak position with prices again reduced. Rolled oats are also weak and lower. Shelled walnuts and almonds are stronger with higher prices in sight. Primary markets for teas for all grades are firmer and higher. Rice is easy and spot quotations lower. Jams show a tendency for firmness. Spices are marked lower but stocks are lighter than for several years. Honey and maple syrup are quiet and easy.

Beans Unchanged

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is no change in the situation on beans. The demand is quiet, but stocks are not considered large.

CEREALS.—The cereal market is quiet. Manufacturers state that sales are slow and no doubt the early spring weather is the cause of lessening the consumption sooner than other years. Rolled oats show a decline of 15 cents per bag, now quoted at $3.25. Other quotations are unchanged.

Jam Prices Look Firmer

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a rumor that jam manufacturers are to form a holding company to market their products and the real object appears to be to stabilize prices. Jam manufacturers, perhaps more than any other line, have felt the depression very keenly and jams have been selling lower than the cost of manufacture. Some wholesalers this week have advanced their quotations on certain brands and are adhering strictly to the manufacturers list basis, which, on strawberry and raspberry fours, is 95 cents. Some brands, however, continue to be offered at varying prices around 80 cents on fours. New lobsters will arrive about first June and prices will be around $2.75 per dozen on quarters and $4.75 for halves. There is no change in canned vegetables. Canned fruits are showing a little better movement. One wholesaler reports sales during the week under review of canned peaches amounting to 200 cases, who, a few weeks ago, reported that canned fruits were not selling at any price.

No Change in Dried Fruits

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The situation in dried fruits is unchanged, except that wholesalers report a little better movement. Prunes are moving more freely since the lower prices, but apricots are not selling rapidly. Raisins and currants continue in a firm position with a fair demand.

Pineapples Are Lower

Toronto.

FRUITS. — Pineapples are arriving freely and the prices are somewhat lower. All sizes are represented and are quoted at $7.50 to $8.00 per case according to size. Practically the only Ontario apples that are offered are those packed in boxes and are selling at $2.00 to $3.50 per box. Western apples are also offered at $3.75 to $4.50 per box. Lemons are down 50 cents per case, now quoted at $4.00 to $4.25 for Californias and $4.25 for Messinas. Heavy shipments of oranges and grapefruit are arriving daily and prices remain practically unchanged.

Flour Drops 30 Cents

Toronto.

FLOUR.—Flour registered a decline of 30 cents per barrel, bringing the price on No. 1 patents to $10.00 and on No. 2 to $9.50 per barrel. The situation does not look very bright, viewed from the miller's angle. With the small demand for export and domestic demand reduced to a hand to mouth basis, many mills have shortened their capacity and in fact some mills have been closed entirely since the new crop came in.

Millfeeds Reduced

Toronto.

MILLFEEDS.—Middlings, shorts and bran are reduced $2 per ton. This market is rather weak in view of the low price on coarse grains, which is causing farmers to feed their grain rather than sell at the low figure. On the other hand bran is rather scarce, due to the mills running at reduced capacity.

Little Sale for Honey

Toronto.

HONEY.—There is a very dull market for honey both in a retail and wholesale way. There still appears to be considerable honey in the country as dealers report many inquiries for quotations, but as their stocks are also fairly large and as there is practically no demand the majority are not making any offers.

Walnuts and Almonds Higher

Toronto.

NUTS. — Shelled Bordeaux walnuts, halves, continue to be in a strong position under an active demand. Some wholesalers have advanced prices to 70 cents per pound but supplies can still be bought at 63 cents in small lots and 58 cents per pound in case lots. Broken walnuts, which many retailers are now taking to, are offered at 35 cents per pound, case lots. Shelled almonds are also in a strong position and prices in primary markets have advanced recently 2½ cents per pound. Prices on spot, however, are unchanged.

Blue Rose Rice Lower

Toronto.

RICE.—Blue Rose rice has registered another drop and is now quoted at 6½ cents per pound. It has been intimated that even lower prices are likely perhaps around 50 cents per hundred less. The rice markets are in an unsettled condition with prices in primary markets practically at a pre-war basis.

Some Spices Marked Lower

Toronto.

SPICES. — Stocks of spices both in Canada and the United States are very small and manufacturers state that if there was anything near a normal demand that stocks would soon become exhausted as it takes practically three months for shipments to arrive from production markets. Some quotations are lower. Reductions amount to one to eight cents per pound. Pickling spice is reduced to 19 cents per pound. Allspice is down to 19 cents. Cassia is now 26 cents. White pepper is reduced to 31 cents and black to 21 cents. Nutmegs are down five to ten cents per pound. There is no change in ginger prices, Jamaica being in a strong position.

Sugar Prices Unchanged

Toronto.

SUGAR.—There are no new developments in the sugar situation. Refiners' list prices are unchanged but wholesalers continue to quote at a lower basis. There is little change in the raw sugar market; prices remain about on the same basis as last week.

Soaps Are Lower

Toronto.

SOAPS. — All free deals on laundry soaps as announced last week are now off and a straight reduction is in effect. All laundry soaps are now quoted at $7 per case.

New Prices on Lime Juice

Toronto.

LIME JUICE.—The new prices for lime fruit juice for 1921 are as follows: Montserrat, pints, $4.75 per case; quarts, $8.50 per case. Olympia, $3 per dozen.

Primary Tea Markets Higher

Toronto.

TEA.—Advices from primary markets show that teas for all grades have recently advanced one to four cents per pound. This advance applies to both Ceylons and Indias. Just how soon the stronger primary markets will affect prices on spot to the retail trade is difficult to forecast as there appears to be a sentiment on the part of tea merchants to hold prices as long as possible at the present basis. The situation, however, is nevertheless a strong one, and wholesalers generally are inclined to buy rather more freely than they have for some months past. One wholesaler expressed himself on the tea situation as follows, "We are buying fairly heavy on teas. In fact I feel it is about the only line that is safe to buy in any large amount. There is no doubt that we are going to see higher prices than at present, especially for the better grades, and those are the kinds that the people seem to want. Since the war the people have learned to drink a better grade of tea and they do not want a coarse, cheap tea."

Vegetables Plentiful

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The vegetable market is well supplied with fresh vegetables and although prices show little change there is an easier tendency. New carrots and beets are offered at $2 per hamper. Green peas at $4 per hamper. Spinach at $2.25 per hamper. Cabbage is plentiful at $4.75 per large crate. Green onions are commencing to arrive freely at 30 to 35 cents per dozen. Canadian roots are in little demand and are commencing to show signs of becoming cleaned up. Potatoes are easy at 70 to 85 cents per bag.

Some Price Reductions

Toronto.

MISCELLANEOUS. — Eggo baking powder is reduced as follows: Four-ounce tins are now $1.35 per dozen, 6-ounce tins $1.75 per dozen, 9-ounce $2.20 per dozen, 12-ounce $2.85 per dozen and 16-ounce $3.60 per dozen. Olive butter is reduced to $1.80 per dozen. Milk stock is reduced to 18 cents per pound in drums of 50 pounds and in barrels at 16 cents per pound. Crisco is down, now quoted at 20½ cents for ones and threes and 20 cents per pound for sixes and nines. Shirriff's quintessences are now quoted as follows: One-ounce bottles $1.55 per dozen, two-ounce bottles $2.75 per dozen and 2½-ounce bottles at $3.25 per dozen.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 20.—The sugar market is holding firm, but some wholesalers are selling below the refiners' list. Raisins are in good demand. An improvement has been shown in the sale of jams due to the lower prices. Southern rice is now on the market and is considered good value. Rolled oats declined slightly but package cereals show no change. Shelled walnuts are much firmer with practically none on the local market. Some lines of soap have been reduced during the week. Canned vegetables and fruits are offered at a wide variety of prices. New shipments of molasses have arrived and quotations are lower. The tea market is ruling firm as well as white peppers.

Raisins in Good Demand

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS. — The situation on prunes and dried fruits is an interesting one. A report just received from an American packer says: "It looks now as though we are just about on the eve of a change in conditions. The active demand in the past ten days from Europe, together with the increased domestic demand on all dried fruits, particularly prunes, indicates that further noticeable decline in prices is not likely. However, we will have to admit there is no particular strength in the prune situation because we understand ridiculous prices are being named."

Jams in Good Demand

Winnipeg.

JAMS. — The week has been marked by less tendency by manufacturers to sacrifice their present stock of jams. Indications are that the new pack will cost more than prices quoted now and this is influencing the manufacturers to hold their present stock until a future date instead of offering them at the lower prices. Retailers and consumers are beginning to realize that jams at to-day's prices are less than the cost of replacement with the result that heavy sales are noted. The Empress Manufacturing Co., of British Columbia, are placing a new line of pineapple marmalade on the market. This line is now ready for prompt shipment and is quoted at $12.50 per case for 12/4s and $3.75 per dozen for 24/15 ounce.

Rolled Oats Easier

Winnipeg.

CEREALS. — Bulk rolled oats are easier and a decline of five cents per bag is noted. Eighties are now quoted at $2.30 per bag. Light breakfast foods are showing an improvement in demand and a better movement is expected as the season advances. The consumption of Japan Kootenashi beans is on the increase and low prices have assisted very largely to restore this line to its old-time popularity. Prices at points of production are on a level with pre-war basis.

Shelled Walnuts Firmer

Winnipeg.

NUTS. — The shelled walnut market shows further advances. French and Spanish shippers state that stocks are practically exhausted. There are no walnuts on the local market but some are expected shortly and will be sold at or about 60 cents per pound. Shelled almonds are still offered at unchanged prices and are considered good value. Shelled pecans remain high with limited supplies. No. 1 Spanish shelled peanuts are showing a firmer tone and advanced ½ cent per pound during the week.

Flour Market Unchanged

Winnipeg.

FLOUR.—There is no change in the flour market this week but with lower prices quoted on grain it is expected that a decline will take place very shortly. Quotations on No. 1 Manitoba flour in cotton bags is $10.65.

Strawberries Higher

Winnipeg.

FRUITS. — Louisiana strawberries which have arrived during the week are higher in price and are bringing $8 per crate. There is no change in quotation on oranges, the smaller sizes ranging from $5 to $5.75 with the larger sizes from $6 to $7 per case. Small quantities of pineapples are arriving and are quoted at $15 per case. The demand for grapefruit is showing an improvement and they are priced from $7 to $8 per case. Californian lemons are quoted at $5.25 to $6 per case, with Washington winesap apples at $3 to $4.25 per box. Bananas are moving freely and the price of 13 cents per pound remains unchanged.

Cucumbers Lower

Winnipeg.

VEGETABLES. — Cucumbers are reported lower in price and are quoted at $4.50 per dozen. Spinach advanced 50 cents per case and is selling freely at $3. Mexican tomatoes are in good demand at $9 per case. Florida celery is moving freely and is quoted at $7.50 per 50-pound box. California head lettuce has shown a slight advance and is quoted at $7.50 per case. Other lines of vegetables, such as green onions, radishes, cauliflower, etc., are showing a better movement.

Canned Goods Moving

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS. — Canned vegetables and fruits are offered at a wide variety of prices. There is no stability to the market and independent packers' goods are reported light. The demand for canned goods has shown an improvement as retailers are taking advantage of the present low prices. Increased sales are most noticeable for canned fruits and the heavy vegetables.

Molasses is Easier

Winnipeg.

SYRUPS. — Fancy molasses in tins as shown a decline during the past two or three weeks. The decline is principally due to the fact that numerous packers have been simply turning their inventories so as to convert their merchandise into cash and this has rather demoralized conditions. In most cases molasses has been sold at an extremely small profit and in other cases at actual cost in order to continue operating. The bottom appears now to have been reached and a firmer tendency is noticeable. New shipments of molasses are arriving this week and quotations will be lower. Syrups are fairly steady under a good consumptive demand.

Tea Market Firm

Winnipeg.

TEA.—Over one and a quarter million pounds of tea were catalogued for last week's sale according to latest reports from Colombo. Selections were good and quality from all districts showed improvement. Strong competition prevailed and all grades showed a considerable advance. Orange pekoes, excepting finest qualities, which were dearer, were not in strong request and were irregular and sometimes easier but otherwise the sale taken as a whole showed remarkable advances in price and a large percentage of the offerings were sold at higher figures.

RESTRICT SALES TAX TO SOURCE OF SUPPLY

spectors and auditors, etc., but it can be collected at a very small cost by collecting it at the source of supply.

When the Government attempted to collect a revenue from patent medicines through war revenue stamps the cost of the collection was reported to be about sixty-two per cent., and in addition to this enormous cost many retail merchants were compelled to pay large sums through fines and other court proceedings when the placing of the stamps on the bottles had been overlooked. We strongly opposed this system from its inception and we hope that no similar system will be adopted.

In our opinion, we must not, at the present time, allow any other issue than the one that is now before us to confuse our present plan, and that is to see that the largest amount of money is collected at the lowest possible cost, and with the least possible annoyance to the retail trade, and to leave other issues to be taken up as they arise. We therefore ask all retail merchants to do all they possibly can to have our proposal adopted by the Government.

FROM HALIFAX, BY WIRE

Halifax, N. S., April 20. — The egg market during the past few weeks has been decidedly weak, but is now showing a firmer tendency, and prices are advanced five cents per dozen, now quoted at 35 cents. Merchants state that the low figure on eggs will not be again quoted this season. Creamery and dairy butter both show a decrease, and lower prices are likely. Native potatoes are active at $1.25 per bag. Generally speaking the markets show a brighter tone during the week.

After Lent Period Still Sees Active Inquiry For Fish

Usual Falling Off as is Customary at This Season is Not Apparent—Fresh Halibut is Arriving and is of Particularly Good Quality.

By D. B. DRYSDALE

CONSIDERING that it is such a short time since Lent, after which there is generally a considerable falling off in the fish business, this year has been an exception to the rule. There is a live demand at present and a good variety to satisfy all inquiries. Business during Lent was exceptionally good. In fact this winter season has left all other years behind so far as sales are concerned.

At present it is just between seasons, fresh caught fish have not commenced to arrive in large quantities. Fresh caught pike, pickerel and whitefish have come in, but in very small quantities. They were soon taken up. Fresh halibut has arrived steadily in carload lots and is the best that has been seen for some time in this part of the country. It is schooner caught fish, which means that it is only out of the water a few hours before being placed in refrigerator cars for shipment east. Considerable quantities of these fish have been shipped across the line and have brought fancy prices in New York and Buffalo.

Although the season has been so far in advance of other years, it will be the first of May before supplies of fresh fish will be sufficient to take care of the demand.

Practically all lines of frozen and smoked fish are still on hand and as prices have eased off somewhat retailers should not hesitate as to keeping a good stock on hand.

Increases Bacon Sales by Attractive Display on Counter

H. A. Campbell, St. Clair Ave. W.., Shows His Bacon Neatly and Evenly Sliced, in Glass Enclosed Counter—Sells Only One Brand and Believes it is the Best Policy

H. A. CAMPBELL, St. Clair Ave. West, Toronto, has a unique method of displaying his bacon that means a great deal in the way of stimulating sales. He has not a refrigerator counter, but recently on the occasion of a visit by a representative of Canadian Grocer he had a portion of the counter enclosed in glass and under this was a very attractive arrangement of bacon. It was nicely sliced and ready for sale to the customers. The display could not fail to attract the customer at the counter, and Mr. Campbell stated that since he had put in this enclosed part of the counter his turnover in bacon and cooked meats had shown a steady and gratifying increase. "People come into the store to buy other things and seing this little display of bacon invariably inquire about it and very often buy some," he stated. "The bacon is evenly and neatly sliced beforehand, and as it is shown, I think it is sufficiently tempting to induce people to buy. Keeping a quantity of bacon sliced in advance of orders I find is good practice as it facilitates service when I am very busy and when to take the time to slice up bacon would be decidedly inconvenient."

Mr. Campbell has a slicer and is enthusiastic about the service it gives. He believes that it helps the sale of bacon and cooked meats. "People will go where they can have bacon and particularly cooked meats sliced to their liking, and this is only possible with a slicer," he remarked. "It reduces waste to a minimum, and for this reason, if for no other, it is valuable."

Only one brand of bacon is sold by Mr. Campbell. He has followed the policy of concentrating on one kind, and he believes that it has paid him. He is of the opinion that it is the best that can be obtained, and his customers like it. A reputation for good bacon, according to Mr. Campbell, will do a great deal to build trade and to bring new customers into the store.

NEW REGULATION RAISES EVAPORATED MILK STANDARD

The Department of Agriculture of the province of Manitoba has issued a new regulation raising the standard of evaporated milk to 7.8 per cent. fat and 25.5 per cent. total solids.

"It is not forbidden to sell milk which has been concentrated either with or without sugar, to a less degree than condensed milk or evaporated milk, but such milk must be labelled 'Sub-Standard Concentrated Milk' and neither upon the label, nor upon any descriptive matter, shall it be described as condensed milk, evaporated milk or sterilized milk, because these terms are legally defined. Sub-standard concentrated milk shall be labelled in such a way as correctly to inform the purchaser regarding its contents in milk fat and in total milk solids."

When there is a small shortage of liquor with sweet pickles, draw off a part or all of the remaining liquor. Mix same thoroughly with distilled vinegar, and refill the package. When there is a considerable shortage dilute the vinegar with one-fourth part of water, using about three or four pounds of granulated sugar for each gallon of liquor to be added. After same is thoroughly dissolved, pour over the pickles. It is sometimes advisable to use for this purpose the surplus liquor from other packages of the same kind of pickles, providing it is sweet and clean. Vinegar that has been long exposed to the air gradually loses its strength, and caution should be used in this respect.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, April 20.—The produce market is characterized this week by more activity in nearly all lines. There is a general firmer feeling except in live hogs and in lard. The offerings of hogs have exceeded the demand and lower prices are quoted. The same is true of lard, which continues in an unsettled condition. Butter is stronger in view of the heavier arrivals of the new make and the demand swinging in that direction. Storage butter is a little weaker in price. The bigger demand for eggs and the general commencement of packing has resulted in higher prices being quoted. The cheese market is a little easier this week in export circles but domestic prices are unchanged. There is no change in cooked or smoked meats. Halibut and haddock are higher in price but it is expected that the arrival of Eastern halibut on the market next week will result in lower prices. The oyster season is practically over. There is very little fresh lake fish on the market.

Fresh Butter Prices Firmer

Montreal.

BUTTER.—A firmer feeling has prevailed through the week for butter on account of the arrival on the market of the first make of fresh creamery butter. The demand has swung that way among local dealers, and as there are not sufficient supplies as yet, the tendency has been to firm up the butter market. However, this has had a weakening effect on the market for the storage creamery butter, and these prices are quoted from one to two cents a pound lower this week. There is little or no demand for dairy butter.

Easier Feeling in Cheese

Montreal.

CHEESE.—There is a little weaker feeling to the cheese market this week with a decline of half a cent a pound in wholesale circles. This, however, does not directly affect the grocery trade, but indicates the general trend of the market. The market for new cheese is steady but the demand is limited. The future trend of the cheese market is still uncertain.

Egg Prices Higher

Montreal.

EGGS.—The first advance in the price of eggs during the last two months came this week with a much firmer market. This is attributed to the fact that the storage operations have become more general and there is a bigger demand to be met. There is also a heavy consumption, and the market is very active with prices ruling one cent per dozen higher.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, April 29.—Lower prices are named on hogs and cattle. Smoked meats are in a weak position and lower prices are likely in view of the lower hog market. Cooked hams are scarce on account of the strike of the employees of the abattoirs; this shortage is only temporary as the strike is expected to be settled this week. Cheese is easy and quotations lower. Butter is in an easy position with quotations practically unchanged, although lower prices are expected to be named during the week. The egg market is firmer, attributed to storage operations becoming more general. Lard and shortening are both reduced in price with the situation in the market continuing to rule easy. Fresh fish is arriving more freely with quotations reduced. Oysters, ciscoes and some lines of salt fish are finished for this season. Turkeys and chickens are somewhat lower on account of the poor quality offered.

Butter Market Easy

Toronto.

BUTTER—The butter market has an easier tone, although prices show little change. Production of fresh made butter is increasing gradually but as yet there is no surplus. Dealers, however, are buying cautiously, in fact practically only for immediate requirements. When the break does come it is expetced that the decline will be drastic, but more in the nature of a gradual decline. The average quotation on fresh made creamery is 59 cents per pound, but some makes put up in cartons are bringing as high as 61 cents. No. 2 grades range from 50 cents to 66 cents per pound.

Cooked Hams Scarce

Toronto.

COOKED MEATS—There is a scarcity noted on cooked hams. This shortage is attributed to the packing house strike. This condition, however, is not expected to last for any length of time as the strike is expected to be settled this week. Quotations on cooked meats are unchanged.

New Cheese Lower

Toronto.

CHEESE—The cheese market is easier and prices on the new make are lower, ranging around 29 cents per pound. Old cheese is holding fairly steady at unchanged quotations, although there is a tendency for easier prices on account of new make arriving in fair volume at lower prices. New Stilton is offered at 33 cents and old is bringing 36 cents per pound.

Hog Prices Lower

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS—Prices in the cattle market declined considerably during the week, in spite of the strike of the abattoir employees. Hog prices are also lower and packers made fairly heavy purchases considering the labor condition. Prices on fresh meat cuts are unchanged, but lower prices are likely when labor difficulties are settled.

Little Change in Poultry

Toronto.

POULTRY — Receipts continue light and the biggest volume of business passing is from storage stocks. Turkeys are slightly lower, but this is due to the fact that the quality is poorer as the majority of turkeys offered are gobblers of a coarse nature. Chickens are also getting staggy and prices are lower. Geese are not being quoted.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, April 20.—Creamery butter held in storage is practically cleaned up, and as fresh butter is arriving in small quantities there is not sufficient supply to take care of the demand. Cheese is scarce, and the few carloads that arrived during the week were picked up very rapidly. The egg market is weak with a tendency for lower prices. Cooked meats show no change. Ham and bacon advanced during the week. Lard and shortening show a decline. Fresh halibut and salmon are in good demand.

Butter Supplies Short

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—The butter market is ruling steady with no change in quotations. Creamery butter held in storage is practically cleaned up and as fresh made butter is not arriving in sufficient volume to take care of the demand, there is a tendency for a shortage. There is no demand for dairy butter.

SHELLED WALNUTS LIKELY TO BE SHORT

Walnut halves in the French primary markets are being sold in driblets and at advancing prices because of the scarcity of supplies. Asking prices are 1,200 to 1,225 francs, and even at that level 100 or 200 case parcels are all that is available. A shortage this fall is threatened because shippers went into the season with about 40,000 cases in storage and do not expect more than 10,000 cases this year.

FROST CUTS RAISIN CROP

The California Associated Raisin Company has advised that on account of the early spring in the raisin district the vines were unusually well advanced. The frost of last week was severe in some sections and the estimate is that 20 per cent. of the crop was damaged.

APRICOT CROP INJURED BY FROST

H. G. Coykendall, general manager of the California Prune & Apricot Growers of San Jose, advises that the coming apricot crop of California has been more or less severely damaged all over the State by the recent cold weather. An estimate of 50 per cent. injury is made, in addition to which must be considered the ravages of brown rot. The two combined. Mr. Coykendall says, will wipe out thousands of tons in the valley.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Rates For Classified Advertising

Advertisements under this heading 3c per word for first insertion; 2c for each subsequent insertion.

Where answers come to Box number in our care to be forwarded, 5 cents per insertion must be added to cover postage, etc.

Contractions count as one word, but five figures (as $1,000) are allowed as one word.

Cash remittance to cover cost must accompany all advertisements. In no case can this rule be overlooked. Advertisements received without remittances cannot be acknowledged.

FIXTURES FOR SALE

EVERY MERCHANT WHO SEEKS MAXIMUM efficiency should ask himself whether a Gipe-Hazard Cash Carrier, as a time and labor saver, is not worth more than the high-priced labor which it liberates. Are you willing to learn more about our carriers? If so, send for our new Catalogue J. Gipe-Hazard Store Service Co., Limited, 113 Sumach St., Toronto.

STORE FIXTURES FOR SALE AT BARGAIN prices. Two safes, one National Cash Register, two McCaskey Registers, one wall case, two 6-ft. silent salesmen, also one Snooker table. Apply Leonard Bros., Mond, Ont.

WHAT DOES THE FAMOUS FIVE ROSES COOK BOOK DO FOR YOU?

NOTHING—if you do not sell FIVE ROSES. But if you are prepared to fill the FIVE ROSES demand—then, right in the consumer's kitchen where no personal salesman can penetrate, it does these three essential things for YOU.

—creates the demand

By showing in seductive picture and tested recipe the splendid flour foods achieved by successful users throughout Canada. By stirring up culinary ambitions, by tempting new prospects to bake that never baked before. By everlastingly answering FIVE ROSES to every baking question.

—increases the existing demand

By suggesting new flour uses. By enthusing beginners to attempt new triumphs. By starting resultful missionary work in friendly circles. By enlarging the family consumption. By proving that the same good flour makes bread as well as pastry.

—maintains it against competition

By eliminating all risk of profit-killing disappointment that so sadly re-echoes in the store—because the housewife knows that FIVE ROSES recipes are successful recipes, each having been thoroughly tested, every picture an actual photograph. The FIVE ROSES Cook Book daily reminds the housewife of past successes, present satisfaction, future ambitions. The FIVE ROSES habit rivets trade to your store. This profit insurance costs you nothing, but it has made FIVE ROSES the best selling staple on the market.

Consider that this consumer influence is persistently at work to simplify FIVE ROSES sales. Consider that it is free to you, that it is inseparable from the brand FIVE ROSES. Then ask yourself this question. Let your own selling instinct answer.

Am I going to reap this profitable harvest that is daily ripening within reach?

A distinguishing feature of that most distinguished product

Aladdin
DYE SOAP

"It Colors as it Cleans"

WHAT this means to you is that you can use the "economy" argument to sell Aladdin. Instead of using 2 cakes of soap—one to wash and one to dye the garment—the thrifty housewife uses just the one cake of Aladdin—cleaning and dyeing it at one simple operation.

No wonder it has attained an astonishing volume of sales. No wonder dealers note this product finds favor in homes that never tried home dyeing before.

Borden's ST. CHARLES Brand Milk

"With the Cream Left in."

Milk so rich and creamy that it saves using butter

Borden's intensive National advertising is showing Canadian women in concrete ways just how this rich, creamy milk will "cut the cost of cooking" and give their favorite recipes an improved creamy flavor that is instantly noticeable.

It is telling them that St. Charles Milk is the rich, pure milk of healthy, carefully inspected cows—perfectly sterilized—tested for high butter content, and sealed under ideal hygienic conditions—with the cream left in.

Key up your store with this Borden advertising by getting up regular St. Charles displays in your windows—It pays.

Sell Five Cases a Week

Fill a window with the brands of Pink Salmon mentioned below. Put on an attractive sign with a tempting price; tell your customers of "The 47 Ways to Serve Pink Salmon." Try selling in dozen or half-dozen lots. You can clear 5 cases a week. Now try this one:

DEVILED SALMON

One can Pink Cascade Salmon, two eggs, flour, milk, butter, spices, potatoes. Mince one can of salmon after removing skin and bones, add the yolks of two hard-boiled eggs finely mashed, a little minced parsley, season with salt and pepper and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Make a thick sauce of one tablespoon of butter, one tablespoon of flour and two-thirds cup of milk. Pour sauce over salmon and mix, butter baking dish, fill with mixture, and cover with meringue of mashed potatoes; dot with bits of butter and brown in oven.

Good High-Grade Salmon will always bring repeats. Don't be misled by a low price quotation. Stick to Cascade, Big Horn, Tip Top and Wellington Brands. They are trade winners.

Make sure of the Brand; it's a Right one when

You Can't Stop People Buying Macdonald's

LAST year Canadians bought more Macdonald's than any other kind of tobacco. They are going to keep on buying it.

No sensible dealer would want to stop them, for Macdonald's is the most profitable line to sell. It moves faster, it pays more profit, it requires less sales effort, it satisfies as few other tobaccos could do, and it brings those extra Macdonald profits that make the tobacco with a heart so popular with the retailer.

Money-Saving Information

"The most useful information contained in any paper I get"—so a Western banker writes in to-day's mail, renewing his subscription for FINANCIAL POST.

"Very often," his letter goes on to say, "I am called on to suggest investments for small amounts, sometimes as low as a few hundreds, and I find your Investors' Inquiry Service a reliable partner to consult. If every investor knew there was such service at his call it would surely lessen the losses of many of these people."

The Investors' Inquiry Service fills just that need. Unless you are perfectly sure of your investments write us before you buy.

It costs FINANCIAL POST subscribers nothing to be sure before placing hard-earned savings in stocks that may never have a chance of paying dividends. Trained service men will give you the benefit of keen analysis based on the facts behind the securities you are considering. This is one of many features enjoyed by our readers.

A separate cash drawer for each clerk

This makes clerks more efficient because:

1. Each clerk is responsible for the business he handles.
2. In case of error it shows who made the mistake.
3. It gives each clerk credit for the work he does.

An up-to-date National Cash Register with separate cash drawers measures the ability of each clerk.

Is It a Good Man You Want?

Wishing and wanting won't get him for you. Advertising probably will. You ask what paper to use? Well, you can waste a lot of good money using wrong papers. The best one to use is CANADIAN GROCER.

This newspaper is probably read by the man you will engage. At any rate, if you want a man trained, the chances are that he sees and reads CANADIAN GROCER. If your advertisement tastes good to him, the chances are he'll answer it. Then it's up to you to land him.

But look for him where he's likely to be—behind some counter or desk in a retail or wholesale grocery house.

You never can tell what's in the mind of men to make them willing to change. Perhaps it's money; perhaps a cranky boss; perhaps climate; perhaps a girl. But it will be something or other.

Sometimes the first insertion of an advertisement finds the man. Sometimes you will have to keep on advertising.

Our part is not to guarantee you answers, or to promise any. We have no control over such things. But we can put your advertisement—and do—into about 6,500 grocery stores, wholesale and retail, all over Canada. This is our part. And surely 6,500 is enough.

Rate is 3 cents a word first insertion and 2 cents per word each subsequent insertion. Numbers count as words. Use a Box Number if you prefer. Five cents per insertion extra for Box Number. Make advertisements brief as a telegram.

Dear Sirs:

You've noticed, haven't you, the growing demand for better quality teas?

It is a natural reaction from the poor teas thrown on the market during the war and since. In war times people were not very critical, and a large quantity of wretchedly poor bulk tea was sold. We are finding quite a change. People who had not been using RED ROSE TEA for some little time are coming back to it. The change is more noticeable every month.

The great majority of Canadians always used good quality teas before the war. Now they have had too much of the cheap stuff,and we are as sure as we can be of anything that firms that push, from now on, good quality teas are the firms that are going to get the larger part of the tea trade.

There is an obligation on all of us, don't you think, to restore as quickly as possible this confidence in the good things of life?

A prominent place on your shelves or counter for such quality lines as RED ROSE TEA, will go a long way toward re-establishing good business in all lines.

Yours truly,

T. H. ESTABROOKS CO., LIMITED.
